US Summons Leahy From Vichy

Laval Said Hopeful Of Avoiding Break To Keep French Quiet

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP).—Ambassador William D. Leahy has been called home from Vichy for consultation, the acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, said today, because of information that the new Vichy French Government would be dominated by Pierre Laval.

President Roosevelt ordered Leahy to return immediately, Welles told his press conference, because of events of the last few days, and Laval's emergence.

However, Mrs. Leahy is convalescing from an operation and their actual trip home will be deferred until she can travel, Welles said.

The counsellor of the United States Embassy in Vichy will be left in charge there.

In answer to questions, Welles said the United States had rejected yesterday's communication from Vichy because it was a communication which had been submitted to and received the approval of German authorities in France before it was sent.

Laval Fears Break

VICHY, April 27—(AP). — The Vichy Government cleared the way for assumption of power by Pierre Laval by submitting its resignation today to Chief of State Petain and at the old Marshal's request the retiring Vice Premier, Admiral Darlan became commander in chief of land, sea and air forces.

(Reuters at London heard Vichy reports through Zurich suggesting Laval would like to maintain "friendly relations with the United States as he realizes that a break would have a disastrous effect on Laval's control.")

A British Raid?

ROME (From Italian Broadcasts), April 17—(AP). — The Italian high command claimed today that "an attempt of the enemy to make a landing on one of our islands south of Crete was unsuccessful."

No further details were given. (Presumably such an attempt would be made by British sea-borne forces, but no word of any such action has come from British sources.

(The Berlin radio version of the Rome communique called the attack an attempted "coup de main.")

NabBowmanville Hun Prisoner Across Border

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., April 17 — (AP). — A German aviator who said he escaped from the officers' war prisoners camp at Bowmanville, Ont., "several days ago" was captured by Niagara Falls police today in Whirlpool State Park along the lower Niagara gorge.

Detective Sergeant Martin Considine, one of three policemen who apprehended th aviator, said the prisoner identified himself as Erich B. Boehle, 27, of Dusseldorf, Germany, and refused to disclose how he crossed the border.

The policemen were cruising in a prowl car when they noticed Boehle.

"We were attracted by the clothing he wore," Considine said. "It consisted of a suit of flimsy gray material which looked like a uniform, and heavy black shoes. We stopped him and asked his name. He spoke English quite well."

Boehle produced documents showing he was a Norwegian flying officer of the Fifth Free Norway Flying Corps of Little Norway, Toronto, but later admitted they were forged, Considine added.

Boehle told police he was shot down over England in September, 1940, and escaped once previously into New Brunswick.

Cut Camp Wire

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., April 17 —(CP).—Two German Air Force lieutenants cut their way out of the barbed wire around the officers' war-prisoners' camp here during the night, and were the objects of a province-wide hunt this afternoon.

They were identified as Erich Boehle, 28, and Peter Krug, 21, two of more than 200 Nazi Air Force and Naval officers who arrived at the camp from Great Britain last Thursday.

The break came on the eve of the first anniversary of the escape of 30 Germans from a northwestern Ontario camp, and just three days before Hitler's 53rd birthday. It was recalled that the mass escape, setting off one of the biggest manhunts in Canadian history, was timed as a gesture of defiance on the part of the imprisoned Nazis.

Rich Burma Oil Field Set Ablaze

Sacrifice 6,000 Wells As Depleted British Units Retreat

NEW DELHI, April 17—(CP). — The rich West Burma oil field at Yenangyaung was sacrificed today to keep it out of the hands of the Japanese who unleased the fiercest onslaught of the Burma campaign in a new effort to crack the centre of the Allied line and split the Chinese 5th and 6th Armies from the British and Indian forces.

Fighting a still-stubborn holding action while the destruction by torch and dynamite was completed at Yenangyaung, the badly-outnumbered King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry fell back to the north of Magwe, gateway to the oil fields, a communique announced.

The war bulletin added that other British forces still are holding their positions in the Taungdwingyi area of the Pegu Yoma foothills, midway between the British Irrawaddy front and the Chinese Sittang river front to the east.

Despite the determined effort to hold the Allied front intact, the Japanese advance up the Irrawaddy already was exposing dangerously the west flank of the southernmost Chinese positions near Tragaya, 30 miles north of Toungoo.

The communique paid tribute to the part played in the fighting by the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, declaring "This regiment distinguished itself in this gallant action with great determination and bravery and suffered very little loss."

R.A.F. and U.S. fliers lending support to the ground forces destroyed 10 enemy aircraft in a series of sorties, with the loss of only one plane of their own. Japanese-occupied Toungoo airdrome and other points were effectively attacked.

EXTRA!

LONDON (CP)—The Moscow radio said tonight that in spite of fierce German resistance the Russions were taking "one great fortress after another" in the region of Demidovo, 18 miles northeast of Smolensk. Heavy fighting was reported also along the vital front between Lakes Ilmen and Ladoga, below Leningrad, with the Russians trying desperately to break the siege of Leningrad before the thaw turns roads into bogs and floods the rivers.

Down To Davy Jones

LONDON, April 17—(CP). — A British submarine has torpedoed and sunk a large Italian transport from a convoy in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty said the ship was one of two Italian transports which were protected by "escort vessels."

Two torpedo hits sank the vessel in seven minutes.

Fall Of Bataan Gives Japs 65,000 Captives

WASHINGTON April 17—(AP)—The United States War Department announced to-day that more than 65,000 troops and civilians, including 16 general officers, had been unreported for more than a week on Bataan Peninsula and were "presumably in the hands of the enemy."

This figure included approximately 35,000 combat troops, about 5,500 sick and wounded, a number of supply and other non-combatant troops and some 25,000 civilians, a communique reported.

No reports of casualties in the last few days of fighting have been received, the communique said but it was believed likely that losses were heavy on both sides.

There were 68 army nurses on Bataan, and all of them were evacuated to Corregidor Island on April 9 along with a relatively small number of troops, the communique said.

Still Holding Iloilo.

American-Filipino troops were reported fighting off an attack on Iloilo, city of Panay Island.

A United States War Department communique yesterday said Japanese troops landing from eight transports were engaged by American-Filipino forces defending Iloilo and Capiz, the main Panay cities. The Japanese were estimated to number about 8,000. They came ashore under cover of naval gunfire and air bombardment.

It was considered likely the Japanese were depending on destroyers for naval support in the landing. The Iloilo River is too shallow for vessels drawing more than 15 feet.

The War Department communique gave no details of the fighting. It was not announced whether Panay was the site of the air base used by the American bombing force which attacked Japanese Manila installations in a flight from Australia.

Draft Setup At Ottawa Meet In May

Premier King, F.D.R. Arrange Parley, Plan 2-Year Program

WASHINGTON, April 17—(CP).—Enlargement of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan operations in Canada and inclusion within its scope of all United Nations with air training underway on the North American continent will be planned at a conference to be held in Ottawa early in May.

Arrangements for the conference were made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt during the conversations while Mr. King was a guest at the White House Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. King told The Canadian Press this morning, when the official announcement was made from the White House, that it would be "one of the most important conferences of the war" and that chief delegates of the interested countries would be of ministerial rank.

F.D.R. To Come Later

America's delegates to the conference have not been named, but Mr. King said he was quite sure President Roosevelt would be unable to attend in person.

"But I have not yet given up hope that Mr. Roosevelt will come to Ottawa soon and possibly before the present session of Parliament is over," Mr. King said.

Co-ordination rather than integration of the air training operations on this continent would be the objective, Mr. King said, and he instanced Norway and China as two of the United Nations with air training operations now established in North America which would be included in the enlarged plan, along with the United States and the British Commnowealth.

Norway has an air school in Toronto and there is a Chinese air school in the United States. The way will be open for any others of the United Nations which might contemplate air schools on this continent to become a part of the co-ordinated effort.

Since the establishment of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan in December, 1939, Canada has been a central figure in the Allied war effort in the air, Mr. King said.

When this proposed enlargement of the scheme and of its scope is completed, Canada will become

Another Daughter

VICHY, France, April 17—(AP).—The German authorities announced today that 35 hostages had been shot in occupied France in reprisal for attacks against German occupying troops. A first group of 15 was shot April 14, according to a German announcement published at Calais. This followed alleged attacks on railroad lines March 25. A second group of 20 was shot the same day for attacks against German soldiers at Bruay, Mericourt and near Lens.

1,500,000 Nazis Kept Busy By R.A.F. Raids

LONDON, April 17 —(CP)—More than 1,500,000 German soldiers and civilians are "fully engaged in defence against the British air offensive conducted by the bomber and fighter commands," the air ministry news service said today.

"In effect," the news service said, "the bomber and fighter commands are compelling the enemy to maintain a long and purely defensive western front."

At least 750,000 Germans are being kept busy in passive defence — as wardens, fire watchers, demolition and bomb-disposal squads and ambulance and hospital staffs, it was estimated. Another 750,000, virtually all regular soldiers or airmen, are said to be engaged in the immense German active defence system.

A searchlight belt 200 miles long and 20 miles deep in places, with batteries of 10 to 20 searchlights every five miles, was said to be stretched across northwestern Germany. In addition every large German city has its own searchlights.

"Anti-aircraft guns are in their thousands," the news service added.

"Between them the guns and searchlights keep upwards of 600,000 troops busy in the west. At least 20,000 men are needed for the observer corps, 15,000 for air raid communications, 20,000 of the most skilled for night fighter squadrons, and 60,000 for headquarters and administrative staffs."

Besides this diversion of German strength, the news service said, R.A.F. fighter sweeps over northern France and the Low Countries "are responsible for keeping half of the fighter strength of the German air force away from the Russian front."

Things Beginning To Break And In Right Direction War Secretary Encourages

Just Bolstering Key Points Of Defences Many Scattered Far Out In World, Making Sure Resources Are Uninterrupted

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP).—War Secretary Stimson said today that "so far as the army is concerned we are getting pretty near to the stage of being ready for an offensive, however difficult it may be."

In a review of American military progress since Pearl Harbor, given in general terms at his press conference, Stimson said:

"Things are beginning to move, and to move in the right direction.

"I am now more than ever convinced that we are going to get on the offensive and to do so at the earliest practicable moment."

He stressed that preparations for offensive warfare in a conflict which involved the entire globe was a long and difficult process.

"Before we can lead this nation into a long sustained offensive we must be as sure as possible that certain key points in our armor are as safe as possible," the War Secretary said.

"We must make sure that our resources and manufactures are protected against any interruption which would hold up or damage our offence.

"And when it is a world war with powerful enemies attacking us all around the globe, our key points of defence run far out into distant quarters of the world where some friendly nation is holding a post that is vital to us. That is what we have been trying to do during these difficult months and the task is not yet finished."

Soviets Sink 4th Transport In Barents Sea

MOSCOW, April 17—(AP).—Russian naval forces have sunk a 10,000-ton German transport in the Barents Sea, the fourth this week in that arm of the Arctic Ocean above North Cape, the Soviet communique announced today.

Land fighting on the Central and Leningrad front drew special mention.

Following an announcement that more tha 2,000 Germans were killed in 48 hours of fighting on the Leningrad front, the Soviet Information Bureau said, "Booty captured includes a number of machine guns and trench mortars, a large number of rifles and automatic rifles, and a considerable quantity of ammunition."

Capture of 34 machine guns was noted in an engagement on the Central front in which the bureau said "the bodies of about 200 enemy dead were left on the field."

Forty German soldiers assembled in their headquarters at Staraya Russa, south of Lake Ilmen, to receive iron crosses were reported by the Moscow radio to have been killed by guerillas who blew up the building.

Nazis Complain Of Mud

BERLIN, (from German broadcasts), April 17.—(AP)—The German high command today reported a powerful Russian attack on the central sector of the eastern front, but claimed it had been repulsed.

Berlin broadcasts have ceased to speak of a "spring offensive" and commentators regard June as the probable month of the Germans' greatest effort. References picked up by London listeners include:

"German troops have to fight in a sea of mire."

"German troops are wading up to their belts in mud."

Russian advices received in London said Soviet forces had captured a large fortified position in the vicinity of Staraya Russa, on the northwestern front and another on the highway between Dorogobuzh and Smolensk, west of Moscow.

See Vichy Giving JapsMadagascar

NEW YORK, April 17—(AP).—Madagascar, once the haunt of pirates who laid a heavy toll on rich cargoes sailing between England and the East Indies, again may serve as a raiding base should the Japanese seize the island.

In their hands, the Axis would have a vital naval base on the western end of the Indian ocean and thus multiply the complications of getting the Allied armies and material to the Middle East.

A Japanese mission was reported to be on the island more than a month ago negotiating for naval and air bases. London sources at that time remarked that since the fall of Singapore the importance of Madagascar, fourth largest island in the world, had doubled.

Japanese control would make it comparatively easy to cut the supply lines which run past the cape of Good Hope and the strategic Mozambique channel, which separates the island from the African mainland to the west.

While representatives of Vichy have insisted that no commitments have been made to Japan, there has been a feeling among the Allies that the same procedure might be followed as in Indo-China.

The Canadians effectively bombed docks and harbor installations in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire.

Generalcy For McNaughton

Promotion Held Certain For Handling Army

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, April 17.—(CP)—Promotion of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton to the rank of full general is considered a certainty now that his command overseas is being raised from the status of an army corps to that of an army.

The overseas commander will then be the first Canadian soldier ever to hold the rank of general while commanding a Canadian force in the field, although he actually will be the fifth Canadian to attain to the title, according to available records.

The rank of general goes with the command of an army which consists of two or more corps, just as the rank of lieutenant-general goes with command of a corps which consists of two or more divisions and that of major-general goes with command of a division.

Occasionally, however, the rank is conferred as a mark of honor on an officer's retirement from the service. Two other Canadians became full generals in this way while two earned the rank by climbing the scale of promotion in the British regular army.

Sir Arthur Currie who commanded the Canadian corps in the First Great War, served with the rank of lieutenant-general but was promoted to general on his return to Canada in 1919. He died in 1933.

Britons Demand Combined General Staff

Blame No Co-ordination As Lack Of Air Aid Brings Series Of Disasters

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 17, — (AP)—Agitation for a combined general staff which would integrate Britain's three fighting services as one gigantic combat team is growing in influential London circles considering reserves in the Pacific war and successes in European coastal raids.

Observers said Britain is near the end of fresh manpower resources and the obvious answer is to employ more efficiently those already in the army, navy and Royal Air Force.

Commando thrusts against German continental bases are cited by informed sources as a model in their use of the three arms.

The London visit of Gen. George Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, and the appointment of Lord Louis Mounbatten, adventurous cousin of the King, to lead the invasion-trained Commandos focus attention on the British-American role in battles of 1942.

British naval losses in the Bay of Bengal following the fall of Singapore have aroused uneasiness in the House of Commons over an alleged lack of co-ordination in land, sea and air operations.

This is echoed by The Times. It pleaded editorially for a combined general staff to outline British strategy as simple logic which might reassure the country that risks assumed in the Indian Ocean "were not taken haphazardly, but were organically part of an articulated plan for the conduct of the whole campaign in Asiatic lands and oceans."

The Times declares that lack of air support had accounted for a "succession of military and naval disasters," adding:

"The conviction that something is fundamentally lacing in co-ordination of the three fighting services has steadily gained ground in the present war and was never more widely or firmly held than now."

The blueprint for an over-all staff was first outlined in an article written for the Times by Sir Edward Grigg, former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for War, who was dropped from office in the ministerial reorganization on March 4. It drew support from Viscount Swinton and Lord Hankey, former Cabinet members, and Cmdr. Robert Bower, member of Parliament.

Observers said the largest barrier between it and acceptance is a strong feeling of senior officers that autonomous services should be maintained.

The three chief staff confer daily. Prime Minister Churchill has stated that the chiefs of staff seldom disagree.

Sir Edward declared, however, that "if this is so then the recommendations must often be a matter of compromise, the lowest common denominator between incompatible ideas."

"This is certainly not a method which will win wars," he wrote.

He proposed appointment of a professional fighting man to:

1. Present plans of the combined general staff to a chief of staffs committee and thereafter to the Cabinet.

2. See that strategic plans take full account of what production and transportation authorities can do.

3. Arrange, above all, that the balance is maintained so commanders-in-chief in the various theatres can use all three services wherever necessary as instruments of a single plan.

As yet no specific officer has been advanced for such a task.

MacArthur In Full Charge

Stimson Surprised Over "Tempest In Teapot"

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP).—War Secretary Henry Stimson said today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur is in complete charge of the "strategic direction" of the United Nations' war effort in the southwest Pacific and the "practical co-ordination" of the campaign in that area to defeat the Japanese invaders.

The War Secretary told his press conference that Gen. MacArthur's authority had been fully agreed to by the Australians and the Netherlands and the agreement embodied in a former directive signed April 3.

Stimson said he was "frankly surprised" at statements credited to MacArthur's spokesman in Australia that MacArthur's authority had not been fully defined.

He termed "A tempest in a teapot" what he described as a flurry resulting from the statement.

"Stimson said MacArthur had the same type of command as exercised previously by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell in the southwest Pacific and had the same general powers in the area as granted in another area in 1918 to Marshal Foch.

Stimson said whether New Zealand was included in MacArthur's command was a "military secret."

GERMANS HIT BACK AT BRITAIN AFTER HEAVY R.A.F. POUNDINGS

Bomb South Coast Town 2 Hrs.

British Thunder Anew Across France Over 400 In Raids

LONDON, April 17—(CP).—Wave after wave of Royal Air Force planes streamed across the channel today after overnight attacks in which bombers and fighters ranged occupied France and Holland in the face of bad weather.

The night attack kept alive a virtual non-stop aerial assault which had been going on for more than 70 hours when the day raiders hammered northern France this morning.

A large force of enemy bombers made a determined attack early today on a town on the English south coast.

The first large-scale raid on a British city in several months came on the first anniversary of Germany's most wanton attack of the war on London, when 1,000 persons were killed.

Today's attack lasted about two hours. German bombers flew over in successive waves, but were met by fierce anti-aircraft fire which kept them at such a height that few explosives fell within the city itself. Many bombs fell on the beaches and other open lands where they did no damage.

Rock Sub Bases.

The Nazi submarine base at Lorient and the docks at Le Havre were the targets of the R.A.F. night bombers, and enemy airfields in Holland and Northern France of the night fighters, the Air Ministry said.

Two bombers were lost, but the Germans also lost a bomber which was intercepted in the attack on one

Expect Laval To Provoke Sea Incident

Likely To Use Fleet To Hit De Gaulle Try To Take Syria

LONDON, April 17—(CP).—The United States' reaction to Pierre Laval's rise to power in Vichy may be the test of France's future, a Free French spokesman declared today.

"The French people," he declaed, "are waiting for the United States' stand and, by it, will make their own decisions.

"If Laval were placed in the same category as other quislings and branded by the United States as a tool of Berlin, the French people would be forced to take a stand either with Germany or the United States—and there is little doubt what their decision would be."

One of Laval's first acts, this source predicted, will be to send send French warships into the Mediterranean and Atlantic to try to provoke an incident with British naval forces in order to drive France into war on the Nazi side because he "would not dare to hand over the French fleet to Hitler outright . . . the people ould not stand for it."

By WADE WERNER

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—The United States is expected to announce today how far it will go in breaking off relations with the Vichy Government headed by pro-Nazi Pierre Laval.

It was made clear by an authoritative source yesterday that no attempt would be made to maintain normal diplomatic relations with the collaborationist Laval government. The only question remaining was whether Ambassador William D. Leahy merely would be recalled from his Vichy post, leaving relations with that government the same as they were with Germany before the United States entered the war, or whether there would be a complete rupture.

Hinging on the outcome, is the possiblity of a shooting war between the French and Allied navies.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, yesterday rejected the latest communication from Vichy — a verbal notice transmitted by the French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, refusing to accept an American note condemning "that small handful of Frenchmen" who would play Hitler's game.

Meanwhile it became known the United States is watching closely for Laval's first move in the sphere of grand strategy. A highly competent source said there is evidence that Laval is planning to throw the French fleet into a campaign to recapture French possessions now in the hands of Free French forces.

On a Nazi Run Campaign

He would not turn the fleet over to Germany, but employ it as an independent French force in campaigns dove-tailing with Hitler's wishes. It is expected he might attempt to drive the Free French and

Laurier Returns To Mines Post —Reconsiders

TORONTO, April 17—(CP).—Hon. Robert Laurier was back in the Ontario cabinet as Minister of Mines today after a 70-day absence.

Announcement that the Liberal member for Ottawa East had reconsidered his resignation of February 5 and returned to the cabinet was made last night by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, whose support of Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen in a York South federal by-election campaign was the reason for Mr. Laurier's resignation.

Mr. Laurier attended a meeting of the cabinet yesterday and later Mr. Hepburn said his mines minister's resignation never had been accepted. The premier said he had asked that that resignation stand in abeyance, because "I wanted Mr. Laurier to reconsider."

Mr. Hepburn said that at the time of his resignation Mr. Laurier was in poor health, but had recovered "to the point that he is able to resume his duties."

"I have urged him to do so because of the critical days ahead and because of his prominent position as the French language representative in the government."

The by-election in which the Ontario Premier supported Mr. Meighen was won by J. W. Noseworthy, C.C.F

Labor Minister Peter Heenan had been acting mines minister since Mr. Laurier handed in his resignation.

Session Sees Cabinet Resign In Petain's Swan Song; France Glum Under Laval

Anti-Collaborationists Active In Paris; Italy Sees Herself Cheated In New Shuffle, Calls Loudly For Savoy

VICHY, April 17—(AP).—Admiral Jean Darlan has agreed to take command of French land, sea and air forces and has been designated as heir of Marshal Petain as chief of state, a communique announced today.

It said the Ministers in the present Cabinet had handed their resignations to the 85-year-old chief of state.

The communique was issued after a 30-minute final session of the Cabinet, presided over by Petain at Pavi"on Sevigne, his official residence.

Reports in London said the meeting was Petain's swan song as presiding officer of the Vichy Cabinet. Although it had been presumed that he would remain as a figurehead in it even though the actual power went to Pie re Laval, these reports said that Laval, as Premier, would replace him.

A Gloomy France

BERNE, April 17 — (AP). — Conquered France embarked glumly today on a new intimacy with the Axis, waiting to learn from collaborationist Pierre Laval just how fully her lot has been cast with her conquerors.

All that the French people knew so far of the behind-closed-doors transaction which left old Marshal Petain only as a figurehead chief of state and delivered actual rule to Laval as chief of the Vichy government was that the new regime was ready to take over.

By his selection of ministers and the number of portfolios he concentates in his own hands, Frenchmen expected to know how far they had been committed to partnership with Germany even before any statement by Laval on the problems of their unhappy country.

Laval, whose record of affection for the Axis reaches back to pre-Munich days, is understood to have taken the powerful post of minister of interior and reports reaching here from Vichy said he apparently intended to exert direct authority over several key ministries.

Little Love For Laval.

Reports of violence and the silence of 2,000 onlookers as Laval arrived at the Vichy Government offices yesterday indicated the reception the French were giving the swarthy new leader whose pro-Axis tendencies previously had caused his ejection from Vichy's high councils.

Anti-collaborationists are said to be on the march again in Paris where, it is reported, Nazi occupation authorities have made mass arrests of demonstrators in the past few days and executed 25 more prisoners. Three forest fires of mysterious origin are said to have broken out, one in the historic Fontainebleau Forest near Paris, and 40 German soldiers were reported killed in a train derailment.

The emphasis on the Berlin-Vichy moves have caused evident Italian misgivings over Italy's share in any benefits. One reaction was revival of the cry in the Fascist

Ten Men A Day Are Seeking To Join Rangers

With another week of recruiting for the Prince of Wales Rangers drawing to a close, officials counted approximately fifty applicants for the week up to a late hour this morning. This represents an average of ten men a day. It has been found that the larger number of applications are found on the first days of the week and towards the latter part of the week, the number drops off. Recruiting officials are expecting another splurge of applicants on Monday. Four men were taken on strength yesterday while eight promotions among the ranks are announced.

Second Lieut. C. E. G. "Cy" Whatley of the Prince of Wales Rangers reported today at the Canadian Officers' Training School at Brockville to take up a qualifying course. Lieut. Enumerators Are Completing Work

The exact text of the plebiscite ballot is: "Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the method of raising men for military service?"

There are two spaces for your vote: "Yes" and "No"; and you mark your choice with the usual "X".

Several of the enumerators told the Examiner they had completed their work of calling at houses, and had only some clerical details left.

"People asked me what it really meant?" one of the list compilers said. "My attitude was neutral. I didn't think it was part of my duty to try to explain things. We can't take sides in a political election, and that is the way I want along in those rounds. A few people seemed not to know clearly what they were being called upon to decide. But they were not many in my district."

Trouble With Identification

Their escape was discovered about eight o'clock this morning but their identity was not established until several hours afterwards. Camp officials had to take roll call, explaining it was necessary to compare the prisoners with photographs to make certain of the correct identity of the two who escaped.

"You can be sure the prisoners are of no assistance in the check-up," an official said.

It was not known where Krug and Boehle obtained the tools to cut through the wire. They got through high, single strands first, then through or over the rolled barbed wire of some width that is the final protective barrier on the grounds.

Little more than a month ago two German airmen — Frederick Oeser and Bidward Fidieg—escaped from the camp but were captured the next day at nearby Oshawa. Oeser was found by an instructor on the field of No. 20 Elementary Flying Training School and he told camp officers he had hoped to steal a plane for a getaway.

The two escaped this morning brought to 31 the number from Canadian camps altogether since the first German prisoners were lodged in Canadian camps.

"more and more of central importance to the general united effort to defeat aggression," he said.

Leader In Air Training.

"Canada has led the way right along in air training and graduates of the schools there are fighting on every front," he said. "This conference will bring a new world aspect to Canada's central position in the great world struggle."

It was the opinion of himself and many with whom he conferred here that once the Axis powers are defeated the United Nations will have the responsibiliy of policing the world and that policing would be done largely by air, Mr. King said.

The fact gave an added significance to the work which has been centralized in Canada for the British commonwealth for the past two years and which now will be enlarged.

LAGEFIELD

Anglicans Hold Informal Parish Supper

LAKEFIELD, April 17.—(ENS).—An indication of the community swing back to closer ties and the days when folks were 'more friendly,' a homey informal parish supper was enjoyed Thursday evening in St. John's Anglican hall.

Some eighty parish members sat down around the tables in the historic, picturesque little stone building now creeping near the century mark. There were no speeches, the rector, Rev. S. A. R. Wood, opening the gathering with the Doxology and the next ninety minutes were an enjoyable session of banqueting with the discussion ranging over tire shortage, spring plowing, family life and community war work.

The Women's Auxiliary catered under the presidency of Mrs. S. E. White with Miss Amy Watson convener and a committee of Mrs. C. Stenner, cashier, Mrs. Ernie Waldon, Mrs. William Armstrong, Mrs. Will Webdale, assisted by Mrs. J. Twist, Mrs. T. Junkin, Mrs. Waler Chappell and Mrs. S. E.. White.

Somewhat of an initial nature it is planned to hold another gathering of the same sort in the fall.

A School Party.

About sixty members of Lakefield's 'younger set' enjoyed a social evening in the Memoial Hall on Wednesday. Musical games under the capable supervision of the Rev. George S. Kelly, later assisted by Mr. Lloyd Minchal of the High school staff, provided real entertainment for several hours.

Lunch was served by the 'Fifth Formers' of the High school, after which dancing was enjoyed until midnight. Proceeds of the evening's fun were turned over to the junior Red Cross.

Mrs. James Smith, of Montreal, is spending the week with her danghter, Mrs. Archie Neilson and Mr. Neilson,

New Instructions For Knitted Goods

HAVELOCK, April 17.—(ENS)—All Red Cross conveners across Canada have received instructions regarding new knitting quotas, and it is of greatest importance that knitters adhere to the rules laid down. The present quota period is from May 1 to Sept. 1 and only specified articles are to be made with this supply of yarn; as there is only a limited quantity for each branch and nothing else will be accepted. Conservation of elastic and buttons wherever possible is urged by using draw-strings in tops of pyjama pants and making the pyjama coats in the pull-over head style.

T. P. Lancaster expressed his regrets at the salvage collection having to be postponed from last Saturday owing to the snow storm, but much had been picked up already and a complete clean-up will be made this Saturday, when 12 High school boys will assist the truck drivers. He also advised the secretary and treasurer to forward the invoices covering all local purchases, on which there will be an 8 p.c. sales tax refund.

Mr. Lancaster read an item regarding the prisoners of war, in which it stated tha these parcels were a direct God send to the boys, and already 120,000 parcels had been acknowledged.

Mrs. Roche presided for the business part of the meeting, which opened with the usual peace prayer. There were 27 ladies present. Two qnilts were completed, four quilts bound and a large amount of cutting done. Six beautiful quilts were brought in from the Belmont Institute and gratefully received.

Enquiries have been received from Montreal for a car of chicken. There are no fresh turkeys arriving and storage stocks of this kind of poultry are moving slowly.

Carriers Sold $485 In Stamps In Past Week

Though not a record week in War Savings Stamps sales by the Examiner Carrier force, the past week produced a total of $485.00, still considerably over the average weekly sales since the campaign started. The high salesman for the week is Jack Harris, of 239 Princess street, whose name has appeared so many times in these notes. He deserves special mention because of his consistency in selling a large quantity of War Savings Stamps each week without let-up.

Since last November 22 he has sold $576.75, a splendid contribution to the War Effort for any individual sales man. The south end of the city, where Jack's route is located, has been very generous to the Examiner Carriers. In fact, this section of the city has contributed perhaps one-third of the total sold by all Examiner boys and girls since the campaign was instituted.

Jack Harris' friends will be pulling for him to win the gold Trophy for the month of April. He is away to a good start with the winning total for the week of $97.00. Next in order is the second prize winner of last month and the Trophy winner for February, George Clark, who is again in the groove with another $58.25.

Another familiar name, Keith Orde, just presented with the Examiner Trophy for March, is in the money again with a further $25.25. Bill Patterson of 629 Rubidge street is a newcomer to these columns and starts in with a weekly sale of $22. Victor Doughty is next with $21.75, and Donald Pagett, January's first prize winner, with $20.00. A young lady from the west end, Nancy Leith, making another steady contribution to the funds, comes through with her usual good week's effort of $19.75. Next is Wilbert Edgar with a good sale of $16.00 and Grant Finnie with $13.00. Ray Douglas and his brother Tom again made the grade with a splendid sale of $11.00 and $4.00 respectively. The south end again is the locale of these boys' routes. Wellie Borland is here again with $9.75 and close behind is Douglas Burrows of the north end with an even $9.00. Weldon Fanning has $8.00, Adrian Langhorne $7.00, Gerry Field $7.00, "Bud" Eakins $6.75, Alan Sage and Gerald Rose $6.00, Lewes Russell $5.75 and Bob Outram another $5.00.

Many smaller amounts were turned in by various carriers who are working hard evey week selling War Savings Stamps on their routes.

A.R.P. Organization Needs Light Trucks

Planning of Air Raid Precautions has been making strides of progress gratifying to the sponsors of this work, but City Engineer Parsons remarked this morning that the volunteering of light delivery trucks has been largely overlooked.

Divisional headquarters have not yet been located, Mr. Parsons said, and that has been a part of the cause of the delay in organizing the truck department of A.R.P. Owners are requested to call at the city hall and offer their trucks as part of the preparations for whatever emergency might have to be faced.

A new course in basic A.R.P. training begins May 3 and 4. Further announcement about it will be made later, but it may be pointed out that the number of volunteers for fire fighting is not up to needs and expectations.

Final lectures of the present course will be given Sunday afternoon and Monday night on transportation by Mr. Parsons and Laurie Mitchell, and a public utilities service talks by R. L. Dobbin and Capt. J. H. Eastwood.

Prospective truck drivers are reminded that A.R.P. arm bands are issued only to those who take the basic course, and it is hoped that the new course extending five weeks will bring out a large class.

Just Test Assaults

LONDON, April 17.—(CP)—Qualified observers said today the Axis attacks on the Russian front so far this spring had been only test forays and expressed the belief that the Germans would not attempt to unloose a full scale offensive on the central front until about May 15 when the weather and terrain conditions will be more favorable.

Defective Flue Endangers Entire Family

HASTINGS, April 17.—(ENS).—Quick thinking on the part of June Scriver, 16, of Hastings, probably saved her mother, Mrs. Otter Scriver and seven younger children from suffocation, at 4.30 Wednesday moning.

Awakened by the smoke swirling in her bedroom, June opened several windows and quickly summoned her mother, who was sleeping downstairs. She in turn summoned Earl Clarke, a neighbour, and together they smothered the stove fire with salt and sulphur. A defective chimney caused the smoke, but no other damage resulted. Otter Scriver, father of the children, is employed at Peterborough and was not at home at the time.

"If June hadn't awakened when she did I think it might have been just too bad," Mrs. Scriver told the Examiner.

Cheese Board Retains Weekly Sales

CAMPBELLFORD, April 17.—(ENS).—A move to cut the number of meetings to two or even one a month was made by members of the Campbellford Cheese Board at the inaugural meeting held in the board room of the St. Lawrence Hotel here last night. The suggestion came from George S. Vanvolkenburg, president and salesman for Woodland Cheese and Butter Company, and a former official in the County Association. He felt there was little practical value in from thirty to forty salesmen coming from over a radius of thirty miles every week just to sell cheese when the price is fixed. One or perhaps two meetings every month would be sufficient in his opinion to deal with any essential problems arising from the sale of cheese.

Agreeing with this viewpoint Harold B. Wood of Trent River declared he had felt for some time that something should be done in this connection, however the feeling of the meeting was that so long as the price was not yet established it would not be wise to adopt any change and this was incorporated in a motion which said in effect that they would meet weekly until further notice. An effort to have the hour of the meetings moved ahead to eight o'clock was made by one of the buyers but got no support from the farmer salesmen, one of whom made the remark that changing the hour would mean he would have to milk at either four in the afternoon or when he got home at eleven o'clock at night, and he didn't think the cows would like this.

The suggestion made by Canada Packers' buyer J. Bradbury of Peterborough got a much warmer reception. He thinks the buyers who get the best cheese should pay more money for it.

"I shouldn't pay the same price for 92 scoring cheese as the buyer sitting next to me who gets those made by another factory all 94s." This was a question which all were agreed might well be put into practice after the war (when Federal bonuses become a thing of the past).

Winter Production.

P. Murphy of Enterprise Factory told the cheese men there had been a large amount of cheese made during the winter months and so far as he knew, everyone was satisfied with the price they got. Like several others at the meeting he thought it might be a couple of weeks before the new price was established, and he added his voice to the many raised against having to wait so long before knowing what their product would bring this season. Twenty cents plus the Ontario bonus and Federal premium would make a fair price in his opinion.

The box problem was discussed by Dairy Instructor J. A. Murray, who told the gathering that in his district 17 of the 21 factories were back at work. From a recent survey of the district he concluded that the box situation was "a little better," but warned makers not to let their anxiety get their cheese shipped force them into using boxes with green heads. Mr. Murray passed out a timely hint to all factories which had overlooked the matter of renewing the licences. To any that have not got them he said now was the time to obtain them. With regard to the suggestion to sell cheese on a straight quality basis producers in this district would have nothing to worry about. The average score for the Campbellford district last season was 93.475, so the producers would certainly hold their own if and when the change came.

The retiring president, Earl McAdam, presided for the opening of the meeting and before turning the chair over to J. A. Murray, who presided for the election of officers, he expressed his appreciation for the co-operation he had received both from salesmen and buyers.

S. A. Maguire, secretary-treasurer of the board, gave what he called an interim report revealing that on the $203 annual banquet last fall the board had come within $17.95 of breaking even. A. J. Meyers moved a vote of thanks to the retiring president, and others to address the meeting were W. H. Bailey, W. D. Bedell, A. G. Thompson, J. D. Mills, George Elliott, Roy Walker. In the election Hector Arnold, salesman-president of Crow Bay Factory moved up from 1st vice-president to president for the year 1942, and the other officers named were: 1st vice-president, Arthur Orr of Ormonde Factory; 2nd vice-president, Fred Barnum, Rylstone secretary-treasurer, S. A. Maguire; executive committee, W. Weir, Beaver, F. Peake, Empire, H. B. Wood, Trent River; auditors, J. A. Murray and Marshall West.

Racketeering On Large Scale

The charge that "racketeering on a scale never before known in Canada" is going on and is controlled by a man living in Toronto, was made by Col. George Drew, leader of the Opposition, in the Provincial Legislature, last Monday. It is possible that Col. Drew may be misinformed in matters of detail, but we do not believe that he would make such a statement unless he were entirely sure of his basic facts. The charge is a very serious one and we should like to hear more about it and would like to know what can be done and what is going to be done about it.

According to Col. Drew a man living not far from Queen's Park controls a widespread gambling organization which operates in the suburbs of the capital city; he is assisted by "armed thugs" who were forced to flee from the U.S. Furthermore, Col. Drew charges that large sums of this man's illegal gains are paid in income tax, so that the Government may be said to benefit indirectly from his nefarious business.

The Premier and the Attorney-General both took part in the debate which followed the charges made by the Opposition Leader, and neither one of them denied the truth of what he said. They held, however, that the Province had no power to act in the matter as the communities in which the gambling is said to take place have their own police forces and are supposed to deal themselves with matters of this kind. This is scarcely a satisfactory answer; if a racket exists it must be broken up, and if the job is too big for local police forces or if they do not know what is going on, it is the duty of the Province to interfere. We cannot believe that any insurmountable difficulty stands in their way.

The public will expect to hear more about this, and will not be content with evasions or shifting of responsibility. If Col. Drew is wrong, let us hear about it. If he is right, let us have some action in the matter. A charge of this seriousness cannot be permitted to drop without a satisfactory explanation.

Spring Again

Not long ago we warned our readers against laying too much store by the signs of Spring which were then discernible. Not that we wanted to damp anybody's spirits, of course, but simply because our own experience with the vernal season has made us wary. Flora, we have found, is a thoroughly unreliable and flibbertigibbet young person who has stood us up many and many a time. We know too much about her to be fooled by any of her melting moods.

Boastful though it may appear to draw attention to it, we were quite right. The seeming early Spring was a trick, and in our opinion, a very dirty trick. The warm winds and blue skies were followed by as nasty a late snowstorm as we remember, and those gullible souls who had cast aside their winter coats and mufflers to greet the Spring were well soaked and frozen for their pains. That is Spring all over; she likes nothing better than to set a booby-trap for her admirers and then laugh at them.

We are now confident, however, that Spring has actually come. Don't ask us how we know. We just know.

Statesmen And Business Men

From time to time we hear it said that Canada's war effort would be greatly improved if the government of the country were in the hands of a group of business men. Frankly, we do not believe that this is so; the abilities which are required to run a business successfully and those which are needed to run a country at war or at peace with even a measure of success are widely divergent. We were interested, therefore, to find some remarks on this subject in the Victoria Times, written by Bruce Hutchison, who recently published an admirable book on Canada. This is what he said:

"The job of statescraft in war is to give the people a lead, to hold them on a line. It is not a job for a businessman. He should be employed under the statesman to handle the details of administration but on top he is likely to prove a disaster. Britain was governed by businessmen almost continuously from about 1920 to the fall of France in 1940. It was only when it found a politician like Mr. Churchill that it began to feel safe. We have no Churchill but we shall not find him, I fancy, either in the army or at a directors' meeting."

Quite so. A country is not a business and cannot be run like one. Clamor for business men in high governmental positions recalls the demand in the United States for "a good sound business administration" which resulted in the election of Calvin Coolidge. Business men are experts, admirable in administering schemes and in preventing waste and complication in administrative machinery. But countries need statesmen.

A statesman is a rare creature, combining the talents of a first-rate actor with the intuitions of the Oracle of Delphi; he must be princely, commanding the admiration of his followers, but he must know how to unbend, and to whom; he should have a good general knowledge of history and a reasonable knowledge of political ideologies other than his own; he should be able to see both sides of a question without showing it; he should have the hide of a rhinoceros and yet be strongly sensitive to atmosphere; and above all he should regard his country as a lover regards his mistress. Such men do appear once in a while; both Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier filled the bill. There are always plenty of good business men; statemen, like poets, are born, and somewhat more rarely.

Let's Tell The States

It is with approval and some hope that we hear Mr. King's declaration that he means to "sell" Canada to the United States. It is high time. At present there are many unfavorable rumors, many misrepresentations, and a few downright lies about Canada being circulated in the U.S. by Axis agents whose full-time job is to sow seeds of dissent and mistrust among the United Nations. Somebody should see that our friends to the south hear the truth, and we hope that Mr. King's remark means that a proper bureau of information will be set up in Washington or New York.

We Canadians are inclined to fumble anything which looks like publicity for our country. Our politicians seem to have no notion of what publicity is, even for themselves. We make the mistake of imagining that all civilized peoples everywhere have heard about us and are deeply interested in our doings; as a matter of fact anyone who has lived for any length of time in Great Britain or the United States — the two countries most likely to be interested in us—will tell you that the ignorance of Canadian affairs and the lack of desire for any further knowledge in those quarters is startling and somewhat humiliating.

But why should we expect anything else? Do we ever do anything to interest other countries in us? We do not. It is not as though we did not do many very interesting things here in Canada; it is rather that we expect other countries to be as interested in us as we are in ourselves, which is absurd. True, we have of late years bestirred ourselves to some extent to attract tourists, but Canada is something more than a tourist resort, and it would be sensible to dispell the idea prevalent in the States that we are a nation of hillbillies and Indian guides.

This matter becomes even more pressing in wartime. We are doing a man-size job among the United Nations and, although we do not want to be patted on the head for it, we cannot allow our great neighbor to be abused on this point by Axis troublemakers. We need an organization in the States to keep the record straight.

This does not mean that we want an office in the States to send out mimeographed ballyhoo to the press about our war effort; such confections find their way unerringly into the wastepaper baskets of all editors who do not keep them to scribble on. We want a representative with some prestige who will be able to get to the right people to spike rumors and untangle misunderstandings before they are spread abroad through the land by journalists who fail to check their facts. We want somebody whom Americans might conceivably invite to speak upon important occasions, and who would not disgrace us when he did so. We want somebody, in fact, to do all the things for Canada in the U. S. which our official Minister, by reason of his position, is prevented from doing. We need such a liason officer badly, and we hope that Mr. King is going to do something about it.

Spare Our Ears, Or Else—

Our valued contemporary, the Brantford Expositor, recently published an editorial complaining of the slovenly speech and faulty grammar which are so unfortunately common in this country, and to form a basis for its argument it gives an account of something which it heard on the radio. We reprint this part of the editorial:

"A speaker, presumably a product of Canadian schools, gave a radio talk. In point of subject matter it was good. It was also noted for some consistent and, to the listener, aggravating peculiarities of mispronunciation. 'Mobilize,' for instance, became 'moobilize.' Less excusable were 'git' for 'got,' 'thot' for 'thought,' 'brot' for 'brought' and so on. 'Unnerstan' turned out, upon reflection, to be 'understand,' while 'Cana' was, presumably, 'Canada.' The speaker missed 'Tronna,' probably because he had no occasion to refer to the Queen City. But 'rebilling' may have been intended for 'rebuilding.' In short, what might have been an acceptable address was rendered unacceptable by sloppy pronunciation which had no support in either spelling, dialect or necessity."

We have heard speeches like that, too. The radio throws every fault of diction into striking prominence, and an ugly tone of voice may undo a speaker's argument in two minutes. How often we twirl the dial after a few seconds at the feet of one of these crow-voiced Gamaliels! Good speakers, who hope to hold their audiences, do not put our ears to any such trial. Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt can neither one be charged with over-nicety of diction or grandiose elocution, but they speak clearly and pleasantly, and they use a variety of tones; as a result we can listen to them for a half an hour or more, taking in what they have to say, without wishing that they would stop to gargle or go back to school for another year's coaching in grammar.

Canadian speech can be pleasant to listen to. The characteristic accent of the Canadian is a mixture of Scottish and Irish, somewhat flattened by proximity to the U.S. and with an agreeable lilt of its own. Good speech is to be heard in the Maritimes and in many regions of the West; it is chiefly in Ontario that dropped syllables and maimed vowels are heard. We ought to do something about it, and probably we should begin in our Normal Schools; school teachers are obviously the people to give a lead in better speech.

A man who elects to speak to his fellows on a subject of any importance must have something to say, but that alone will not do; he must know how to say it. He should know how to speak clearly and pleasantly, without affectation. And when we say affectation we mean not only that he should avoid over-refinement, but that he should avoid bad grammar and slovenliness of speech assumed to prove that he is a plain man of the people and a reg'lar guy. Bad grammar is a sign of nothing but messiness of mind. The frontier days have gone, when a man was a suspicious character (probably a gambler or highwayman) if he showed signs of education. The raucous and ungrammatical speaker is wasting his time and money on the radio; it is too easy to thrust him back into the darkness of the night, whence he came and where he belongs.

DESIRE

This my desire—when death shall close the door
Forever on the house wherein I dwell,
 Leaving it tenantless, an empty shell
Whose darkened windows stream their

This, the fond hope my soul would have in store:
 May I become a silver-threated bell!
 Towered and hung where only Heav'n can tell,
Yet Earth may hear me from her fog-
 bound floor.
And there shall be glad music in the night
 When songs that I have loved are
 pealed from me,
 The music of the stars and windless
 air
But this shall be my hope's ecstatic height:
That in the echo of my greatest glee
 Your golden voice, my love, may mingle there!

Ontario's School On Wheels

Christian Science Monitor

THE schoolmaster and his wife and children are very busy. Into one third of the railway coach they are packing all that they will need for the next ten months. Clothes and extra bedding are folded into the drawers under the bunks; food is stowed into the small deep cupboards and the ice-box; pots, pans, and china are made fast in their racks.

In the other two thirds of the coach the schoolroom is ready. The desks are scoured and polished, the library shelves dusted and the books stacked. The globe has been hauled up to the ceiling by its string and pulley, and the picture of the King has been carefully hung on its accustomed nail.

In the shacks that stand by the railway lines, children are counting days to the coming of the School on Wheels. Gathering in twos and threes, they talk with shrill excitement. Far from the tracks, children are beginning to start for the spurs.

Thirty miles north of one of these, where the train will make a three-day call, a boy of nine is packing a week's food in a canoe in preparation for his journey down the waterways. His frail craft will be frozen in before he covers half his journey but he will load his food and blankets onto his back and finish the way on snow-shoes.

TWO boys, one nine and one eleven, have been left to forage for themselves this winter. Their mother has passed away, and their father has to visit his fur traps far to the north and cannot get back until spring. Leaving the desolate shack, they, too, make their way to the spur, and, arriving before the school train and finding an old tent, they set it up, bank it with snow and roof it with hemlock boughs. Here they will live through a winter that has 55 degrees below zero on its temperature chart.

The first of September! The train will have started out on its 150-mile beat!

Last year's copy books are brought out, the least stump of pencil sharpened, the last patch and darn has gone into the worn clothes. The children begin to watch night and day, for there is no telling at what hour the engine bringing their school will come tooting up the spurs.

IT IS long past midnight when the train pulls into the junction. Men uncouple the last coach, and the train roars off into the night. A waiting engine begins to glide slowly down the track; slowly and yet more slowly it approaches the solitary coach. The buffers meet with a soft clink.

The engineer, stoker, linesmen, and schoolmaster stand talking together with the ease of long custom. Glancing up at the sky and snuffing the cold purity of the air, one of the linesmen makes his contribution to the conversation; "Winter's coming early this year. You'll be wanting the plough and shovel pretty soon."

"Think you'll have to dig us out this week?" the schoolmaster asks.

"It wouldn't surprise me," is the final comment.

Curving away from the main line, the tracks of the spur run into the forest, and under the interlacing boughs the engine and the car jog leisurely into the wilderness. The cold deepens; the stars are like crossed swords. In the little schoolroom a clock chimes three. The schoolmaster, moving quietly so as not to disturb his wife and children, puts on his coat and slides open a door as the engine comes to a halt in a small clearing. Standing below him, their upturned faces partly lit by the glow from the engine fire, are the waiting children. He stills the cries of welcome with a finger on his lips and a nod towards the sleepers in the coach behind him. Bending down he calls quietly to those he knows by name. Those who have never seen the school before are hiding in the shadows, but as he beckons they are pushed and pulled forward by the others and stand bashfully looking at him.

"We start school tomorrow."

ONCE again his upraised finger subdues the cries of excitement.

"It will be a long day of hard work, so you want all the sleep you can get. Go back to your beds now and we will all meet in the morning. Good night."

They scatter to the shacks. The engineer comes to see if the coal box by the stove is full.

"I'll be back for you on Thursday," he says as he climbs to the cab.

The engine gives a deep cough, sending clouds of billowy smoke among the tree tops; its piston rods rise, thrust forward, fall, pull back, and, gliding down the gleaming rails, the engine enters the tunnel of trees. Silence folds in behind its going like the closing of heavy curtains. The school stands in the solitude under the blazing stars.

Tomorrow a sound will startle the wilderness—a sound that down the years has been symbolic of dreams, hopes, fulfillment. The schoolbell will ring in the forest clearing.

• Hitler the Plowman

THROUGHOUT much of the Northern Hemisphere the frost has left the ground. Even in the latitude of Moscow it will soon be gone. The green of new grass moves northward over all the fertile lands. The Spring plowing has begun.

But this year, as in several former years, it is the blood and bones of martyred humanity that are being plowed into the earth, and the seed that is being planted is the seed of doom. The paperhanger turned plowman walks abroad, as Jenghis Khan and Attila did before him, and where he walks the grass and grain no longer grow. He walks by preference in the Spring. He has taken that for his season.

He has suffered some dark months of eclipse, for which the Russians are responsible. The world's attention has been diverted to his ally and imitator in the Pacific. His proud spirit has been tortured. He is yearning for the spotlight of undivided attention. But he does not yet despair. By the slaughter of some hundreds of thousands of soldiers, by the burning of cities and the plunder of countrysides, by the murder of civilians, he will again compel us to think of him. His troops will soon be marching.

Springs come and Springs go, for him as for other men. Opportunities come and opportunities go, for him as for others. The Spring of 1941 had more promise for him than this one has. If three-fourths of humanity is still in arms against him at this season in 1943, he will have little promise left. He must work his deadly miracle before Autumn or work it never.

This is his Spring. He still can choose where he will direct his plowshare. His stallions are still strong and obedient to the whip. He will be at his plowing soon. But the harvest is less under his control. He cannot know what crops will come out of his seeds of hate, of bloodlust and of treachery. Those who now stand firm against him may do the reaping. They may reap liberty where he sows tyranny, peace where he sows war, life where he sows death. This is Hitler's Spring. It can be his last Spring. —New York Times.

• Hun Can't Wait In Russia

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—Until the military meaning of Pierre Laval's political resurrection in conquered France is clarified, its effect upon the approaching war crisis in Russia is difficult to fathom.

If Laval should turn France's depleted and long inactive Mediterranean fleet over to the Germans, it would be a grave handicap for Russia's war partners, Britain and the United States. It could not, however, greatly complicate Russia's own problem in the near future. And it is in Russia, perhaps within the next thirty days, that weather conditions will permit the launching of Hitler's new "annihilation" offensive.

London military observers fix mid-May as the earliest probable date when the oceans of mud and slush will dry up sufficiently for blitzkrieg operations. Russian advices as to an early thaw following the most severe winter in decades give the same impression.

GRIM LESSON OF 1941

Nor can Hitler and his generals forget the grim time lesson they learned last year. The weeks they lost in the Balkan War in April, May and June as a prelude to the attack on Russia proved their undoing. Starting too late, their great advance was turned into a costly retreat when winter intervened.

The Nazi High Command cannot again risk any such delay in striking at Russia. Even with French warships and Mediterranean bases at its disposal to alter ominously the odds against Britain on that front, it would take time to bring them into effective play, and there is no certainty as yet that the French fleet will be available.

The first hint of winter's intervention in Russia found its way into German war bulletins late last October. Freezing nights were officially admitted to have forced a "breathing spell." It was not until a month later, however, that Hitler, obviously at odds with his generals, gave up the effort to complete his "victory" and began his march to the rear with the surrender of Rostov.

That seven weeks from early October to late November was Russia's dark hour. Turning back to the Berlin and Moscow war bulletins of that period, the miracle of Russian recovery to wage a winter counter-offensive that has regained at terrible cost to the foe more than a sixth of the Russian territory lost in 1941, seems more astounding even than the escape of most of Britain's expeditionary force from Dunkirk.

PREMATURE SHOUT

On Oct. 9 last Otto Dietrich, Nazi press chief, returning from a meeting with Hitler at his Russian field headquarters, announced in Berlin that "for military purposes, Soviet Russia is done with."

The "last complete Russian armies" were locked in death traps at Bryansk and Vyazma, routed in the south or cooped up in besieged Leningrad by his account.

"The British dream of two-front war is dead," he added.

Just how premature that victory shout was today's war news from Russia makes crystal clear. Dangerously exposed German advance posts at both Bryansk and Vyazma are besieged, the Smolensk key to the vital junction triangle on the Moscow front is threatened. The siege of Leningrad had been definitely lifted. Its garrison is on the attack. Rostov is regained, and the Nazi forces still threatening it themselves are under attack. The Kerch bridgehead from the Crimea to the Caucasus is again in Russian hands.

For armies rated as done for only six months ago, that is an amazing comeback. It means Hitler has much of his work to do over again with war-weary and wasted forces which now have tasted defeat.

• Handicraft Opportunity

THERE should be more than usual interest in the Canadian Handicrafts Guild Exhibition which opens in Toronto on April 28. This will be the first opportunity for many people to witness the progress Canadian and European refugee craftsmen are making in producing many hand-made articles which we previously imported. Now all these fascinating goods are being produced in Canada, and out of local raw materials. In many instances, too, there has been a considerable improvement in design.

In addition to a natural sentimental interest in the growth of handicrafts, this country has a substantial commercial stake as well. If we hope to develop our lucrative tourist trade to maximum proportions then there must be a complementary development in handicrafts as tourists always have been the biggest buyers of local hand-made rugs, blankets, pottery and similar goods. And because these tourists act as unofficial salesmen on their return home there is also a big potential export market for Canadian handicrafts in the United States. This, Canadian handicrafts have already tapped.

Never in the 42 years of its history has the Canadian Handicrafts Guild faced an opportunity and responsibility such as that presented by the present situation. Previous imports of real and shabby imitation handicrafts have been cut off. Thus Canadian craftsmen are provided overnight with all of the domestic market and an export outlet in the United States. At the same time there has been an infusion of new skill from the refugees of Europe. And, finally, with the day coming ever closer when hundreds of thousands of workers must shift from war production to peace, an industry which creates such permanent, gainful and interesting employment will prove almost invaluable.—Financial Post.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

The writing of Hezekiah king of Judah, when he had been sick, and was recovered of his sickness....I said, I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord, in the land of the living: I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world....

Behold, for peace I had great bitterness: but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day: the father to the children shall make known thy truth. The Lord was ready to save me: therefore we will sing my songs to the stringed instruments all the days of our life in the house of the Lord.—Isa. xxxviii, 9, 11, 17-20.

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.... The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.—Ps. cxxi. 4, 7.

Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God ....For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end. —Heb. iii, 12, 14.

SELF-DENIAL

A Scottish church held a self-denial week. At the end of the week, one of the members handed over a donation of 5s, 3d, all in threepenny-pieces.

"Tell me, Jock," said the parson, "how is it your contribution is in threepenny-bits?"

"Well, ye see, sir, it's my custom to have three whiskies and sodas every day, but as we were holding a self-denial week I felt I must give up something." Then, nodding towards the small coins: "These are the sodas, sir."

Oilers Advance To Finals Ousting Tigers

HALIFAX, April 17 — (CP). —The Western Canadian basketball champions, whoever they may be, will do well to keep a close watch on a pair of "shorties"—Slender Joe Richman and stocky Johnny Ferraro—when they meet up with Montreal Oilers in the Dominion finals.

With three western teams still in the midst of play for the western title, the Oilers ran off with the eastern championship with a pair of convincing wins over Dalhousie University's Tigers.

Oilers completed their conquest of the Maritime winners here last night with a 51-36 triumph. They won the first game of the best-of-three series the night before by an even wider range, 50-21.

Richman, captain of the Montrealers, is a short fellow as far as basketball players go, but he's speedy and a dead shot. Of the 101 points scored by the Oilers in the two games, he was good for 29 of them, 15 in the first game and 14 last night.

Ferraro, no taller than his captain and not a whit slower, although just about twice as heavy, scored almost as many points in the series—25. The thick-set former rugby star was high man last night with 17 points, and he scored eight others in the first game.

Sugar Robinson After 30th Win

DETROIT, April 17.— (AP).— Ray (Sugar) Robinson, pride of New York's harlem and whom admirers call the uncrowned king of boxing's welterweight division, goes after his 30th successive victory to-night at Olympia Stadium where he meets hard-punching Harvey Dubs of Windsor, Ont., in a 10-round bout.

Robinson, who was born Walter Smith in Detroit 21 years ago and sprang from the same fistic surroundings that produced Heavyweight Joe Louis, was undefeated in 80 scraps as an amateur and has gone unbeaten ever since.

While Dubs suffers by comparison with that record, he is a stiff puncher. He has knocked out 28 of 43 professional opponents.

Rebekah Lodge Holds Spring Tea

PORT HOPE, April 17—(ENS).— A most successful spring tea was held by the Ganeraska Rebekah Lodge in their lodge rooms on Walton street on Thursday afternoon, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Much credit is due the general convener, Mrs. Sid Smith and her assistant, Mrs. Roy Williams, convener of the tea tables, which were beautifully decorated with spring flowers.

Mrs. Oliver Quemby and Mrs. S. Wakely were in charge of a well laden talent table, while Miss N. Wood had a display of fancy articles which were both ornamental and useful, for sale.

Those assisting in the tea room were Mrs. Bert Broadbent, Mrs. Elmer Smith, Mrs. Fedella, Mrs. Snell, Mrs Rawlings and Mrs. J. Rutter.

Several ladies took advantage of the delicious salad plate menu and entertained small parties at the tea hour.

Church Groups Hold Joint Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD, April 17 (ENS) —Lieut. Alex. Turnbull and members of the Salvation Army Young People's Group were guests of the Free Methodist Y.P. for a joint meeting held on Wednesday evening. The visiting group was in charge of the program for which the main feature was an address by Lieut. Turnbull, entitled "Youth Seeks Life." He emphasized the need for the spiritual things in life and pointed out the importance of choosing the right path when the all important cross roads was reached. The meeting opened with singing, while Charles Battman led in prayer and Ruth Clark gave the Scripture reading. Following a Bible quiz the meeting was closed by the leader of the Free Methodist Group, Arthur Price, who expressed his thanks to the visitors for their valuable contribution to the meeting.

Birth Increase.

The assessor's roll here shows a declining population but this certainly doesn't agree with reports emanating from the Campbellford hospital. From information received up there the stork is keeping pace with his trips last year when twenty new arrivals were checked in during the first three and a half months. During the past week there have been four new arrivals: To Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wright, Seymour West, on April 9, a daughter; to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown, April 14, a daughter, Frances Winnifred; to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garneau, April 15, a sister for Sharron; to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Petherick, April 15, a daughter, Gale Marie.

Leaves For Esquimault.

P.I.X. Lieut. Lloyd Richardson, C.D.C., who left on Wednesday of this week for Vancouver Island, where he has been posted to the naval station at Esquimault. He received his appointment immediately on graduation from Dental College in Toronto this month, when he won a scholarship in preventive dentistry. Lieut. Richardson is a son of Dr. H. O. and Mrs. Richardson in Campbellford.

27 Quilts Made

Members of the Tabernacle Church (English Line) Women's Association who since last fall have been engaged in an energetic quilt-making program, decided to make their initial contribution to the Salvation Army when they met for their regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon. The branch, which up to the present has been assisting both the local branch of the Red Cross and the I.O.D.E. with contributions of quilts decided to turn over the three which were taken off at their meeting to the Salvation Army. Twenty attended the quilting which began at eleven in the morning and following a pot-luck dinner resumed till late in the afternoon.

It was revealed that approximately 27 quilts have been completed since last September by the 24-30 ladies who met twice each month until the end of March. The president, Mrs. E. J. Mitchell, presided for the business and it was during this period members decided the impelling need for quilts should be met by holding another quilting May 20 despite the fact most of the ladies have had their work at home greatly increased at this season. Cancelled for the summer period, however, were the two meetings a month which were inaugurated in September. They will revert to this double program again in the fall.

Consider Tires First.

Evidence that the rationing of gas may have the ultimate effect of wiping out many of the social activities held in various parts of the country was seen by a report coming from the Stanwood Sewing Circle which met for its regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon. Members who have for several weeks been considering plans to hold an afternoon tea in an effort to raise funds for their war and church activities, decided to abandon the idea after considering the tire and gas situation. They felt that many of the people from the surrounding districts, who would normally attend such an affair, would in all probability consider their tires and ration books first. They nevertheless hit upon an idea which will add to their funds, and which members unanimously endorsed. Each one will contribute one dollar to the Circle and thereby, at least partially, offset the loss.

Arrangements were made to send a box overseas to one of the boys from the district and each of the ladies will bring one or more articles for it, such as jam, chocolate bars, canned meats, etc., to the next meeting. On May 20th the Sewing Circle has outlined a busy program which will begin in the morning when they will meet at the Orange Hall and then adjourn to the Church for a cleaning bee, later returning to the hall for a pot-luck dinner and quilting.

Lawn Bowling

With the holding of the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association Thursday night in the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club rooms, the lawn bowling season of 1942 was, as far as this district is concerned, officially declared open. Delegates were present from Port Hope, Cobourg and Peterborough.

In his opening remarks, Fred Dearborn, Peterborough, welcomed the bowlers and said he hoped that all would enjoy the coming season. He expressed the opinion that now that the war has altered conditions in no small way that all clubs would be advised to cut down the number of open tournaments.

He referred to the loss bowling has sustained by the death of J. T. Braund, and out of respect and in memory of Mr. Braund he asked the convention to rise and bow their heads in a minute's silence.

The secretary-treasurer's report was read by H. R. Martin and favorably received.

The meeting was thrown open for suggestions and many were forthcoming from all delegates.

It was decided tha for the duration of the war there will be no further Central Ontario play-offs, and also it was recommended that each club hold only two open tournaments. All this was done due to the tire and gas situation.

The entry fee for each club remains the same, $2.50, and on motion of Fred Brown, Peterborough, seconded by Bert Dawson, Port Hope, and carried, the Association donated $25.00 to the Evening Telegram's British War Victims Fund.

Towards the close of the meeting sub-committees met and struck the following dates for tournaments:

Cobourg—July 8th and Aug. 25th

Port Hope — Sept. 7th (Labor Day) and Sept. 16th.

Peterborough—June 10th and Aug. 3rd (Civic Holiday).

The following officers were elected for the 1942 season:

Hon. President—H. Rosevear, Port Hope.

President—Wm. Oke, Port Hope

Vice-President— E Hircock, Cobourg.

Sec.-Treas.—Mark Wickett, Port Hope.

Executive Committee—F Corbett, Cobourg; R. Hendry, Peterborough; F. Hodgett, Port Hope, and J. Baird, Peterborough.

Witnesses Tell Of Strychnine Purchased By Cobourg Councillor

COBOURG, April 17 — (ENS). — Charged with placing strychnine poison where it was readily accessible to animals, Councillor Joseph Delanty appeared in police court yesterday before Magistrate R. B. Baxter. Court adjourned for a week after the Crown closed its case and three of the defence witnesses had been heard. Mr. Delanty pleaded not guilty. Harry Deyman acted for the Crown and T. F. Hall, K.C., appeared for the defendant.

Fred Vagg of Cobourg told the court that his dog took sick on Januar 26 and recovered after the veterinary, Dr. J. Harrington, was called. The cause of the dog's sickness was strychnine poisoning, he said. Witness said that he lived three houses south of Councillor Delanty's home.

Robert Thompson testified that his dog also was poisoned, the date being January 30. It recovered also. Witness said that he lived three houses north of Councillor Delanty.

James Lister, another citizen whose dog was poisoned, testified that his dog also recovered after the veterinary attended. Lister said that he lived about a block and a half from Delanty's residence.

Keith Caldwell, Cobourg druggist, produced his poison book and read of an entry for Jan. 22, 1942, which read "J. E. Delanty, 10 grains strychnine, purpose of use, cats."

"I told him to be careful in putting it out that children did not get it. I understood him to say that it was to kill cats. Maximum safe dose for an adult is 1-16 of a grain. Any more than that is dangerous," Mr. Caldwell testified.

"Is it possible that Mr. Delanty said that he wanted the poison for rats and not cats when he asked you for the strychnine?" Mr. Hall asked.

Witness said that he might have.

"The purpose of the poison and the signature of the purchaser are together. Would the purpose column be filled in at the time of the purchaser's signature?" Mr. Deyman asked. Mr. Caldwell said that it would be. The witness referred to his poison book again and said that 10 grains had been sold to Mrs. Precious on September 17, 1941.

Second Purchase

Dennis Bergin, also a druggist of Cobourg, said that his poison book showed that Mr. Delanty had bought 20 grains of strychnine on January 28th. At the time, he said he wanted it for rats. Mrs. Precious also bought strychnine, the date being Oct. 7, 1941.

Dr. James Harrington told of treating Vagg's, Thompson's and Lister's dogs for strychnine. From the stomach contents the dogs had been eating a stew which contained carrots.

"How long will strychnine retain its strength?" asked Mr. Hall.

"If it were exposed to air, the water content would evaporate and it would become stronger with age," replied Dr. Harrington.

Chief Carey testified that he had checked the drug stores after he had received complaints of dogs being poisoned. One dog had died, he said.

"I saw Mr. Delanty and asked him if he had purchased strychnine and he said that he had, and had put it out for cats. I told him that it seemed as if he had poisoned nearly all the dogs in town. I said that last part in a jocular way. He replied that he had put the poison in a hole under the shed to get some cats which had been after some meat in his shed and he couldn't see how any dogs could get at it. In a later interview he said that it was rats he was after, and not cats," testified Chief Carey.

"How far is Mr. Precious' home from Mr. Delanty's?" asked Mr. Hall.

"They don't live very far apart," replied Chief Carey.

The next intersection north of the Delanty residence is University avenue. It would be practically in the same block, added Chief Carey.

Present In Court

Crown Attorney Deyman called Fred Precious, but as he was present in the court room during the hearing, and as the other witnesses had been excluded, the defence objected to his giving evidence. Mr. Deyman pointed out that he had only decided to call Mr. Precious when the evidence came up in regard to purchases of strychnine by Mrs. Precious. However the court ruled against it.

During court intermission, Mrs. Precious was sent for. When court resumed and Mrs. Precious took the stand, T. F. Hall took objection to her being called on the grounds that she had been talking about the case to her husband before coming into the court room.

"Did you discuss the case with your husband " asked the magistrate.

"Well, he came up for me and on the way down he said that I was to give evidence about the strychnine I bought," she replied.

"She cannot give evidence now," commented Mr. Hall.

Further questioned, Mrs. Precious said that her husband had not told her what to say at the trial but that she was to give evidence about where she got the poison and what it was for.

"I knew what it was for. It was to kill mice out at our summer cottage at Rice Lake. It wasn't used here," she said.

HEADACHE AFTER HEADACHE

Now She's Free From Them

A woman writes:—"I would like everyone who suffers from headaches to try Kruschen Salts. Before taking Kruschen I was hardly ever free from a headache. But since I have been taking it regularly I have hardly had a headache, for which I am very thankful, for headaches can make one feel quite ill. I have been taking that small dose of Kruschen every morning in a glass of warm water, before my breakfast, and I feel so well."—(Mrs.) A. E.

Headaches can often be traced to a disordered stomach and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons — prevent them forming again—and you're not likely to have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen brings lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter. Start on "the little daily dose" of Kruschen tomorrow.

Kruschen is a British product obtainable at all drug stores, 25c and 75c.

TIRE LIFE EXTENSION PLAN

for ALL makes of tires . . .

Here's what your Goodyear dealer does for you!

Right* AWAY

He rotates your tires, inspects them carefully inside and out, checks valve cores and caps, checks tubes for weak spots and leaks, scrapes rims free of rust, paints them and treats rim-well with graphite. He paints all tires with rubber preservative, inflates them to proper pressure ,and registers your tire serial numbers.

Every* WEEK

He checks the inflation of your tires with an accurate hand gauge. He uses a hand gauge because tests show that free air pumps can vary by many pounds. As the average tire loses about two pounds of air a week it is essential that he check your tires regularly every week!

Every* MONTH

He jacks up your car and examines your tires. He removes nails, bits of glass, imbedded gravel or grit . . . prevents the development of serious tire injuries. At the same time he checks for signs of faulty wheel alignment, improperly adjusted brakes . . . causes of excessive tire wear.

Every* 2 MONTHS

He paints your tires with special tire preservative to protect sidewalls from weathering too rapidly. At the same time he replaces valve caps when needed and checks valve insides and, if necessary, replaces them.

Every* 4 MONTHS

He removes all tires from the rims and thoroughly inspects them inside and out. He searches for any cuts or bruises that may develop serious trouble. At the same time he checks your tubes for weak spots and slow leaks. Scrapes rims free of rust, paints them, treats the rim-well with graphite.

Twice* A YEAR

He rotates your tires according to a scientific plan, reversing the direction of tire rotation to even and prolong the wear.. Scientific tire rotation can increase tread mileage up to 25%. The policy also includes three tube repairs during the year.

Bonus* BENEFITS

This policy includes the following FREE BONUSES: one free road service call, one free major vulcanized sectional tire repair, or two free vulcanized spot repairs, the free registration of all your tire serial numbers for easy identification in case of theft, and preferential treatment when and if present government regulations should be relaxed on new tires, recapping service or used tires. In all ways, policyholders come first for all tire services.

FLEET OWNERS Your local Goodyear dealer is completely equipped to give your fleet of cars or trucks (if equipped with passenger size tires) the full benefits of Goodyear's Tire Life Extension Plan . . . call him up, or drive in and see him for details, today!

Gives you a LOW COST, systematic plan of preferred, skilful service that may mean a year or more EXTRA SERVICE from your tires!

● You are on your last tires now! The Minister of Munitions, the tire companies and the Rubber Controller have all told you that you'll get no new tires until after the war.

Yet your car is a national asset. As a means of transportation it can relieve our already overloaded public services. It must be kept running as long as possible.

There is one bright star shining for most motorists.

Tires are built to give double, or treble the mileage car owners ordinarily get out of them. But driving habits have prevented most motorists from enjoying all the mileage built into their tires. The Goodyear Tire Life Extension Plan will help car owners get these extra miles.

Naturally Goodyear dealers can't promise big mileage from tires already worn-out : : : they aren't miracle workers! But fortunately most motorists have tires in good condition and can get greatly increased mileages from them, if this simple, easy, economical plan is put into effect : : : NOW! But remember! You must act quickly to get this guaranteed, preferred service! Only tire experts can give it to you. Read the details of this plan, then sign up with your nearby Goodyear dealer at once!

How this policy operates : : : WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU!

● Illustrated below is the policy you receive when you sign up for the Goodyear Tire Life Extension Plan. It covers the servicing of your tires, including certain repairs to tires and tubes, for a period of 12 months. It guarantees you preferred tire service . . . maximum mileage from your tires. It keeps your car rolling longer, much longer, than any other method of tire care you could choose.

The tire service and tire care guaranteed by this policy simply mean that your tires are given skilful, expert service with frequency and regularity. It means the carrying out of tested conservation methods without fail. It is true that you could perform many of these services yourself, but those needed services which you can't perform owing to lack of equipment would be costly if purchased singly . . . and doubly costly if not done at all. Remember that inexpert work or the following of hit-or-miss and untried methods will do immeasurably more harm than good.

Your part in the Tire Life Extension Plan is twofold. First you MUST follow the schedule of dates for tire inspection, servicing, rotation, etc. Second, you must observe tire-saving driving habits which are explained in detail in the policy.

WHAT WILL ALL THIS PREFERRED SERVICE COST?

While the year's services included in this plan are worth well over $30 . . . the cost to policy-holders is only $2 a month. An economical investment when you consider that your car is one of your most valued possessions, and, that laid up because of the premature failure of one or two tires, it becomes a useless, frozen asset.

DON'T DELAY . . . SERVICE FACILITIES ARE LIMITED!

Each dealer can properly service only a limited number of cars. See your dealer today and be sure of service. The sooner you start this plan, the longer you'll have the use of your car.

OUTLAWS WITH 3393 SCORE, WIN THIRD PLACE IN CITY LEAGUE

Fourth Place Won By Royal Yorks On Final Night Of Bowling

The final chapter of this year's Men's City League bowling schedule was completed in the heat at Duffus Bowling Alleys last night. Outlaws topped the team scoring with 3393 pins and won third place by defeating Old Timers 3 to 1. The Big Five fell apart as Royal Yorks nailed the fourth spot with a 3 to 1 victory. Jay's won 3 to 1 from Capitols and a tie in points was registered in each of the Huffman and Dunn's and Quakers and Freeman's tilts.

Holly Mowry chalked up a 777 score for the Outlaws, Jack Platt hit a 321 single, Bill Burford 313, Bill Harris 307, Nelson Routley 306 and Jack Playford 304.

There was a tremendous pile of hardwood tossed around since last October. It was a fairly successful season, featured by outstanding rolling in some quarters and the worst pin-spilling ever recorded in City League competition in other sections. The champion Jay's team were a clever, hard-hitting aggregation. The Fred Martin, Bud Weese, Tom Miller and Jack Playford foursome of other years took on Tom and Bill Martin this season and the new additions were right at home when things got tough.

Twice during the year the Jay men rolled up around the 3900 mark in team scoring. If they can strike together they are quite capable of making a spill at the C.B.A. in Toronto next week.

Fred Martin of Jay's turned in a remarkable 250 or better average while Tom Curvin of the Big Five won the high three score with 962. 'Buck" Guerin's 400 Quaker Oats single was never beaten by this year's City League crowd although it was threatened on several occasions. Bill Lewis topped it with a 425 game in the Westclox loop and Doug Abraham hit a 405 for the C.G.E.

During the season eighty-one different bowlers took part in the games played among the ten teams. Jay's stuck to their six starting men but Chief Gimblett beat them to a frazzle in that department. He never budged an inch from the veterans he asked to bowl on his Old Timers team, the same five names appeared on the score sheet during the 27 consecutive weeks of rolling.

Huffman's were rated the tough luck aggregation of the year and Quakers, last placers, had the distinction of rolling the highest single game team scoring of the year when they hit well over 1400. That score was made the night Guerin hit the high single of 400 while his teammate Bill Pallant was turning in 377.

The final standing: Jay's 79, Capitols 62, Outlaws 58, Royal Yorks 57, Dunn's 56, Freeman's 53, Old Timers 53, Big Five 52, Huffman's 42, Quakers 28.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Stanley Cup series is all tied up with Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings having three wins each. The argument will be settled Saturday night in Toronto, with the Leafs probably starting 8 to 5 favorites to take it all. In the cleanest and best-played game of the entire series in Detroit last night the Toronto club won 3 to 0 to pull up on even terms with a team that had had them down three games. The Leafs were full value for their win. They stood off a terrific Detroit attack throughout the first period, thanks to superb goal-keeping by Turk Broda who rose to the heights when anything less than that would have meant disaster to his team. Then the new Leaf hero, Don Metz, whipped in an Apps' pass with only 14 seconds of the second period gone and that counter was the ball game. The Red Wings, down a goal, had to open up wide and throughout the whole middle session and well into the third they put on the pressure in a vain effort to break through for a goal to tie the count.

* * * * * *

Listening to the broadcast story of the battle one could almost feel the last two Leaf goals coming. With Detroit having to take all kinds of chances, breakaways seemed to be inevitable, sooner or later, and finally they eventuated. Twice Sweeney Schriner set up teammates on clean breaks that carried them in on top of Mowers for goals, Bob Goldham doing the trick on the first occasion and Billy Taylor firing home the third marker. The Leafs played sound hockey, refused to crack under heavy pressure and finally put the game on ice by cashing in on breaks that were bound to come when the Wings had to toss caution to the winds.

* * * * * *

With the final contest scheduled for Toronto ice, the odds favor the Leafs to come through and win the historic old trophy. Detroit may stage a comeback but it is to be imagined that right now they are a discouraged lot. They had the series in the bag and the string almost tied when the Leafs upset all their calculations by coming from behind in the final period of the fourth game to win out and prolong the struggle. That totally reverse put the fight back into the Leafs and at the same time knocked the morale of the Wings for a loop. That is shown by the fact that the Red Wings have been outscored 12 to 3 in the last two games and were kept off the score sheet altogether in last night's tussle. Now they are faced with the task of beating the Leafs at home and that has never been easy for the Adams club, in spite of the fact that they did open the present series with two victories at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Looks Rather Strange

With three days over there is rather a strange look about the big league standings. Up at the top of the National League appears the Boston Braves, with three straight wins and the only club in the senior loop to escape defeat. And on the upper shelf of the American loop appear the New York Yanks which is not so strange but tied with them are the Boston Red Sox, not surprising either and the St. Louis Browns, whose lofty standing is unusual. All three have won three straight games, cleaning up their opening series. The Yanks picked up their third in a row over Washington, winning 8 to 5 but it was not quite so easy a task as the first two victories had been. The New Yorkers had to come through with three runs in the ninth to take the decision. Lefty Gomez started for the Yanks but Bruer had to finish the job and got credit for the win. At Boston the Red Sox had a field day at the expense of the Philadelphia Athletics, winning 19 to 4 in a game in which the Croninites made 21 hits, including home runs by Ted Williams with a runner on the bases and Dom DiMaggio. Wagner was the winning pitcher and the Red Sox have made history by winning three games in succession and only using three pitchers to do the trick. Newsome, Dobson and Wagner have won in turn.

* * * * * *

The Browns kept pace with the Yanks and Red Sox by taking their third straight triumph from the Chicago White Sox. It was decisive, too, the St. Louis gang winning 13 to 3 behind steady pitching by Galehouse. Bill Dietrich started for the Pale Hose but was batted out by the up-and-coming Browns. Meanwhile the Detroit Tigers took the series from Cleveland by grabbing off the rubber game 5 to 4. It was a win for Tommy Bridges who held the Indians to eight scattered hits. Al Milnar started for Lou Boudreau's team but was replaced by Heving and finally C. Brown who got the credit for the loss.

* * * * * *

For the third day in succession the Boston Braves got super-fine pitching yesterday and once more nosed out Hans Lobert's Phillies. The final count was 2 to 1 and Lombardi's single in the tenth drove in the winning run. Early pitched for the winners and held the winless Phillies to six hits. Hughes for the losers only allowed five, at that. Cincinnati Reds finally won themselves a ball game but they had to go twelve innings and use three pitchers to nose out Pittsburgh 8 to 7. The Pirates had to call on five twirlers in an effort to save the game. Brooklyn Dodgers took a tight game from the Giants 4 to 2 in spite of the fact that Manager Mel Ott hit a homer for the losers. Head and Casey did the tossing for the Bums and Coslo worked for the Giants. In the other National League fixture St. Louis Cards triumphed over the Cubs 11 to 6 in a rather free-hitting affair in which each club came through with 14 blows.

* * * * * *

The basketball season will be wound up tomorrow night when Quakers and Dominions will meet in the second game of the final series for the City League title. Although Quakers have a big lead set up in the opening game last Saturday night and should hold it Dominions are confident that they can make a much better showing than they did last week and they will be out to make the Quakers earn their championship. It should be an interesting finish to the campaign. The Dominions have one victory this season over the Quakers to their credit and they would like nothing more better than to wind up the year with another win over the porridge team. Of course the Quakers have their own ideas on that subject and they hope to breeze through with another triumph tomorrow night. The game will be played in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

Oshawa Beaten Again

It looks as if the Portage La Prairie Terriers are carrying too much drive for the Oshawa Generals. Terriers, one of the highest-scoring outfits ever to appear in Memorial Cup finals won their second straight win over Oshawa last night, coming through with an 8-7 victory to go two games up on the final series. It was the 24th win in a row for the Western kids and to make it more remarkable they took Oshawa last night without any goals from their ace line, which is handicapped by the absence of scoring Joe Bell. Bill Gooden was the star for Portage La Prairie, scoring five goals himself and figuring in two others for a seven-point total while McDonald who set the pace in the first game came back with two more. The Bend-Love-Bell line will probably bob up with a goal-scoring spree in the third game tomorrow night to take the marbles.

Meade Boots In 4 Winners At Jamaica

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, JAMAICA, N.Y., April 17.—(AP)—Diminutive Don Meade who carried off top riding honors in the United States last year, yesterday climaxed a week of brilliant riding that had previously accounted for three triples, by booting home four winners on the seven-event card here.

Meade started off on the right foot by piloting Persistant to an easy six-length victory in the opening five-furlong juvenile test and returned to push home Selmalad, a 9 to 1 shot, in the second race. It marked the second time at the meeting that Meade has won both ends of the daily double. The favored K. Dorko responded gamely to give Meade his fourth triple of the meet in the fourth event and he completed his "home run" aboard the heavily backed Portable after a stiff battle with Chatlet and Eric Knight in the next to last test of the card. His riding rampage was halted in the seventh race when Sweepalot failed to stand up under the torrid pace.

Thursday's efforts brought Meade's total winners to the meet to sixteen. He holds a commanding lead over his rivals in his bid for this year's leading jockey award.

Apache Cops Feature

William Woodward's Apache, regarded by man as the East's main reliance for the forthcoming Kentucky Derby, yesterday answered an important question when he essayed a distance for the first time and came through with an easy length-and-a-half triumph in the High Quest Purse.

Favorite in the field of three at odds of 2 to 5, the Belair color-bearer covered the mile-and-a sixteenth in 1:44 2-5 without fully extending himself as he led home Mrs. Ed. Mulrenan's First Fiddle, which carried 114 pounds and was in receipt of four pounds from the winner.

The Mill River Stable's Fair Call, making his first start since running a close third to Alsab and Bless Me in the Walden Stakes last fall, appeared far from that form and trailed First Fiddle by 15 lengths. A crowd of 15,335 witnessed the race, whcih served as a strong magnet despite the smallness of the field.

Fair Call carried equal weight with Apache, which recently inaugurated his 3-year-old campaign with an impressive score in the shorter Experimental Handicap. Apache, in defeating two other Derby nominees yesterday afternoon, doubtlessly could have won by a wider margin had Jimmy Stout elected to push him at any stage of the race. In addition, close observers thought Apache showed loafing tendencies once he got to the front in the stretch.

The favorite was first out of the gate, but Stout eased back going to the first turn. First Fiddle, showing the speed that marked some of his winter efforts in Florida, opened up a lead of a lengh or more and maintained that advantage until rounding out of the back stretch. Then Apache drew up on the outsider. After a brief duel, the Woodward representative gained command a furlong from home and, without doing his best, widened the margin in the run to the wire. Fair Call remained within several lengths of the pace to a point near the far turn, then faded rapidly.

New Directors Are Elected

Three new directors were elected at the meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club on Tuesday night when reports of last season's activities were given and plans for this year discussed.

The new directors are three of the younger golfers, Hugh Waddell, Stanley G. Payne and Donald McIntyre.

Dr. J. M. McCulloch is president of the club with Alderman Herb. Bradburn vice-president and T. A. Mackay secretary-treasurer. The other director is H. T. Cranford.

The Peterborough club has decided to stage a drive for new members and in spite of the general situation a good season is expected.

NEW YORK, April 17.— (AP).— After every inning, Ted Williams visits the scoreboard at Fenway Park to ask the keeper if anybody around the circuit hit any homers ....The turf committee of America, announcing that a goal of $2,000,000 has been set for racing's contribution to war relief, points out that this is to be "apart from such gifts as the public may choose to make, channeling through racing organizations." Presumably, then, that rules out the Narragansett idea of running an extra race and contributing what the public donates that way.

LEAFS SET PRECEDENT IN STARTLING COMEBACK TO TIE UP SERIES

13,153 See Their Red Wings Blanked 3-0

DETROIT, April 17 (AP)—On the most startling come-back in Stanley Cup history the courageous Toronto Maple Leafs have squared hockey's world series at three games each and are prohibitive favorites to defeat the Detroit Red Wings Saturday at Toronto for the prized trophy they last won 10 years ago.

Never before has a cup contender dropped the first three games and then come on to win, but the Toronto team looked every inch a champion last night before a sellout crowd of 13,153 fans as they blanked Detroit, 3 to 0, for the their third successive triumph.

The under-dog Wings, using rough and tumble tactics, swept the first three games, two on Toronto ice, and were leading the fourth with less than 14 minutes to play. Then something happened. Toronto's top forward line, bolstered by young Don Metz who was only a forgotten substitute when the series opened, scored twice in less than seven minutes.

The next time out Metz bagged three goals as Toronto won again. Last night he seized upon a great opportunity 14 seconds after the second period opened and fired the first goal into Johnny Mowers' cage. The rest was easy. Toronto wore down the Wings and then Bob Goldham and Billy Taylor scored 32 seconds apart in the third frame.

If Metz hadn't been hustling, he might have missed the scoring chance. Sid Abel of Detroit, skating behind his own cage, slipped and lost possession of the puck. Metz scooted in ahead of the Detroit defenders and rapped the disc through an astonished Mowers.

Toronto then slipped into a defensive shell while the Detroiters attacked futilely. Midway of the final period Leafs began to take the offensive again, and the two scores were their quick reward.

One Happy Spot.

The Toronto dressing room was the scene of hilarious delight, but Coach Clarence (Hap) Day kept pinching himself, unabe to believe that it wasn't a dream.

"I'm no master mind," he said simply, "my team just went out there and hustled."

Hockey insiders were lavish in their praise, however, to the Toronto boss who boldly benched one of his top scoring stars, Gordon Drillon, in the fourth game to make room for Metz.

Last night's game was unique in that there were no penalties. In the first five games Detroit players had spent 111 minutes in the penalty box, and Toronto had sat out 46 minutes.' The players must have been weary under the drawn-out playoff routine because there wasn't even a good fist fight.

Jack Adams, suspended Detroit manager who Sunday had touched off a near-riot by swinging on Referee Mel Harwood, placidly witnessed the rout from his seat behind the Red Wing bench.

Another sellout crowd probably will see the final game at Toronto. Thus far the series had drawn 83,559 customers, and the individual share on the winning team is estimated at $1,200, some $400 more than the losing players will receive.

Something New

Detroit, April 17 (AP)

STANLEY CUP hockey fans who have seen everything from milady's shoe to cigar butts thrown on the ice, rubbed their eyes in disbelief last night at the Toronto-Detroit game.

Out of the stands behind the Detroit cage tumbled a three-pound live perch.

Flyers Polish Bearcats 7-4 In Opener

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, April 17 — (CP). — Coach Bill Touhey's design for conquest — three fleet forward lines based on mobile defence formations —established Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers public favorites to-day to bring the Capital City its first Dominion senior hockey crown since 1908.

The theory that three forward units would give Flyers additional striking power has been a paying proposition from the start and it stood up again last night as the Airmen uncovered enough finishing kick to defeat Port Arthur Bearcats 7-4 in the first game of their best-of-five Allan Cup final series.

Flyers followed the familiar pattern, allowing Bearcats to steal into a 4-2 lead midway through the second period. Then they unlimbered the heavy artillery, firing three goals in the last half of the second period and two more in the third without a reply from the Western invaders.

Centre Milt Schmidt of the Kraut line scored his first goal in six games to touch off the spree and Flyers never looked back. Before that the Bearcats had gone in fits and starts, building up their two-goal margin on two tallies by Bill McKenzie and one each by Albert Kelly and Steve Woochy.

Two Each To Dumart, Hellyer

Schmidt was overshadowed in the Ottawa scoring summaries by Woody Dumart and Buddy Hellyer, who collected two goals apiece. Johnny Acheson and Al Campbell contributed the other Air Force goals.

The Lakehead representatives, challenging for their fifth Allan Cup in 17 years, sorely missed Bert Laprade, their 23-year-old defence star. The oldest of three Leprade brothers arrived from Port Arthur yesterday but was unable to play because of an injury suffered in the final minute of the Western final against Kimberley Dynamiters.

"We can play a lot better than we did," said Coach Hugh O'Leary of Bearcats after the game. "Part of it was the ice and part the fact Bert wasn't out there."

O'Leary classifed the defence star as a doubtful starter in the second game of the series here Saturday. The second contest orignally was billed for Toronto ice but was transferred here to prevent conflict with the Stanley Cup series between Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings.

The season's second largest crowd —8,328 paid admissions — watched last night's game as Flyers posted the 18th victory in their last 19 starts. The other ended in a tie.

Yesterday's Stars

Ed. Head, Dodgers—Pitched five-hit ball until removed for pinch-hitter in ninth and himself knocked in one run in victory over Giants.

George Selkirk, Yankees — His pinch double scored two runs in the ninth for triumph over Senators.

Ernie Lombardi, Braves—Singled home both of Boston's runs, one of them in tenth inning to beat Phils 2-1.

Charley Wagner, Red Sox — Subdued Athletics with six-hit hurling while teammates staged 21-hit offensive.

Don Ross, Tigers — Hit eighth-inning home run for margin of victory over Indians.

Gerald Walker, Reds — Rapped home run to tie score in ninth inning and make possible triumph over Pirates.

Stan Musial, Cardinals — Collected three hits, including home run, to point way to victory over Cubs.

Vern Stephens, Browns—Hit second homer in two days and batted in three runs to lead assault on the White Sox.

Portage Shades Generals 8-7 For Second Win

By MARSHALL BATEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG, April 17 — (CP). — Portage La Prairie Terriers, climaxing a 24-undefeated-game record, packed speed, fight and determination into a wild Memorial Cup game here last night to nose out Oshawa Generals 8-7 and take a two-game lead in the best-of-five series.

Victors 5-1 in the opener Monday night, the Western Canada junior hockey champions, a galaxy of homebrew stars, capitalized on a single period penalty to whip home three goals in 38 seconds. That splurge wiped out a 2-0 deficit and from then on Terriers never were headed.

Generals just couldn't stop left winger Bill Gooden who figured in seven of the goals and came out of a third-period mixup with defenceman Jim Galbraith with nothing more than a major sentence.

Bell Right On

Smart goalkeeping by Gordie Bell again figured prominently in the victory as Oshawa, like Terriers, bagged four goals while they held a man advantage. Generals, however, lacked finish around the goal on several close plays.

Red Tilson, 17-year-old Reginan, proved to be Generals' opportunist, scoring four goals and displaying stick-handling wizardry that kept Terriers at bay several times when a teammate was in the penalty box.

More than 5,000 spectators saw Generals move ahead early in the opener while Stefaniw was serving a tripping sentence and increase their margin when McNaught circled the Portage goal and outguessed Bell.

But while Mortimer was serving his second minor penalty, shortly after Jack McDonald and "Bep" Guidolin ended major sentences for fighting, the Terriers opened up.

Gooden backhanded the disc by "Rube" Waddell twice and flipped a pass to Stefaniw for the third Portage goal, all scored before the Generals' captain came back.

Three to Gooden

Gooden sent the winners up 4-2 with a goal early in the second and bagged his fourth and fifth as Portage took a 6-3 lead mid-way in the period. Other Terriers marksmen were McDonald, with two, and Stefaniw, who make up one line with the left-wing ace.

Tilson's fourth counter at 16.36 in the closing frame capped an Oshawa rally. Ken McNaught, Ron Wilson and Ken Smith got the others for the eastern champions.

A 10-minute misconduct penalty to Guidolin for pushing referee Jock Stirling near the end of the second frame left Generals short on reserves for the first seven minutes of the last period.

However, Oshawa gained a three-minute advantage when Gooden served a major for fighting and their own player Wilson took a minor for Galbraith. When Wilson returned Oshawa moved within a goal of Terriers, 7-6, only to have McDonald bag the winner for Portage on a breakaway with less than seven minutes to play.

Minor Loop Sees Triple Play Feature Opener

By The Associated Press

A triple play, something many baseball circuits don't see in a season and most fans don't see in a lifetime, bobbed up yesterday on opening day in the International League, oldest of the minor loops.

In addition to the triple killing, the league lifted the curtain on its 59th season with two extra-inning games, three one-run decisions and 11 home runs to thrill 77,222 customers.

Jersey City, Syracuse, Buffalo and Rochester got off on the right foot, but the only winner having anything like an easy time was Rochester, which also was the victim of the triple play.

Baltimore's infield turned in the spectacular defensive manoeuvre, although it didn't keep the Orioles from going down before the Red Wings, 12-6.

The triple play came in the fourth inning at Baltimore. With runners on first and second, Sam Narron grounded to Bob Lemon, Baltimore third baseman. Lemon tagged the runner going to third, tossed to Sammy Bell to force the runner at second and Bell relayed the ball to first to catch Narron.

Seven home runs, four of them by the Red Wings, were among the 28 hits of the game. Ira Hutchinson went the distance for the victors, although he gave up a dozen hits. The Wings banged six Oriole hurlers for 14 blows.

Bisons Upset Bears

Buffalo Bisons invaded Newark and spoiled the inaugural of the defending champion Bears with a 5-4 decision in 10 innings.

Bob Boken's single with two out in the 10th scored Ed Kobesky with the winning run for Buffalo after Newark had tied the score in the ninth on a homer by Frank Kelleher.

At Jersey City, where 55,218 paid admissions failed to top the record of 61,164 set last year, the little Giants came from behind to tie the score in the ninth inning and defeat Montreal Royals, 3-2, in the 10th.

Austin Knickerbocker saved the day of the Giants with a 350-foot home run into the left field bleachers in the ninth. Then in the 10th, Joe Orengo walked, stole second and came home with the winning run when Buster Maynard singled to left field.

At Syracuse, Charles (Red) Barrett pitched seven-hit ball to lead the Chiefs to a 5-4 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

The margin of victory was a run scored on an error by Joe Mack, the only bobble of the game. Bobby Adams led the Chiefs' eight-hit attack on Tom Drake and Bill Brandt with a double and to singles.

Boston Larrups A's 19-4; Reds Win In 12

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Fantastic things happen during the first few days of every baseball season when the major league clubs are trying to shake out their spring kinks.

Take a day like yesterday.

Boston Red Sox scored 19 runs for what may stand all season as the largest score by one club. The victims were Philadelphia Athletics, who scored four runs just before exercise, certainly not for competition.

The Red Sockers, who had ripped out 24 hits in their first two games with the A's, made 21 yesterday and tallied in every turn at bat except the second inning. Ted Williams hit his second home run of the season and Dominic DiMaggio posted one.

This slugging was accomplished against nondescript pitching. Old Connie Mack started a young fellow named Fred Caliguiri, who pitched in a Class C league last year. After the Red Sox scored five runs in four innings, Mack sent out Lester McCrabb and when he couldn't stop the raid, the old gentleman simply refused to waste any more pitchers trying to keep down the score. Or maybe he was disciplining McCrabb for being a holdout a couple of months back.

Pirates Lose 8-7.

There were other wild games—in fact five of the day's eight encounters produced from 22 to 28 hits—but some extraordinary recognition ought to go to 12-inning struggle which Cincinnati captured 8-7 from Pittsburg to knock the Pirates out of their share of the National League lead.

At the end of the fourth inning the Pirates were leading 7-5. Gerald (Gee Gee) Walker finally tied the score, however, with a home run in the last of the ninth and the rivals rambled on into overtime with Manager Frank Frisch of the Buccaneers deploying his pitchers with customary abandon. Came the last of the 12th and Aldon Wilkie became the fifth Pirate flinger. He served a single to Frank McCormick and walked two men to load the base. When he sailed two wide ones at Eddie Joost, Frisch hastily rushed in big Max Butcher, who had outpitched Bucky Walters with a six-hit stint opening day. Butcher lost no time pitching two more balls and the game was over.

Going Great Guns

Brooklyn Dodgers won the rubber game of their series with New York Giants in the same fashion. Two rookies, Ed Head of the Dodgers and Lefty Dave Koslo of the Giants, were locked in a 2-2 tie coming into the ninth—chiefly because Manager Mel Ott had offset Koslo's wildness by personally knocking in both New York runs, first with a single and later with a home run. Koslo loaded the bases by giving two singles and a walk. Then forced across another run with a pass. Ace Adams relieved him and promptly yielded another walk and Brooklyn triumphed 4-2.

New York Yankees had a strange game—for the world champs. Managed Joe McCarthy gave the starting signal to Lefty Gomez, the veteran who led the American League in percentage last season with the help of Johnny Murphy. Washington wheedled one run out of Gomez in every one of the first five innings and the Yankee batters had to keep busy themselves to stay abreast the Senators. Marvin Breuer relieved Gomez and muzzled the Senators and in the ninth the Yanks set off their cannoncrackers—a single, two doubles and a triple—to win 8-5.

Rookie Vernon Stephens hit his second home run in two days as St. Louis Browns humiliated Chicago White Sox again 13-3. Rudy York hit his second round tripper in two days and Rookie Don Ress connected for one in the eighth inning to provide the margin of a 5-4 victory for Detroit over Cleveland.

St. Louis Cardinals won a track meet from the Chicago Cubs 11-6. Each team made 14 hits and three errors.

And who do you suppose had the tightest, best played contest of the day? Boston Braves and Philadelphia Phils. It went 10 innings and Boston triumphed 2-1 with old Ernie Lambardi driving in both the Braves runs with singles.

Allan, Memorial Playoff

TORONTO, April 17—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's annual meeting opens here today and facing the delegates are some of the most serious problems ever to confront the organization which controls Canada's national game as played by the amateurs.

Paramount among all the deliberations will be the determination to help Canada's war effort in every possible way. At the same time, however, the delegates will have to decide how the association is to carry on in the face of ever-increasing problems arising from the war.

Player Registration Down

Registration of players dropped nearly 50 per cent this year, total registrations being 13,000 as compared with 24,000 in the previous year.

Without a doubt schedules will be curtailed next winter and there is even the suggestion that the national playoffs for the Allan Cup and the Memorial Cup will have to be suspended. In the event that such a drastic step is necessary the various branches, no doubt, will derlare their champions and let it go at that.

Some fifty delegates are expected to participate in the deliberations. In addition to those from the branches, the United States amateur hockey interests will be represented by Tom Lockhart, Atlantic City, and Walter Brown, Boston.

The sessions opened this morning under the chairmanhip of President George Dudley of Midland with the first meeting for the purpose of organization and dealing with resolutions.

2 Threats Sent Drew Over Gambling Move

TORONTO, April 17.—(CP)—Conservative Leader George A. Drew said in the Ontario Legislature Thursday that he had been threatened because fo his crusade to break up the organized gambling in the areas adjacent to Toronto.

Speaking on first reading of a bill, purpose of which is to padlock any place wherein gaming and betting is said to be carried on, Col. Drew said it had been intimated to him from two sources stemming from Manny Feder "that it would be wise for him if he did not continue to press for the suppression of vice in the community."

Feder was named by the Conservative leader as the man who controlled gambling and bootlegging and who had on his payroll men who had served time for armed robbery."

"I am a Canadian." continued Col. Drew, "and I will not stop in my attempts to rid Canada of rats of this type." There was an outbreak of applause following this remark.

The Conservative leader, who had previously suggested that such places, instead of being padlocked, be dynamited "and blown out of existence," said perhaps the attorney-general should have some provincial police officers stationed in the house.

Racketeers In Galleries?

"The galleries might be interested," he remarked.

"They might make a pinch right now and solve the trouble," Leopold Macaulay (Con., York South) interjected.

This remark caused the members to glance at the galleries overhead in search of any one identified with the gambling gangs. It has been rumored since the issue was first introduced three days ago that some of the gangsters would pay a visit to the Chamber.

Earlier Col. Drew charged that Benny Littman, alias Robert Raymer, a man responsible for "some of the most vicious armed robberies" in the United States, was on the payroll of Feder.

Littman, he said, had been sentenced to serve 20 years in Auburn penitentiary, had been released before his term was up and had been deported to Canada March 12, 1937.

Littman, he said, was one of the men arrested in the Combine Club raid, where tommy guns and blackjacks had been found, "yet a man with a record like his received only a few months in jail."

"These reptiles," he declared, "must be got rid of."

The bill, introduced by Attorney-General Gordon Conant, in addition to having the "padlock" clause also provided for the establishing of a special "vice or anti-gambling" squad by the Ontario Provincial Police. This squad will be empowered to enter any municipality where it is believed local police are not taking effective action in the matter.

Reducing Bus Lines

TORONTO, April 17.—(CP)—Norman D. Wilson, regional representative of Transit Controller G. S. Gray, announced here today that certain bus lines soon would be eliminated to conserve rubber.

"This will be done where it is found that service can be given by street car or railway lines," he said.

Mr. Wilson explained long-haul traffic probably would be most affected, naming the Toronto-Montreal route as an example.

An editorial in the Tribune de Geneve pointed out that Laval's slogan, "Safeguard the integrity of the French Empire," does not square with the announced goals of Fascist diplomacy.

The Rome correspondent of another Swiss newspaper, the Corriere Del Ticino of Lugano, said some Rome circles are warning that France will suffer if Italy is left aside in an adjustment of Berlin-Vichy relations.

Must Sink Malta To Take It Says Captive

CAIRO, April 17—Fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns have shot down four more raiders over the British Mediterranean stronghold of Malta, it was announced last night, and a captured German pilot was said to have admitted, "The only way we can take Malta is to sink it."

(The London radio said that latest figures show nine Axis planes were downed in the Malta area Tuesday in addition to eight damaged. The fortress had five alerts Tuesday night, but the weather turned cloudy and enemy activity has been slight, the broadcast said.)

CAIRO, April 17—(CP).—After months of bombing, lately on a devastating scale, the Mediterranean island fortress of Malta and its military and civil population are unbowed. Axis planes that come over are still being shot down, morale is good.

Sir Walter Monckton, Acting Minister of State in the Middle East, returned from Malta and said:

"Our forces have their tails well up and don't appear unduly disturbed by the dive-bombing. They are far smarter and keener than any troops I've seen in a long time. They are all cheerful.

"The Malta civilians are hard put, of course, but are standing up to it very well. They are first class. One always heard the Maltese called 'mercurial,' but I think they can take it as well as London can."

Sir Walter told corresepondents that the German air force had caused great damage in Malta "but we have made it difficult for the Luftwaffe, too."

One day before dusk, he said, six large bomb craters were left on one air-field by the Germans. Before darkness set in the craters were filled in and the airdrome made useable.

"It takes a bit of doing," he commented.

The Maltese, he said, still like to dress up and parade the streets on Sunday. He saw the civilians emerge from shelters after a raid and parade as usual.

The R.A.F. announced successful attacks on enemy airdromes at Derna and Martuba in Libya. Objectives in the Bengazi and Barce areas were attacked. These operations cost the R.A.F. one plane, the communique categorically denying a German high command claim that nine British planes had been destroyed.

Sandstorms restricted activity on the ground in Libya.

Canadian Troops Open Vote On Plebiscite

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian active service voters, in four countries separated by thousands of miles of sea, begin marking their ballots in the manpower plebiscite on Thursday.

They are the first to vote "yes" or "no" to the question placed before the Canadian people by the Dominion Government: "Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

Civilian voters within Canada mark their ballots April 27, or, if they are engaged in businesses which require them to be away from home on voting day, at advance polls April 23, 24 and 25.

Jules Castonguay, chief plebiscite officer, said all arrangements for the services' vote have been completed, with special returning officers at the ready in Canada, the United Kingdom, Newfoundland and Jamaica.

Mr. Castonguay announced the names of scrutineers for the service vote who will have the actual duty of counting ballots under direction of the special returning officers. The scrutineers were appointed on nomination of party leaders in the House of Commons. Six are required for each of the four divisions within Canada and for the United Kingdom and Newfoundland, and two for Jamaica where the number of Canadian troops is smaller.

Mr. Castonguay said the scrutineers in the United Kingdom, Newfoundland and Jamaica were appointed from among Canadian officers on service in these areas.

Vote Till April 25.

The service voters will continue marking ballots until April 25, casting their votes before commissioned officers designated for such duty by commanding officers.

Like the ordinary voter, the serviceman will make by a cross his affirmative or negative answer to the question presented on the ballot paper.

When the ballot is marked he will fold it and place it in a special inner envelope. This inner envelope is handed to the commissioned officer in charge of the poll, who, in full view of the voter, will place it in an outer envelope addressed to the special returning officer for the area.

The completed envelope, already stamped, is handed to the service voter who himself is required to see that it is mailed.

Every operation relating to receiving of the envelopes containing the ballot papers will be conducted, under supervision of the special returning officer and his chief assistant, by the scrutineers who will work in pairs, one representing the persons interested in promoting an affirmative answer to the plebiscite question and the other representing those interested in promoting a negative answer.

The ballots received at the special returning officer's office will be parcelled in separate lots of 500 and will be stored until 8 p.m. on April 27 when actual counting of the service vote will be started.

The numbers in the morning raids indicated that the sweeps were as large as yesterday's assault by more than 400 planes, and the drone of high-flying squadrons included the deep roar of heavy bombers.

Although the planes swept out too high to be identified, they could be heard passing overhead for almost 15 minutes and then explosions began rolling back from across the Channel. Some reverberations were strong enough to rattle doors and windows on this side.

Within 10 minutes after the main force had crossed to the French side in the direction of Boulogne, some of the fighters were roaring back at less than 1,000 feet.

A report that suddenly-changing weather halted R.A.F. attacks on Germany last night indicated the night operations were on a smaller scale than the recent heavy air thrusts. The weather over the Dover Strait today was fine with visibility of more than three miles.

Bad Day For London

It is recalled that just a year ago today German raiders smashed at London with explosives ranging up to the "super-bomb" calibre, subjecting the city to the most wanton night attack of the war.

The unrelenting dusk-to-dawn attack left a great section of the metropolitan area under a heavy pall of dense smoke and casualties totalled more than 1,000. The sky seemed filled with Nazi bombers which were chased after a time by R.A.F. Navy fighters. What few breaks there were lasted no longer than two or three minutes at a time.

Up until the time the break in the weather came last night, the air offensive had been carried on non-stop for 60 hours up to dusk.

Between dawn and dusk yesterday alone more than 400 fighters were over northern France.

A Daily Express writer termed this air armada "almost enough to take on plane for plane every German fighter in western Europe."

While the R.A.F.'s major striking force idled during the night, a small number of German aircraft attacked points in the south of England and one penetrated to the west.

"Bombs which were dropped at several scattered points caused a small number of casualties and a little damage," a communique announced.

Authorities added that a British fighter patrol destroyed a German bomber off the east coast early this morning.

Four Factories Board Cheese

CAMPBELLFORD, April 17 (ENS)—Only four of the thirty-six factories listed by the Campbellford Cheese Board offered cheese when the Board held the earliest opening in its history on Thursday evening. A total of 261 cheese of which 169 were white and the balance colored, were sold. Though seven buyers chorused the opening bid of 20 cents which was subsequently boosted a quarter for all of the colored and seventy white, only two of them got any cheese since A. J. Meyers, who buys for Flavell and Co. of Lindsay was given first choice and he took all of the colored and 70 white at 20¼c, while P. J. Murphy got the balance, 99 white, for Hodgson and Rosson, Montreal. Offerings were as follows: Empire 39c, Hoards 70w; Menie 31w, Rylstone 29w, Trent Valley 45w, 53c.

OBITUARY

DUNCAN MORRISON.

TWEED, April 17—(ENS).—Following a short illness, the death of Duncan Morrison, a well-known business man in Tweed, occurred in Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Morrison had not been in the best of health for some years, and his condition necessitated his removal to that institution last week. Originally coming from Stratford, he had been in business in this village for many years and was, at the time of his death, probably the oldest merchant operating a store in Tweed. Of a quiet and retiring disposition, he made many friends during his lifetime.

Mr. Morrison was one of the most devoted followers of sport in the village, and while his health permitted, he was a regular attendant at all baseball and hockey games played. He was a member of St. Cathagh's Roman Catholic Church.

BABY KINLIN.

TWEED, April 17—(ENS).—The five months' old infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kinlin, township of Hungerford, died in Kingston on Wednesday evening. The child was taken ill this week and was taken to Kingston for treatment on Wednesday morning.

BERN—(CP).—The entire Polish town of Katowice, in upper Silesia, may be transferred 30 miles south as the Germans consider the rich coal deposits beneath it are worth the gigantic job of moving the 200,000 population.

Light Cattle Run Bids Lower On Toronto Mart

TORONTO, April 17.—(CP).—The cattle run was light on the livestock market here this week with 3,100 head reported. Trade was dull with bids lower from packers and with most of the sales made to small butchers at prices steady to 25 cents higher than last week. Veal calves, hogs, sheep and lambs were generally steady for the week.

Weighty steers sold at $9.75 to $11 in cattle trade with butcher steers mostly $9.75 to $10.50 and some common steers as low as $9. Heifers were mostly $9 to $9.85 with a few at $10. Fed calves sold at $10 to $11.50. Butcher cows sold from $6 to $8 with a few at $8.25. Canners and cutters were $4 to $5.50 Bulls sold mostly from $8 to $9 Light stockers of fair quality sold at $8.50 to $9.50 with feeders up to $9.75. Good milkers and springers were steady at $100 to $115 each.

Veal calves were steady at $14 to $15 for choice with common lights downward to $7.50. Bulk of calves sold between $9 and $13.50.

Hogs were unchanged at $15.15 dressed for the basic grade with B3 grades also selling at $15.15 (although B5 grades are selling for the basic price they are not eligible for the provincial hog subsidy). Sows sold at $10.75 to $11 dressed.

Sheep and lamb prices were steady with best quality lambs selling at $12.75 with common downward to $10. There were no spring lambs of any account offered. Sheep were steady at $4.50 to $7.50 cwt. according to quality.

MORE ABOUT—

Expect Laval

British forces out of Syria, or send warships and troop transports to the African west coast to try to wrest control of equatorial Africa from the followers of Gen. Charles DeGaulle, or strengthen Vichy's hold on strategic Dakar.

Whatever Laval may be planning—especially if his plans involve the Western Hemisphere possessions of France (Martinique, Gaudeloupe, French Guiana—it is emphasized in high quarters here that the United States is ready for swift action and will not hesitate to act.

In making his calculations, Laval also must face the fact there is more than one French fleet.

There is the fleet composed of vessels actually under Vichy's effective control, consisting, at last reports, of five battleships, about a dozen cruisers, more than 50 destroyers and perhaps an equal number of submarines.

There are other French vessels, however, which are either serving alongside the ships of Britain's fleet, are demilitarized, or are lying in waters controlled by British or American guns.

If the Vichy fleet came into German hands or under German control Britain obviously would not hesitate to press into Free French service ships lying demilitarized at Alexandria, and the United States similarly could support a Free French seizure of French ships at Martinique.

Fewer Records

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP)—Leading representatives of the phonograph recording industry in the United States said today that curtailment of shellac supplies from the East Indies probably would bring about tremendous drop in the number of records produced in 1942. Diversion of shellac to vital war industries has begun already, and the war production board is expected to issue further curbs on its use.

Dewan Opposes Beef Embargo In Address To Breeders

TORONTO, April 17—An embargo on Canadian beef cattle shipped to markets in United States would be a "most unfortunate solution" to the reported threatening shortage of beef for domestic use, Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, declared yesterday. He was addressing the Canadian National Live Stock Records Committee, which met in annual session at the Royal York Hotel.

A more flexible price ceiling for farm produce than the one now in force, was advocated by the Ontario Cabinet Minister. He maintained that if the present price ceiling remained rigid, there would develop a shortage in some farm commodities, because the growers would refuse to raise crops with a low selling value.

"I hope that you will not accept from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board or any other authority any prices which re not fair to our farm people all across Canada," he said.

F. S. Grisdale, Deputy Co-Ordinator, Food Administration, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said some modifications of the price ceiling regulations had already taken place and that some produce had been taken out from under the price ceiling. He mentioned the case of lambs, the price of which had increased "considerably."

The problem connected with the sale of beef, he believed, could be solved either by the middle man or the distributor absorbing the "squeeze" or through Government bonuses similar to those now paid to farmers for milk.

James Douglas of Caledonia, Ont., representative of the Canadian Shorthorn Association, was elected chairman of the Canadian National Live Stock Records Board. P. J. McEwen of Wyoming, Ont., of the Canadian Swine Breeders' Association was chosen vice-chairman.

Others named to the committee were Lieutenant-Colonel Bartley Bull of Brampton, Canadian Jersey Cattle Club; S. J. Chagnon, St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, Canadian Cattle Breeders' Association; Gilbert McMillan, Huntingdon, Quebec, Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association; J. J. E. McCague, Alliston, Ontario, Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association; W. J. Russell, Unionville, Canadian Shorthorn Association. R. G. T. Hitchman, Ottawa, was re-elected secretary, while A. R Dawson was renamed assistant secretary.

10 Days For Assault

CORNWALL, Ont., April 17 (CP)—Fined $5 and costs for not attending military parades, Pte. Claude Snider, second battalion, S.D. and G. Highlanders, in police magistrate's court today, poked his elbow into the face of Lieut. G. A. Haworth, Battalion Adjutant who had testified against him The blow was of sufficient force to make the officer's nose bleed.

An immediate charge of assault was preferred and the belligerent soldier is starting to serve a term of ten days in jail.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from McDermid & Jury or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended, and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money. —(Advt.)

MAIN STREET TOPICS

HEARD AT BORDEN.

Peterborough boys stationed at Camp Borden, 70 miles north of Toronto, and 15 miles from Barrie, report radio reception from CHEX as very good. Lieut. Don Weese of the Highlanders, home for the week-end, says he is a regular listener.

FRACTURES LEG.

Word has been received by Mrs. A. Coleman, 34 Western Avenue, that her son Gnr. J. P. Coleman of the 4th Battery, R.C.A., overseas has suffered a compound fracture of the left leg while on duty. Coleman is now in the hospital, and in a letter home, he states everything is coming along fine. All of his friends are requested to write him and thus help to while away the long hours in the hospital.

THEY WANT HELP.

Lieut. Bill Ovens of the 4th Field Batery, R.C.A., has requested that parents, friends, brothers or sisters of men who formerly belonged to the 4th Battery, but who are now serving in other units, turn in the names and addresses of these men to the 4th Field Battery Orderly Room, Peterborough Armouries. It is hoped to compile a complete list so that cigarettes can be sent regularly to these men, and a sum of money has already been obtained for this purpose. A great number are now serving in the anti-aircraft defences in England.

SAVE THE RUBBER.

Housewives engaged in the annual spring housecleaning are asked to place all old hot water bottles, rubbers, galoshes, rubber mats, pieces of auto tubes, tires, or any other rubber articles, even a nipple from a baby's bottle, in a carton, and save them for the local Salvage Corps. The truck is out every day collecting all kinds of salvage, but the need for rubber exceeds all others.

SALESMEN CHEER

Travellers, and guests at all hotels formed little galleries in semicircles of chairs around radios on Thursday night, and their cheers echoed through the hotels when Toronto players scored a goal in the Stanley Cup playoffs. The general view seems to be among the commercial men, that the Maple Leafs have the silverware in the bag.

NO POLICE COURT.

For the first time in weeks there was no session of police court this morning. Magistrate Langley, however, has a heavy docket at Campbellford this afternoon. Among the cases to be heard is one involving the recent theft of an automobile from J. L. McKeever, 516 Homewood Avenue, stolen from Murray Street on the night of the dog show in the Armories.

BICYCLE LICENSE HELPFUL.

Benefit of the Peterborough bicycle licensing system was realized this morning when a motorist reported to Provincial Traffic Officer McClure that he had picked up a bicycle that had apparently been dropped off a truck near the intersection of Highways 28 and 7A. The license number showed that the machine was the property of Wallace Finnie, 584 Charlotte Street. Without the markers the wheel might not have been identified for weeks.

ON THE JOB.

Mrs. Bob Shill and Mrs. A. C. Wolff were making the rounds with the Salvage truck this morning, and at 11 o'clock when they reached the Y.W.C.A. they had the truck piled high with papers, magazines, scrap metal and rubber. The women engaged in this work have worked up an efficient organization and their contribution to the war effort is a material one, not just a pocketful of dreams.

GETS COMMISSION

It was learned today that Sgt. Pilot John McMillan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom McMillan, Rubidge street, who received his wings a few days ago, has been awarded his commission as pilot officer in view of his high rating on the course. At the same graduation Bill White, of Scotland, whose father was a boyhood chum of Jack Smith, local barber, also received his wings and was posted to duties in Canada as an instructor. This young man recently visited the Smiths in Peterborough.

CARDS TO PRISONERS

Air letter cards are now available for correspondence with prisoners of war in Germany and Italy. A fee of ten cents prepaid by postage stamp will cover air conveyance in Canada, and so on to Lisbon and beyond.

TURNS BACK THE CLOCK.

Going back to the horse and buggy days of transportation is Dr. Arthur Johnston, local veterinary. He has purchased a rubber-tired cart of ancient vintage, and after a new paint job will harness a team to the outfit and get in a lot of mileage. Dr. Johnston had quite a hunt to get the kind of a vehicle he wanted, for not many of them are on the market now, and he finally came across the cart accidentally while making a business call in the country.

SWELL PAINT JOB

Reg. Turner is through bicycling. He tried it as a concession to the gasoline and rubber emergency, but a little of that pedalling about was plenty. He has turned back to the motor car, and as an economy he bought a 1927 jalopy for $15 and fixed it up with a shiny paint job that he thinks is a beauty. Thirty miles or more to the gallon, about twice the mileage of his own car! What if it is a bit noisy No one would think of complaining in a time such as this, and according to Mr. Turner he considers himself lucky to have the ancient Ford with tires and gas.

Police Are Asked To Watch Speeders

Peterborough city police as well as the provincial officers in this district have been requested by Attorney-General Conant to see that the 40-mile-an-hour speed limit which comes into force on May 1st is strictly enforced. Significant feature is the instruction that speeding charges are to be laid under the new Federal order-in-council, instead of under the Highway Traffic Act.

Under the Federal law the penalties are severe. A fine of from $15 to $50 or ten days in jail or both fine and imprisonment is the penalty for a first offence, while for a second offender, the fine is from $25 to $100 or 15 days in jail, or both fine and imprisonment. If anybody wants to try it the third time the fine is stepped up to a minimum of $50 and a maximum of $200 or 30 days in jail. On top of that the courts can cancel the driving permit of the speedster for a period not to exceed six months.

Gordon K. Fraser Urges Marking Of Ballot "Yes"

"Vote 'Yes' and put it right on the front door step of the Government to give Canada a total all out war effort," urged Gordon K. Fraser, member for Peterborough West in the Federal parliament in a radio address over station CHEX at noon today in support of an affirmative vote in the coming plebiscite.

"As perhaps many of you who are listening to my voice today know Parliament will be in session when the vote on the plebiscite is taken April 27th—and members of Parliament will not be home to vote—so—will have to vote in Ottawa," said Mr. Fraser. "Therefore I will not be able to get around the riding and tell the people just how I am going to vote. Which is a Yes Vote. I will tell you why I am voting Yes later on in this talk. Knowing that I would not be able to get around the riding I engaged this time on Station CHEX so that would have a chance to tell you just what I think of this plebiscite.

"I might say that on Monday afternoon there was an editorial in the Examiner in regards to the plebiscite saying: "Members of Parliament, mayors, and leading citizens are organizing in other ridings, what is the trouble with Peterborough West?" You know and I know that there is no trouble with Peterborough West and that every citizen of Peterborough West is a true and loyal subject of Their Majesties, the King and Queen—God bless them. And these loyal citizens I know are all for an all out war effort. They want no half way measures. They want a total war effort. An effort that will mean a great deal of sacrifice on their part, and they are willing and ready to make that sacrifice, however great. The greater the sacrifice now the sooner this war of survival will be brought to a victorious conclusion by England and her Allies."

Doesn't Favor Plebiscite

"I have never at any time been in favor of holding this plebiscite. I am not in favor of it now. I say this with all the emphasis and sincerity at my command. I feel that it is up to the Government to drop the plebiscite and face the responsibility which really belongs to Parliament. To me this plebiscite is objectionable and has been right from the time that it was first announced. I feel that it is evasion of responsibility. The Government however has stuck to its guns, or plebiscite whichever you wish, despite all protests from every part of Canada, and vigorous opposition in the House of Commons."

Personally I feel that if the Government would show as much foresight as they have backsight and forget the plebiscite the people of Canada would be a darned sight better satisfied. We are going to have it however and therefore we must make the best of it, and make it a success—in other words make it unanimous. The Government wants a yes vote, so why not a yes right across Canada?

"I feel that although we should not be put in the position today that we are, I can not take the responsibility of advising anyone to vote "No." That would help to tie the hands of the Government, and you and I wish the Government to have free hands so that we can have an unhampered all out war effort. We want no strings or red tape on that effort."

Our Lives Art At Stake

At the present time we have conscription or mobilization, whichever you wish to call it of manpower and resources, and with the present high taxes one might say mobilization of wealth. We are lucky however that we have these taxes and the money to pay, because if we were under Jap or German rule we would have no option. What we have would be taken away from us and instead of you and I working for salaries or wages we would be slaves, with no rights or privileges at all.

"We have at present conscription or compulsory service. You know that is true. The youth of Canada is drafted for training in military camps and stays in the army until this war is over, and you can rest assured that if men are needed in England, Russia, Africa or the U.S.A., these men will go—whether the vote on the plebiscite is an overwhelming Yes, or No.

Plebiscite or no plebiscite, they will go.

"However a yes vote will show our Allies that they are not fighting in vain. A yes vote will show them that we are with them body and soul. The Allies are giving their all. Why not Canada? Vote Yes, and put it right on the front door step of the Government to give Canada a total all out war effort."

Children Can Take It

LONDON, Ont., April 17—(CP).—In England children stand up best under bombings, women are next and men come last, Dr. Clarence M. Hincks, general director of the Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene, told a study group meeting of doctors here.

On a recent trip to England he found war neurosis scarce among civilians, and hospital wards for nervous patients practically empty. Exposure to bombing death seems to have produced a calming effect rather than a benumbed condition.

Orange Leaders Meet in Convention In Cobourg

20 Men Sought To Join Up With Rangers

With the publishing of the third list to-day of rejects men who have offered themselves for service with the Prince of Wales Rangers, the names of 20 more young men are made known to the public through the medium of the press.

Recruiting officials pointed out that the purpose in publishing the list is from the standpoint that these men offered themselves for service, thereby showing that they were willing to make the same sacrifices as those who have been accepted. However, in their individual cases, they are to be taken in every respect the same as those who now wear the uniform. They show their willingness and that is all any man can do, it was stated.

From the physical viewpoint, these men, because they have been rejected for active service, does not mean to say that they can not be of use in industry, or for that matter, at any of their respective trades. Medical examinations for entry into any of the branches of Canada's active service are thorough and complete. The services can use men of high physical standing to stand up to the rigors of warfare in its many phases. And for these reasons, the twenty men, whose names follow, were rejected.

Hard to Take.

Because these men were rejected it did not gladden their hearts that they must remain at home and read in the press the history that will be written by Peterborough's own regiment, The Prince of Wales Rangers.

The list follows (former members of the P.W.R. Reserve Regiment are designated by PWR):

Sergt. Walter R. Perry PWR, 447 George Street, Peterborough; Alexander Hunter Gawley, 227 Sherbrooke Street, Peterborough; Joseph James Devlin, 21 Cricket Place, Peterborough; Matthew Emile Didero, PWR, 573 Paterson Street, Peterborough; Harold Vincent Lavery, 413 Sheridan Street, Peterborough PWR; Leonard Everett Mahood, 175 Stewart Street, Peterborough; Freeman Fred Parks, 240 Simcoe Street, Peterborough; John Waldron, 100 Stewart Street.

Dougald Campbell Brown PWR, 715 George Street, Peterborough; Arthur Copson, 390 E[illegible]on Avenue, Peterborough; William Robinson Halstead, 20 New Chamberlain Street, Peterborough; Percy Jobb, Bowmanville; William McMullen, 629 Rogers Street, Peterborough PWR; Leslie Sine Benedict, 32 Gettes Street Belleville; Percy Harold Maguire, R.R. 4, Frankford.

Sergt. Walter Perry, whose name appears at the top of the list, was one of the first members of the Prince of Wales (R.) Regiment to volunteer for active service. His record with the regiment has been one in which he demonstrated much ability and enthusiasm, but, unfortunately, his category was not sufficiently high to warrant his acceptance into the active regiment. He graduated from Upper Canada College in 1938.

Upon his return from Connaught Camp last summer, it was found he required a period of rest. It was hoped that his category would have come up when he applied for enlistment. However, members of the unit are still hopeful that he may yet be able to be with them when the Prince of Wales Rangers takes its place among the many fine units of the Canadian Active Army as a fully trained sergeant.

Sergt. Perry's record dates back to August 18, 1940 when he joined the regiment. He attended Exhibition Park Camp the same year and, in October, 1940, he was appointed lance - corporal. The following March, Perry was an acting corporal. A month later, he was a qualified sergeant Inf. M.G.

When the regiment went to Connaught Camp last summer, Sergt. Perry was appointed acting company sergeant-major for the period of camp and was reverted to the rank of acting sergeant on July 21, 1941. On January 1 this year, he was confirmed as sergeant.

Juicy Steaks Attract War Earnings

The shortage of beef is largely caused by an unusually high demand. More people with more money are eating more beef. That is virtually the way a high official of Wartime Prices and Trade Board explains the present shortage.

Production is said to be even better than normal, but the consuming public has more money to spend, and they like juicy steaks. They don't realize that they hold the well known middle position against which both ends will be played. And, if the present pressure of demand continues, the group who will suffer most will be the folks who like their steaks and are willing to dig down and pay for them. They could turn thumbs down on beef until the flurry passes, sacrifice their appetites to that extent remembering the fact that the people of England can get only an egg a month.

But, in this land of plenty the neighbors have been raiding the beef market with money flowing from the wartime munitions industry, and the danger is pointing in the direction of disrupting the whole experiment of price control.

United States meat prices are riding the unrestricted and unceilinged market, and a considerable quantity of Canadian beef has been crossing the line. Probably the government hestitates to check that production outlet.

Figures from Ottawa include these indications of market conditions: 20,000 head of cattle are being slaughtered weekly; 6,000 head are going to the United States. The American beef import quota came due April 1, and larger Canadian exports have cut into old storage stocks which were 5,200,000 pounds larger than at the same time last year.

Monthly Specials Cut By Railways

Both railways are suspending their monthly special rate offerings. Probably you won't read anything about that decision, but if you are wondering why nothing has been said about them this month the fact is that these features are being discontinued.

The weekend reduced fares will still be available. The Examiner was informed that one of the factors eliminating the half-fare specials was the demand they made on the locomotive pool. Some of the regular trains out of the big cities had to be run in two or three sections, both ways, and that meant a transfer of engines from the freight to passenger service for three or four days.

NOT THAT BAD

"Heavens, Harley, is the tire situation so bad that you have started to sell horse-shoes." This was the surprised comment of one city dweller who walked into Harley Keefer's store on water street Thursday, but the man was wrong for the pair of horse-shoes on the counter were not actually horse-shoes at all but were quoits shaped like horse-shoes and used in that grand old game of barnyard golf. The staff got quite a chuckle out of this little bit of by-play, more amused by the fact that anyone would consider there was a horse in existence with a foot big ough to accommodate the over-size quoits.

Farmers Ready To Commence Spring Seeding

Peterborough farmers will begin next week a new season of production, and about all they are asking of fortune is a fair share of that element of chance and uncertainty commonly esteemed as the break.

Ralph Garbutt of Smith, told the Examiner this morning that he expected, to begin sowing oats tomorrow, and Roy Whittington of South Monaghan, is all set to get going early next week.

Fields on the higher lands have dried out and are nearly all ready to receive the grain.

Levelling off the furrows is one of the details of soil preparation, presumably discing the furrows that were left in last fall's plowing.

Then there is some harrowing and general cultivation, rolling meadows and so on, all routine finishing touches that are simply part of the job of farming, fundamentals about which city folks know next to nothing.

"The crop was all in before the end of April last year," Mr. Whittington recalled.

Farmers know that in one way and another the country is expecting much of them this year, and probably some of them feel they belong in the category Premier Churchill designated in the classic phrasing "so much expected of so few."

Farm labor is scarce, but there may be some kind of relief by the time of harvest. Right now the job is being started by the regulars, and by the end of the month they expect the bulk of the planting job will be done. Then, if there is no repetition of the prolonged dry season of last year, farmers are satisfied that some how or other they will get the harvesting done.

Throughout the district the spring campaign will be broadly under way next month, and the agricultural season of 1942 will be entrusted to the elements and the friendly soil.

Local Council of Women Hears Talks On War Service Organizations

The Local Council of Women held its regular meeting in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. E. Wand, in the chair. Two conveners, Mrs. H. Rehill and Mrs. W. H. Morton were appointed for the tea to be held on April 28. It was decided to procure a program of films on Women's War Work from the National Film Board, to be shown at the tea.

It was announced that the Children's Aid Society annual meeting would be held Tuesday, April 28 in St. John's Parish Hall, and that Hon. F. Oliver, Minister of Public Welfare would be the guest speaker.

It was also announced that the ladies of the Lily Lake Association would hold a public auction sale at the home of Mr. D. Wilson on June 3, and are asking for donations, which may be left at the home of Mrs. J. A. Middleton, 569 Park street north. Already a calf, two cords of wood, and a separator have been donated.

The semi-annual meeting of the provincial council of women, to be held in Hamilton May 25, was announced and possibility of any members attending was discussed.

Mrs. Wand made an appeal for a better attendance at the meetings of the W.C.T.U., stressing the importance of this work at the present time.

The meeting was addresed by the president of four war service organizations, who explained the aims and objects of their particular group of workers. The first speaker was Mrs. J. G. Wharry, who spoke on the Canadian Women's Voluntary services. Mrs. Wharry explained that the C.W.V.S. would serve as a supply depot, where help might be found to assist any war service group, or give their services wherever they were required. Each woman who enrolls with the C.W.V.S. gives a complete record of herself, giving a list of her abilities and training, the times when she is most likely to be free, and what courses she would like to take, if any. The enrollment made in 1939 of Canadian women has been found to be hopelessly out of date, although the C.W.V.S. has access to them, and women are being asked to register again.

Courses will be given as they are needed. The C.W.V.S. does not propose to give any other courses in First Aid and Home Nursing as these are already adequately covered by the Red Cross and St. John's Ambulance courses. Courses will be given in subjects which are demand but for which no organization has yet supplied a course.

The C.W.V.S. has already been useful in supplying workers for various purposes. Sorters and drivers have been sent to the Salvage Depot, typists have been supplied to the Armouries, and a group of women have, through the C.W.V.S., been sent to the Red Cross sewing rooms. The city council voted $200 to the C.W.V.S. on which to prove their worth to the community, and the Bank of Toronto has donated an office on its second floor.

Mrs. R. J. Kearns spoke on the work of the Salvage Committee stressing especially the salvage of all available scrap rubber and metal. The domestic use of rubber must be curtailed and all supplies of scrap rubber must be brought in. So important is this that a fine of $5,000 can be imposed for hoarding scrap rubber. All disused rubber articles are valuable, regardless of the size of their rubber content, since all the rubber in a mixture can be salvaged by means of electric magnets.

As to metals, Mrs. Kearns began by explaining that tin cans are not wanted in Peterborough because we have no means of processing them, as Toronto has. Apart from tin cans, however, all scrap metal is valuable and should be collected. Tin from old cars, old water tanks, old kitchen utensils, and all the old metal you can find, of any description, except tin cans, should be sent to the salvage.

Collecting is still a problem. The younger people who have worked on the salvage are gradually being called away, to industry or the armed forces, and the work is falling more and more on older people. Men are needed as well as women, for much of the work is too heavy for women.

Mrs. Kearns appealed to the members to approach their neighbors and have a system for collecting the neighborhood salvage at regular intervals, thus making some kind of collection system possible, and saving considerable time, gasoline and wear and tear on the tires.

Mrs. W. E. Dorrington, Sr., spoke on behalf of the Peterborough and District Auxiliary to the Navy. She explained that it was an association, that anybody who was interested in the Navy might join. As far as possible the work of this organization will go to the boys of Peterborough and district who are serving in the Navy. Ladies who wish to knit for the Navy may get wool at Duffus every Friday from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Mrs. George Graham spoke briefly on the newly formed Women's Auxiliary, R.C.A.F. This organization has an active membership of 46 relatives of men serving in the R.C.A.F. Those who are interested but who have no relatives in the Air Force, may become associate members. Already cigarettes have been sent to Peterborough boys in the Air Force. A tea and sale of home-cooking will be held in May.

"Open School" At Queen Mary Interests Parents

Many parents and guests took advantage of "Open School" on Thursday to visit the class rooms at Queen Mary School and view the work on display and discuss the progress of their children with the teachers.

Mrs. C. H. Crowe and Mrs. D. A. Loucks received the guests at the door while at the different rooms they were made welcome by class mothers, Mrs. V. Stanton, Mrs. W. S. Robertson, Mrs. C. B. Waite, Mrs. H. H. Dinsdale, Mrs. T. H. Taylor, Mrs. R. A. Baker, Mrs. G. Moncrief, Mrs. J. Fanning, Mrs. H A. Mitchell, Mrs. R. E. Hinton, Mrs. G. Reader.

The tea table, covered with a charming lace cloth, was centred with a potted plant whose pink blooms matched the tapers in the silver candelabra. Tea was poured by Miss E. Deyell, Mrs. D. Telford, Mrs. T. J. Carley, Mrs. L. H. Ingram, Mrs. C. L. Upper had charge of the tea table, assisted by Mrs. H. K. Clifton, Mrs. H. R. Sills, Mrs. F. H. Jobbitt, Mrs. B. Ottewell, Mrs. W. Derry, Mrs. J. Heffernan, Mrs. F. Leslie and Mrs. W. G. Fanjoy.

A home-cooking table which represented the culinary efforts of many members of the Queen Mary Home and School Association, yielded a good cash return. In charge of the home cooking were Mrs. O. Smith, Mrs. W. Archibald, Mrs. W. W. Head, Mrs. L. Vass.

A display of knitted articles by the war relief committee, as well as a collection of smart two-piece little girls' dresses with serviceable cloth skirts and printed blouses, attracted much attention. Mrs. G. H. Moore is war work convener.

Work of V.O.N. Increasing As Services Become Known

The monthly meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held in the council chambers on Wednesday evening, James Dutton presiding. The financial statement for the past three months was read and approved. Delegates were chosen to represent the Peterborough branch at the 44th annual meeting to be held in Ottawa on May 8th and 9th. Mrs. J. Lynch and Miss C. Maddaford, one of the nurses, are to attend Miss Rose was requested to attend the refresher course at the School of Nurses, University of Toronto, in May. Representatives were also chosen for the Board of Governors, National Office.

Miss Ross in her report emphasized the fact that during the past seven months there has been a decided increase in the work done by the nurses in our city. This increase has been especially marked in the medical and surgical field and in the service to mothers home from the hospitals with new babies During the past three months 261 residents have received 1,631 visits, an increase of 477 visits over the corresponding months of last year. Miss Ross brought out the fact that the work itself is the best advertisement and calls are being made on new homes every day. The Victorian Order have nursed in several of the war time houses, a number of these families being new residents in Peterborough. Some of these people have known of the services of the V.O.N. in other communities, while some calls have come directly through the doctors. "At almost any time," stated Miss Ross, "we are nursing in homes where we feel that our service, while perhaps not indispensable, is definitely to be desired and in the indigent case saves dollars for the city treasury as well as releasing hospital beds for more urgent cases. Several illustrative cases were cited where great help has been given to those who were unable to afford any nursing service; others who can pay only part of the nursing cost while many are able to meet the whole payment for the visit.

During the past monh visits totalled 590 with 64 new patients registered; two operations were assisted with in the home and 7 night calls were answered.

A demonstration of a pre-natal home visit in conjunction with the public health nurse was given by

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

THE STORY: Returning on a train to Montreal from a week-end vacation, Myra Mack, a plain, likeable young stenographer, strikes up conversation with a Canadian lieutenant. Their introduction is mutual admiration of a pretty girl on the station platform.

"I know where I've seen you!" said the soldier suddenly, snapping his fingers as his memory obeyed him. "You're the girl Ferdy Lorton painted, against a background of Laurentian hills."

Myrna stared at him. "Don't tell me you know Ferdy?"

"I do. He's a great friend of mine."

Myra nodded. "It doesn't surprise me. He's a great friend of most every man in Montreal."

"I'd better introduce myself. Nigel Monkhouse, lieutenant, Royal Canadian Artillery. I saw your picture first in the Spring Exhibition."

"Luckily most of my friends didn't recognize me," said Myra. "I'd never have lived it down. He had a crazy idea that there was some relation between all those bumps and hills in the Laurentians and my face." Myra laughed. "Maybe he was right at that."

"Ferdy thinks the world of you."

"In a purely platonic way, of course," said Myra. "Now if you really want to meet that rhapsody in blue, he is the man to help you. He not only knows every man in town, but sooner or later he seems to meet all the prettiest girls."

Lieutenant Nigel Monkhouse puffed at his cigaret. He nodded slowly. "It gets me. I don't know how he does it. With that sandy hair and that grin of his, I suppose. He's not tall, he's not dark, he's not even handsome, he looks at times as though he slept out all night on the tiles, and yet he always seems to have a pretty girl or two in love with him. There should be hope for me."

He said it half humorously but Myra took him up.

"I doubt it," she said. "You're a nice enough boy, but you've got no nerve. The ones that speak to me like you did are always the ones that would run a mile before speaking to a girl like Blue Hat on the station."

Nigel Monkhouse blushed and grinned. "Well there's something so comfortable about you . . . no nonsense and all that sort of thing."

Myra shook her head without the flicker of a smile on her face. "No. That's not it. I know your type. You look at a pretty face and fall for it and it frightens you so much you rush right into the arms of a motherly sort to tell her all about it. But that's the way it goes. You pay for your weakness in this world. Here we are at Montreal West and you could have been sitting with the redhead all this while in an aura of ecstasy, instead of with a deadpan like mine. That is if you'd had enough nerve."

There the incident might have ended. The conversation made the rest of the journey to Montreal go very quickly. Myra said a quick farewell to Lieutenant Monkhouse on the station station platform and made her way to St. James Street and the office.

The offices of Consolidated Steel were even more busy than usual with war work and Myra was soon plunged into the Monday thick of it. She was secretary to Mr. Macallum and the more his work grew the more hers increased. By eleven o'clock she had forgotten about the girl at the station and the shy young officer in the train. In fact she had forgotten all about the week-end by noon and it seemed as though she had never done anything but work.

But two interesting things intruded into the busy morning. Her young sister telephoned to say that her brother had arrived home suddenly from England. That was important news. He was Myra's favorite brother and had been overseas with the First Canadian Division since the first sailing; his return was unexpected. But apparently he had been commissioned in England and was one of a number of officers sent back for posting to the Third Division.

The other thing that happened was not so important.

"Miss Mack!" Mr. Macallum's voice startled her from a steep stack of papers she was sorting. "I want you to slip over to Ramsom's, the stockbroker! I want you to hand this to him personally. It is very important and I want it to get to him quickly."

He handed her a bulky envelope and in a few minutes she was out in St. James Street wondering how so many people managed to find time to walk about while she was spending all her days at a desk.

It was quiet in the stockbroker's office and she was told to go straight through to Mr. Ramsom's office. As she reached the door it opened and she bumped right into the girl who was coming out. She gasped and the girl gasped, then the girl apologized but Myra only stared. Miss Blue Hat—the girl on the station platform.

Myra went past her and delivered her envelope. Mr. Ransom asked her to wait outside for a return envelope which would be ready in a minute. In the outer office she saw the girl at a desk and crossed to to her.

"Sorry I banged into you so hard just now."

The girl smiled and Myra noticed that her eyes were a clear blue green. "That's all right. It was my fault."

Myra shook her head. "I saw you on the platform at Lakeside this morning."

"I remember," said the girl. "You were with that tall officer."

"Not exactly," said Myra, "but it seemed to work out that way because we were talking of you."

The girl blushed and Myra put that down to the credit side. She continued. "He thought you were the answer to a soldier's dream, but I decided you weren't interested in men."

The girl looked up in surprise. "Why not?" she said frankly.

Myra wrinkled her nose and looked down at the piquant face. A faint mist of freckles added definite attraction to the short nose.

"Why not?" echoed Myra slowly. "Well, if you ask me, I should say you make up to compete with women rather than to interest men."

A smile flickered for a moment on the girl's face. "You might explain."

"Simple," said Myra. "Look at your lips and your eyes. If you had a face like mine you'd need twice as much as that, but with a face like yours you need about a quarter of it."

There was no time to say any more because a boy had brought an envelope to Myra who smiled a farewell to the girl and moved to the door.

The girl watched her go with a faint smile playing about her lips. Then Mr. Ransom came out of his office and crossed to her.

"Well, Fay," he said to his daughter, "what does an office feel like after the hectic life?"

"Not so bad." She smiled up at him. "One meets as many strange people here as anywhere else. Who was that girl who came in just now?"

"That girl Oh, John Macallum's secretary. He thinks the world of her. I could use a girl like that myself."

"Won't I do "

"Temporarily, yes, my dear. Until we get some real work to do."

However cold it is, a girl who wears woolen undies must be on her guard against perspiration odor because wool picks up perspiration so easily.

Staying Qualities More Important Than Looks When Selecting a Mate

A correspondent asks: "In the case of a misfit marriage, which is the more to blame, the husband or the wife?"

I think the husband is, because in marriage men do the picking. They look the girls over and choose the ones who hit their fancies, while the girls have to take what is offered them. A man's wife represents his taste and judgment, good or bad, while a woman's husband is her opportunity. One of the major tragedies of life that we are daily forced to witness is that of a fine, intelligent man, tied to a peevish, fretful neurotic wife, who is too dull to give him any companionship and too lazy and trifling to even make him a comfortable home. Our hearts bleed for these poor domestic martyrs, but we could be a lot sorrier for them if we didn't reflect that they brought their sad fate upon themselves when they passed up all of the clever, well-educated, broad-minded girls of their acquaintance for little nitwits, because one girl had a saleratus biscuit complexion and the other had the sort of skin you love to touch. If the time ever comes when men select their wives by the inside furnishing of their heads instead of the outside ornaments, and when they pay as much attention to a girl having a streamlined disposition as they do to her having a streamlined figure, there is going to be a great falling off in the number of middle-aged married men hunting around for women who understand them.

Looks Often Deceiving

The first mistake that men make in marriage that brings disaster upon them is in choosing their wives by their looks, without reference to their staying qualities, or how they are going to stand the wear and tear of domestic life.

Without daubt the American husband is the best, the kindest, the most generous and the most unselfish husband in the world. He is the shining example that the women of every other country hold up to their husbands. But the trouble is he is too good for his own good and his wife's good, and out of his very effort to be kind to his wife he unintentionally works a great and terrible wrong upon her.

His goodness becomes a boomerang that flies back and annihilates the home, because in babying his wife he makes a baby of her. He keeps her in a state of perpetual infantilism. He makes a moron of her and prevents her from growing up into the full stature of a real wife.

Mistake Men Make

The average man thinks he is being an ideal husband when he takes away all work from his wife and keeps her in idleness. He thinks he is being good to her when he gives her all the money she can spend, and when he relieves her from all responsibility he pats himself on the back and feels that he deserves a gold medal because he exacts nothing whatever from her and lays no duties upon her.

There are plenty of men who think they are saving their wives when they never tell them of any of their business troubles, or any of their worries, and when they make all of the sacrifices when the money doesn't go around and somebody has to do without things. Then these same husbands feel ill-used later on because their wives have not kept step with them, but have stayed silly, babydolls that they get tired of playing with when their have outgrown their boyish toys, and at middle age want wives who are their mental and spiritual equals.

Of course, there are some women who are female Peter Pans who never grow up, but the great majority of wives could be developed into real women and worthwhile wives if their husbands would take the trouble to train them. They would read and study if their husbands demanded it of them. They would keep up with their husbands if their husbands kept hurrying them up.

We are always talking about the influence of a wife over a husband, but the influence of a husband over a wife is a thousandfold greater than her over him, and he is largely responsible for what she is at middle age.

STEPFATHER PROBLEM

Dear Dorothy Dix.—I am a girl of 16 and have a sister of 12. Our father died seven years ago and our mother remarried. Both my sister and I hate our stepfather. He isn't mean to us in a physical way, but he tortures us by saying cruel things to us behind mother's back. Mother becomes very angry with us when we tell her we don't like him. How can we get along with him? Heaven only knows we have tried hard enough to do so.

—TWO STEPDAUGHTERS.

Answer. — Your stepfather is probably jealous of your mother's affection for you, or he may resent having you around because you are a perpetual reminder that your mother loved some other man before she did him, or he may feel that having to support you is an inposition. A great many men feel that way about their stepchildren.

The only way you can get along with a cruel stepfather is to keep out of his way as much as you possibly can, and ask your mother not to caress you or make a fuss over you in his presence. Ignore his sarcastic speeches and he will quit making the mif he sees that he cannot get a rise out of you. Treat him with politeness because, after all, it is his bread you are eating. Work hard at school to fit yourselves to earn your own living, so you can get away from him and your unhappy home.

testified that he had been discussing Mr. Delanty's trouble with rats last January. He said that he had been at Mr. Delanty's house on another matter and heard the sound of scurrying rats in the ceiling. He advised him to get some strychnine and mix it with hamburg steak. He told him to put the poison in the corners of the back shed, inside the building and to lock it against the possibility of children getting the poison.

Told of Lock on Door

Tom Flanigan of Cobourg was called and told the court about the lock on the shed door. He said that he was familiar with the Delanty home.

"Did you discuss this case with the defendant during court recess?" asked the magistrate.

"No, I didn't," he replied.

"Well, it happens that I saw you," replied the magistrate. "Very well, I gave you your chance."

Jack Delanty, brother of the accused said that the door was kept locked on the shed and that no animal could have got in to get the poison. The door was also kept locked because meat was kept in the shed and some had been stolen before.

Mrs. Joseph Delanty testified that the poison had been placed in the shed for rats and that it had been kept locked.

"Do you use vegetables at your house?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes," she replied.

"What kind of vegetable do you prefer most?" was his next question.

"Carrots," replied Mrs. Delanty.

Court adjourned for one week at this point.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of high adventure, with sudden and dramatic turns in the tides of destiny. There may be decisive and revolutionary changes, with travel, adventure, romance or some sort of novel or unique experience to intrigue and gratify. Public affairs, or political, diplomatic or government relations may beckon and the assumption of duties or obligations may reap permanent and very real rewards. A great book or play may be written under such creative urge.

No Immediate Change

OTTAWA, April 17. — (CP). — Return of Pierre Laval to a place of power in the Vichy Government is not expected to result in any immediate change in Canada's relations with the Vichy Government, however grave a view may be taken of that development.

Canada is the only belligerent nation of the Empire to maintain diplomatic relations with Vichy. That government is represented in Ottawa by a minister, Rene Ristelheuber. A Canadian Charge d'Affaires, Pierre Dupuz, is accredited to Vichy and visits that capital of unoccupied France regularly from his headquarters in London.

4 Companies Fined

NEW YORK, April 17—(AP)—The Aluminum Company of America, Magnesium Development Company, three other corporations and six individuals were fined a total of $140,000 in Federal Court today on their plea of nolo contendere (non contest) to a series of Sherman anti-trust indictments alleging restraint of trade and monopolozing of the production and fabrication of magnesium.

At the same time, Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of the anti-trust division, filed a consent decree which provides for the compulsory free licensing of patents held by the defendants for the production and fabrication of magnesium.

Order Treatment Or Police Arrest

TORONTO, April 17. — (CP).— Health Minister Harold Kirby informed the Ontario Legislature last night that an amendment to Venereal Disease Act, under discussion by committee of the whole House, would permit the arrest of a patient who refuses to take necessary treatment.

Following arrest the patient would be placed in an institution and held until cure had been affected.

The bill passed through committee without amendment.

Conservative leader George A. Drew said the health minister had a great responsibility to see that a person found infected should not be allowed to pass from his doctor's hands until he had been properly cured.

Synthetic Germans

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 17.—(AP)—Post-war creation of a "synthetic race of German people" made up of non-Germanics from other countries of the world to replace the present stock in Germany was suggested today by Dr. Earnest A. Hooton, Harvard anthropologist, as "the only means of preventing a recurrence of world-wide conflict.'

"The Allied victory...would be meaningless unless we can completely drive from Germany the breed that tends only to militarism and nationalism, and replace it with a stock that will at last be calm," he said in an interiew.

Saving Molasses

OTTAWA, April 17.—(CP)—J. D. Lorimer, chemicals controller in the Munitions and Supply Department, announced today that Canadian distillers of industrial alcohol have agreed to use wheat as the base for their product, a move aimed at relieving the current molasses shortage

It was estimated officially that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels of wheat will be needed annually to meet the distillers' needs.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHERE IS YOUR POWER?

DURING the auction, you raised your partner's suit. After that your opponents made a No Trump bid and your partner doubled it. One of the opponents then took that out into a suit his side had bid previously, whereupon your partner passed. When your next turn comes, you must consider some positive action. Usually, if your high card strength is mainly in your partner's suit, bid it again, but if your strength is largely on the side, double.

Pass	Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥
1 ♠	2 ♥	Pass	Pass
2 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl

Clear-cut logic is involved in the meanings to be attached to the action taken by East, in first making the vulnerable overcall, then a double and finally a pass. Unless East was prepared to play defensively against either of the opponents' suits, diamonds and spades, he should not have doubled the No Trump bid. Hence he had pretty good defense against anything, in view of the fact that his partner was strong enough to give him a single raise in hearts.

Remember, however, that he does not know whether the raise by his partner was based on any honor strength in side suits. If the raise was almost entirely because of the trump holding, then the prospects for a profitable defeat of spades would be slight. But if fair strength was held in side suits, then there was a good chance to beat the contract decisively.

As a consequence of this reasoning, Mrs. William E. McKenney, wife of the executive secretary of the American Contract Bridge league, doubled, and the contract was set three tricks by good defense, producing a top score on this deal, which was in the Eastern championships.

xpect Subsidy On Milk o End April 30

OTTAWA, April 17.—(CP—War-ne Prices and Trade Board offi-als said yesterday they anticipate 1 early announcement of a price ructure for milk, effective through-it the country.

They said it is expected the plan, sulting from studies conducted by special committee, will be in effect y May 1, and notice has been given at the existing subsidy on milk ill be cancelled at the end of this onth.

Officials estimated that milk sub-dy payments, announced last Dec. 9, represented a major part of the otal prices board outlays on subsi-lees, now estimated at between $1,-00,000 to $2,000,000 since the board tarted operations.

The special committee which re-iewed the milk supply situation rom coast to coast had the objective f stimulating increased production nd at the same time stabilizing the verage annual cost of milk and airy products to the Canadian con-umer.

The committee's report, now being tudied by the prices board was nderstood today to give recognition o the necessity of adjusting prices s between different localities and lifferent uses of milk.

Costs and methods of distribution vere examined with a view to find-ng all possible means of economy n this direction and recommenda-ions for certain changes in this espect were understood to have been nade.

Last fall various provincial milk control authorities conferred with the Prices Board on rates charged. In a number of areas increases in amounts paid the producer were approved by the provincial auth-orities before the Dominion-wide price ceiling came into effect on Dec. 1.

While the Prices Board recog-nized that areas where there had been no change in the price could logically seek increases, it ruled that the retail ceiling price should be maintained and decided to meet the situation in these areas by payment of subsidies.

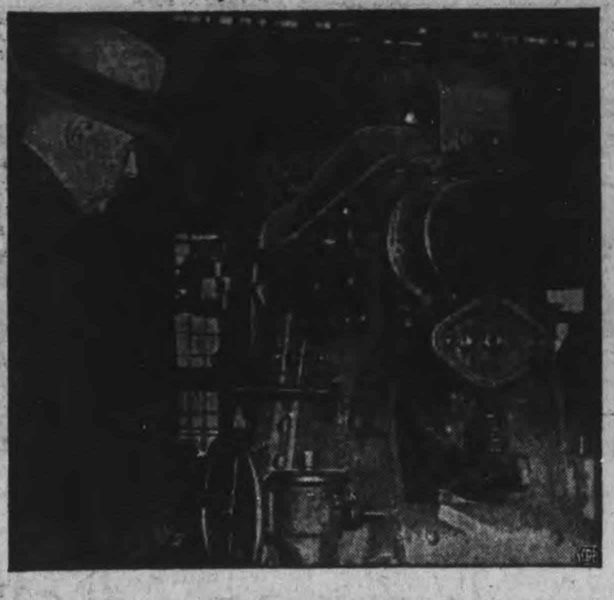
On and after Dec. 2 the produc-tion of milk was encouraged by payment of a subsidy of 30 cents a hundredweight over and above the existing price to producers of fluid milk sold in all areas where no increase had taken place since Aug. 1.

A subsidy of 40 cents a hundred-weight over and above a maximum price of $1.70 a hundredweight, or the existing price, whichever was the higher, was paid producers of milk sold to manufacturers of con-centrated milk products.

Skunk And Perfume

OMAHA, Neb., April 17.—(AP).—A skunk strolled into an outlying drug store through the open front door and went to the perfume count-er. The animal was manoeuvred in-to the stock room and the humane society sent an officer who ended the skunk's shopping expedition with two bullets.

Sir Edward Inspects Gun Plant



During a tour of a Western C. P. R. shop, Sir Edward Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, stops to inspect a completed 12-pounder naval gun. The complete gun is being produced in this ordnance factory including the barrel, loading and firing mechanism and the heavy single mounting on which it rests. The plant employs more than 1,500 men.

MILLBROOK

Red Cross Plans To Present Play

MILLBROOK, April 17.—(ENS)—The play "Tillie's Tea Garden," being prepared to make money for the Red Cross, nuder the direction of Rev. A. R. Gibson, is well under way, with practices at least three nihgts in the week, the expectation being that it will have its initial presentation by the end of the first week in May. The chief difficulty with the three-act comedy lies in the fact that there are more male than female characters in the caste, and so many of the men originally taking part have since been called up for military service. However, it is expected that every place will be satisfactorily filled by the end of this week.

Thirteen members of a catechumen class conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, during the past few weeks, were confirmed in membership previous to the Communion service at St. Andrews Church on Sunday morning. The rite of baptism was administered to Albert J. Henderson before the reception into full membership was carried through.

Word has been received by friends locally that A. A. Birchard, formerly manager of the local branch of the Lindsay Creamery, underwent a serious operation at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, this week, and is making as good progress toward recovery as could be expected.

Local young men who this week received their call for military service include John Lunn, Walter Challice, Henry W. Gray, Eric Clarke, Piercey Pitt, Nelson Davis, and Lynden Sanders.

The Municipal Council has decided to take stern measures to bring to justice the 'teen-age boys of the village who have been showing practically criminal tendencies in their destructive actions of the past few weeks. The latter include deliberate breaking of windows in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, tearing off the outer door and otherwise destroying property at the men's public lavatory, and noisy misconduct at the Government showing of free war pictures in the hall on Monday evening. Steps are being taken now to prevent boys from going upstairs to the gallery on the occasion of any entertainment in the future. A watch is being kept, and when the culprits are found out they will be taken to Cobourg for trial before the magistrate. A severe punishment by the parents in the homes would be a deterrent in clearing up the whole matter of destructive and uncouth actions in the community.

Institute Discusses Poultry Raising

WARSAW, April 17.—(ENS)—The Institute meeting was held in the Institute rooms on Thursday afternoon. Plans were made for the annual meeting to be held on May 14 and will be in charge of the District Director.

The treasurer reported a balance of over $20. The annual "clean up" day will be held on May 6, and all persons are asked to have their junk ready for the truck to pick up.

Mrs. Hilliard Ray gave a very interesting paper on poultry raising and many expressions of appreciation were given for the fine points brought out.

Easter Party

The Mission Band held an Easter Party in the church basement on Thursday afternoon, under the leadership of Mrs. Snelgrove. An egg hunt caused much excitement. Rev. Snelgrove told the Easter story and Mrs. Snelgrove closed the meeting with prayer.

The Town Hall was well filled on Friday evening for the play "In the Moonlight" by the Douro Dramatic Club for the benefit of the local rink. Dancing was enjoyed after the play to music supplied by Wright's orchestra.

Call On Canada For Another Million Sheep

OTTAWA, April 17.—(CP)—Agricultural officials assembled today for the closing sessions of a two-day conference on wartime farming problems with discussion of supply problems in relation to priorities one of the main items on the agenda.

Also on the agenda was a discussion of farm machinery quotas for 1943.

The conference, attended by Agricultural authorities from many parts of Canada, was called by the Agricultural Supplies Board chiefly to consider ways and means of increasing sheep production to meet expanded demands.

It was indicated yesterday, as the conference sessions began that provincial co-operation will be sought in a Dominion-wide campaign to increase the number of Canadian sheep by 1,000,000 to about 4,500,,000.

Last night's sessions were devoted to consideration of Canada's commitment for supplying Britain with farm products and of the Dominion's own domestic requirements for this year and 1943.

Need Extra Butter.

Figures on the Dominion's dairy products requirements, prepared by J. F. Singleton of the Dairy Products Board, were presented. Estimated requirements for 1942 of butter, cheese and milk showed an increase over 1941 of 4.95 per cent. converted to the milk equivalent these requirements showed an increase of more than 850,000,000 pounds was needed over 1941 requirements. The milk equivalent of 1942 requirements totalled more than 18,000,000,000 pounds.

The figures also showed that Canada in the 12 months ended last March 31 sent to the United Kingdom more than 115,000,000 pounds of cheese. The Agriculture Department's contract with Britain's Food Ministry called for a total of 112,-000,000 pounds.

Production of casein, a milk by-product, in 1941 amounted to 1,-277,600 pounds. Almost as large an amount was imported. Casein is important in connection with the manufacture of airplane frames, among other things. It is used in making glue, plastics, paint and for various other purposes.

1,500,000 Cases of Eggs.

The conference was told in a statement prepared by W. A. Brown of the Agriculture Department's Special Products Board, that contracts had been completed or were under negotiation for export of 1,-500,000 cases of eggs in the calendar year 1942.

Since February 7, shipments to Britain have been in the form of dried eggs instead of shell eggs. Six egg drying plants now are in operation at Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Belmont, Ont., Trenton, Ont., Gananoque, Ont., and Ottawa. Two others are under construction, one at Winnipeg and the other at Toronto.

A statement on Canadian hog marketings, showing how Canada was carrying out her contract to supply bacon to Britain, was presented by L. W. Pearsall secretary-manager of the Bacon Board. It showed that in the first 26 weeks of the 1941-42 bacon agreement period, ending April 4, approximately 326,-000,000 pounds of bacon had been purchased out of a contract total of 600,000,000 pounds.

Fail To Name Head Of War Services

Election of a chairman of Peterborough War Services and Community Fund was deferred at a meeting of the directors Tuesday afternoon.

W. Chris Hughes and W. A. Richardson were proposed for the position recently vacated by Judge Smoke, but both of them objected that business affairs prevented them from assuming the responsibility. The post was left vacant until the next meeting.

Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner and Mayor Hamilton were appointed vice-presidents; T. A. Mackay, treasurer, and E. J. Wolff, secretary.

John R. Corkery was appointed chairman of the budget committee. It was decided to refer the several requisition budgets to Edward Humpage, civic auditor, and when that detail is completed the executive will meet again.

Sees Less Milk

HAMILTON, Ont., April 17. (CP)—Unless Federal authorities take immediate action to compensate the producers in some other way for the revenue they will lose when payment of the subsidy on milk is discontinued at the end of this month, there will be sharp reduction in the milk supply in this area, J. S. Hyde, president of the Hamilton Milk Producers' Association, said today. Many would cut down their output while others would be forced out of the business.

Another Gas Slash

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP).—A new, severe reduction in gasoline consumption became effective today in the Eastern United States and Pacific northwest, and petroleum industry sources said millions of motorists would have to get along with 40 to 50 per cent. less than their normal use of motor fuel.

Essential vehicles, including those necessary to health and safety, commerce, schools and government, will continue to get full supplies, and the gasoline used in non-essential driving thus will be curtailed by considerably more than one-third.

Legion Scores Mrs. Roosevelt

BUFFALO, N.Y., April 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt can contribute to the national welfare "by keeping quiet for the duration on subjects of which she knows but little, if anything," says New York's state American Legion commander.

Asserting Mrs. Roosevelt had "made the statement that the men who came back from the last war, in a sense, were responsible for this war," Jacob Ark, of Rochester, told a legionnaires dinner last night:

"As evidence of this she stated that they organized in blocs, in the American Legion and other organizations and lost the feeling of responsibility to their own communities."

Ark said the Legion had sought a military preparedness program "that would have been respected even by the Hitlers of this world," but that it had been decried by "the Mrs. Roosevelts of this nation and other well meaning people . . . on the ground that nations and people should be good and not prepare for war."

Mrs. Jakeman Hostess To Bethany W.A.

BETHANY, April 17.—(ENS)—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Association of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. H. Jackman on Tuesday afternoon, with 18 members present and several guests. Short Scripture readings were taken by Mrs. Harvey Fallis. The roll call was answered with an Easter thought.

Mrs. Wright, convener of Group 4, had charge of a short program, consisting of several short Easter readings by members present, and a very interesting contest on Bible characters.

Lunch was then served by the hostess and members of Group 4.

Sinking United States Gunners Get Sub In The 'Eye'

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP).—A machine gun crew aboard a United States merchantman shot off one of the periscope of an attacking submarine which nevertheless sank their ship off the Atlantic coast, three of the ship's 38 survivors related today.

The sinking presumably cost the lives of seven men, listed as missing. One was believed killed by the first torpedo blast and six others probably drowned as two of the three lifeboats launched were sucked under after the second torpedo hit the starboard side.

The submarine apparently was not completely disabled by the ship's machine gun, for one survivor said that when he was struggling on an overturned lifeboat he saw the submarine on the surface. Naval authorities said that many submarines carried more than one periscope.

The machine gunners had only seven minutes to answer their attacker and save themselves before the ship plunged to the bottom of the Caribbean Sea.

Omemee Y.P.S. Plans Operetta

OMEMEE, April 17.—(ENS)—The Young People's Union which met on Monday night in the church basement was in charge of Miss Hazel Wilson, recreation convener, assisted by Charles Huffman.

The early part of the evening was spent in promenades, and playing musical games. Each lady was asked to wear a hat which would be considered a chic one years ago. Then the men were provided with paper hats designed by the ladies.

Following the social part of the program, the president conducted the business. Arrangements were made for the operetta which will be presented in Coronation Hall on April 24. A committee was appointed to look after the stage scenery and furniture etc.

The evening's entertainment closed with a short worship service.

Miss Dorothy Brooks spent the Easter vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Darling of Peterborough.

Master John and Miss Ruth Wylie of Coldwater spent Easter week with their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown.

Corp. Harold Weir of Toronto spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Weir.

Mrs. Minthorn of Lindsay spent the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. W. Everson.

Finns Suffer Major Setback

Lose Strong Point 1,000 Men In Russ Assault

MOSCOW, April 18—(AP)—Soviet forces on the northern front have captured a centre of resistance whose fall constitutes a major defeat for the Finns, Tass said today in a dispatch broadcast by the Moscow radio.

In two days of fighting the Finns have lost more than 1,000 officers and men and an important defence line, the Soviet news agency declared. It said that Soviet troops had consolidated their positions and now are continuing pursuit of the Finns.

The Soviet Information Bureau told of phases of other action in a communique broadcast by the Moscow radio.

"On the western (central) front our men in one sector smashed enemy resistance and occupied a number of enemy defence points," it said. "Hundreds of enemy dead were left on the field."

Kalinin front fighters destroyed 35 German blockhouses, 10 earthworks, two tanks and various weapons in a day's operations which cost the invaders more than 800 men and officers killed.

A Tass report from the southern front declared Red Air Force squadrons had fought German fliers to a standstill in extensive engagements over the sea of Azov coast, frustrating a Nazi effort to gain aerial superiority there.

(A Norwegian Telegraph Agency dispatch said 70 Russian bombers recently attacked the German barracks at Vardo, Norway, where 2,000 soldiers were quartered, and killed at least 200.)

Keep Calm Or British Will Clap, Laugh At Us Official Tries To Reassure Bombed Tokyoans

TOKYO (From Japanese Broadcasts), April 18—(AP).—Domei News Agency today quoted Mamoru Shigemitsu, adviser to the Foreign Office, as counselling the Japanese people not to lose their composure as the result of air raids.

"Mr. Shigemitsu, who had a good deal of experience of German raids as Ambassador in London, said in comment here that the Japanese nation need not become worried over 'enemy raids on Japanese cities,' Domei reported.

"'The British,' he said, 'have endured deluges of bombs for more than two full years. If we lose our composure the Americans and British will clap their hands and laugh at us.

"'After all it is very important for the people to be fully prepared mentally against raids and recognize the indubitable fact that air raids cannot be completely warded off, no matter how much we are on our

Ottawa Curbs Retail Deliveries Urge Merchants Cut Wrapping

OTTAWA, April 18—(CP).—A Wartime Prices and Trade Board order curtailing retail deliveries, pick-ups, exchanges, refunds and sales on approval was made public by the Board today.

"Co-operation from all branches of business has been so excellent," the Board said in a statement, "that the order largely formalized practices already prevailing on a voluntary basis in many retail outlets."

The restrictions were described as part of a campaign to conserve rubber, gasoline, motorized equipment and other materials urgently needed for war purposes.

"Merchants are urged to follow the British method of conserving wrapping paper by handing across the counter or delivering unwrapped a number of commodities already packaged for carrying," the Board said.

"No deliveries may henceforth be made on parcels valued at less than $1.00 except fresh meat and fish or when illness of physical disability confines the purchaser to his home.

"Deliveries of freight, express and parcel post are not affected.

Regarding Pick Up.

"No retailer is permitted to pick up from a customer goods for exchange or refund unless the articles are defective or were delivered in error. Goods too bulky or heavy to be returned by the customer in person and the pick-up of empty containers or bottles are exempted from this provision.

"Refunds or exchanges will not be allowed after six full business days from the date of delivery. But this order does not apply to instances where the goods are found to be defective, or delivered in error, or to any item of house furnishings priced at $10 or over.

"Approval sales or deliveries have been banned except on house furnishings costing more than $10. Exchanges or refunds for goods made to order, altered at the customer's

Mayor Appeals For Yes Vote

Mayor Hamilton to-day appealed to all citizens to give deep consideration to the importance to Canada of the results of the plebiscite to be taken on Monday April 27.

"I am satisfied," stated Mayor Hamilton, "that if the citizens of Peterborough sit down quietly and think through to the far-reaching importance of giving a strong "yes" vote at the plebiscite, then an overwhelming number of "yes" ballots will be rolled up here. Let us on this occasion forget politics and just remember we are Canadians faced with the great responsibility of winning this war. We know Hitler would not have a plebiscite on this occasion, but let us remember, too, that if Hitler wins there will be a great many ideals and practices of free men that Hitler will not let us have.

"If the vote is negative or is not a great 'yes' majority Hitler and his Nazis will believe, and with some basis, that Canadians do not value their religious and democratic institutions," continued the Mayor.

"Peterborough citizens have given generously of their finances to the war. Now let us give it our full voting support by marking our 'yes' vote in the plebiscite. Let nothing keep us away from the polling booths on Monday, April 27. Thousands of our boys have gone forth valiantly to fight the Nazis with machine-gun and bomb, in the air, on the sea, and on the ground; it is up to us to go out and vote 'yes' so that these boys will know the people of Peterborough are with them all the way in seeing this war through to a finish.

"I am writing to the managers of our local factories asking them to give their employees the necessary time to permit them conveniently to mark their ballots," concluded the Mayor. "I know they will be glad to arrange this because the very continuance of successful manufacturing in Peterborough is another thing that depends upon us winning this war."

40 Grocery Items May Get Subsidy

OTTAWA, April 18—(CP).—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board today announced a list of more than 40 grocery items on which manufacturers will be entitled to subsidy payments if necessary to reduce their prices to not more than the levels charged during June, 1941.

By a board ruling dated April 9, manufacturers were required to reduce their prices on and after April 15 to the level of the highest prices charged last June.

The board said that manufacturer's prices had increased between June and the period Sept. 15-Oct. 6 last year which was used as the basic period for installing the price ceiling. When the price ceiling was applied, many wholesalers and retailers had based their pricees on the cost of purchases made previously and were not able to pay the highest price established by manufacturers during the basic period.

The items covered by this order were announced today as follows:

Evaporated apples, household brooms, baking powder, pearl barley, pot barley, breakfast cereals (cooked or uncooked), sweetened processed cocoanut, roasted, packaged and prepared coffee and coffee substitutes, baking chocolate, cream of tartar,

Suspect Laval To Grab For Syria

Use Fleet And Army Curb Opponents Out To Unseat Him

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP)—Informed sources expressed fears today that Vichy Premier Pierre Laval might launch a military campaign to wrest Syria or French Equatorial Africa—vital link in the United States bomber ferry line to the middle east—from the Free French.

The collaborationist premier was thought to be considering some such gamble with French armies and warships to get the jump on opponents within France, who already were reported planning to unseat him. Reliable informants said Laval now is prepared to go the limit in forcing the French people to collaborate with the Nazis.

If Vichy warships and troops attack Free French Syria and Equatorial Africa, it is pointed out, the Allies will have to divert strength from other fronts to defend these strategic areas. Thus Laval would help the Germans almost as much as if he gave them the French fleet, perhaps avoiding some of the chance of revolt which might accompany such action.

An authoritative source said that Hitler exerted tremendous pressure to put Laval into the premiership, even threatening Marshal Petain with complete occupation of France. This pressure was not brought to bear because of any confidence in Laval's ability to maintain himself in power, the source said, but rather as a test of strength between Berlin and Washington.

Berlin has won the first round of this test. Laval has come back; but he still has to demonstrate he can stay there.

EXTRA!

WASHINGTON, April 18—(AP).—Chairmen of the House of Representatives Military and Naval Committees said today that the bombing of Japanese cities, as described by Tokyo, meant the start of an offensive war by the United Nations in the far Pacific. "It is the beginning of a general offensive," asserted Rep. Andrew May (Dem. Ky.), chairman of the military committee.

Assuming Tokyo to be telling the truth, there are several explanations of the lack of confirmation. If the raiders operated from an aircraft carrier, there would be no reports from the United States forces until their radios could be operated without disclosing ocean positions the enemy would like to know.

LONDON, April 18—(CP)—Eight British bombers, striking by daylight into the heart of southwestern Germany, about 100 miles from Berchtesgaden, plunged heavy bombs from low level into the Diesel Engine Works at Augsburg, the Air Ministry announced today. Three planes were downed there by German anti-aircraft fire.

The eight bombers which reached the target were the survivors of a force of 12 which lost a third of its strength in an encounter with German airmen south of Paris near the start of the outward journey.

This assault and the 89th R.A.F. raid on Hamburg during the night in which many fires were planted in the northwestern port city were the high spots of the last 24 hours of action by the rampaging R.A.F.

But a submarine base at St. Nazaire and docks at Le Havre, German-held strong points in coastal France, also were bombed in the night operations in which a total of nine bombers were missing.

Stroke of Daring

The attack on Augsburg, 150 miles inside southern Germany and 30 miles northwest of Munich, was one of the boldest ventures of the R.A.F. thus far. Lancaster bombers, which necessarily operated without fighter protection, were assigned this task.

Augsburg is northwest of the Berchtesgaden "eagle nest" of Hitler—the Berghof—where many a Nazi scheme has been hatched. The Diesel works at Augsburg, a plant of the M.A.N. (Maschinen - Fabrik Augsburg Nuremberg), is credited with turning out half the engines used by the German submarine fleet as well as other important war material.

The Lancasters took off yesterday afternoon in four sections and encountered enemy fighters almost at the start of their outward journey and four of the bombers were shot down south of Paris.

"But the force pressed on to its objective through a cloudless sky," said the Air Ministry communique. "The attack was made shortly after eight o'clock.

"All the aircraft bombed from low level, two diving to 300 feet and heavy bombs were seen to burst on the target.

"The factory was very strongly defended and three of our Lancasters were brought down by intense anti-aircraft fire after making their attack. The five remaining aicraft landed safely at their bases well before midnight.

The attack on Hamburg was carried out by a strong force of Stirling, Wellington, Manchester and Hampden bombers.

U.S. Plane-Carrier Sunk Claims Berlin Fishing For News

LONDON, April 18—(CP).—A claim by DNB, German news and propaganda agency, broadcast from Berlin today and heard by Reuters said "that according to an unconfirmed report in Tokyo an American aircraft carrier was sunk off the east coast of Japan today."

(No similar report had been heard from the Tokyo radio which was engaged in giving numerous versions of air raids on the Tokyo-Yokohama region, Nagoya and Kobe.

(Frequently in the past the Axis has claimed the Japanese have sunk American aircraft carriers, claims almost without exception traceable to attempts to fish for information.

(At the time the DNB report was transmitted, there was no information from any source on the actual nationality of the planes which raided Japan, let alone that an American aircraft carrier was sunk by the Japanese).

Joy In Britain.

LONDON, April 18—(CP).—Britain's jubilation over the first air raids on Japan was splashed today across the front pages of early afternoon newspapers.

"And now Tokyo—noon raid by Allied planes" said a two-line banner in Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard which published a large map of Japan with its story of the raids.

The Evening Standard, the Star and the Evening News all gave subordinate treatment to Britain's own around-the-clock air offensive against Germany and German-occupied territory.

Best News Of the War

CHUNGKING, April 18—(AP).—Word of the bombing of Japan spread through this Chinese war capital today with a profoundly exhilerating effect and was cheered as the "best news of the war."

"Now they are getting their own medicine," said Chinese who have had their own homes battered by Japanese bombs.

Official quarters withheld comment pending further reports.

Just Schools, Hospitals Hit, Japs Report "People Very Calm"

TOKYO (From Japanese Broadcasts), April 18—(AP).—The Japanese command announced that hostile warplanes bombed Tokyo, Yokohama, Nagoya and Kobe today and caused air raid alarms to run through three of the four main islands of Japan. Observers said the raiders over Tokyo bore the insignia of the United States Air Force.

These were the first air raids in Japan's experience, and warnings sounded for 7 hours.

(Thus in one tremendous sweep, the attackers struck at the heart of the Japanese Empire: At Tokyo, the capital, population 7,000,000, the world's third largest city; Nagoya, 1,400,000, centre of the aircraft industry; Kobe, 1,200,000, chief port of the empire, shipping point for supplying the Japanese armed forces in the southwest Pacific; Yokohama, 950,000, the port for Tokyo).

Raid alarms were in force for varying periods from the northern tip of Hokkaido to Shikoku in the south, include most of the main island, Honshu. (This embraces a sweep of more than 1,000 miles.)

In Broad Daylight

Imperial headquarters announced that raiders which "approached from several directions" came over the Tokyo-Yokohama area half an hour after noon and that two hours later two planes raided Nagoya and a single raider dropped incendiaries on Kobe. The latter is 375 miles west of Tokyo.

Official announcement said that "it is confirmed thus far that nine enemy planes were shot down" in the Tokyo-Yokohama area and that in all cases the damage was light.

(The claim of nine raiders destroyed suggests a raid by a total of many times that number.)

"Observers declared that without doubt the planes which bombed the Tokyo-Yokohama region were United States machines," said the Tokyo radio. "They said the American blue star ensign could be seen clearly from the ground."

The long reaches of Honshu, Japan's major island; Skikoku, which nestles in the lower arm of Honshu; and Hokkaido to the north, were under alerts or the bombsights of the raiders for hours, Japanese announcements disclosed.

Fires, casualties and damage were left in the wake of the squadrons, from which it was claimed nine planes were shot down.

Broadcasts in Japanese, Chinese and English reported the details.

A Chinese-language announcement said the raiders flew "American airplanes."

(This might mean that the crews were from the United States. However, American-built craft have been assigned to British, Netherlands, Australian and Chinese forces, as well as to Soviet Russia, technically a neutral in the Pacific war).

"The Imperial family is safe," a communique said.

India's Prestige Slips Badly In United States

WASHINGTON, April 18—(CP)—Judging by representative United States newspapers, India has lost considerable prestige and a fair measure of popular sympathy in the United States as a result of representatives of the predominant political parties turning down the British formula for political freedom in return for fulltime war effort.

When Sir Stafford Cripps, British negotiator, announced in New Delhi that his mission had failed and that he was returning to London, the American press, practically without exception, placed the blame for the breakdown on the Indian political parties.

Early this week, editorial columns discussed the breakdown at length and since then, despite the great public interest in the United States in the fabulous, glamorous land of extremes, have paid no more attention to it.

The Washington Post, for instance, said "the responsibility for the failure of the negotiations must be placed squarely at the door fo the All-India Congress Party, the most important political body in India."

"Its leaders have made it clear to the world that they are men deficient in statesmanship, lacking in realism, petty when the situation demands largeness of spirit, confused in mind when straight thinking is called for," said the Post.

The New York Times conceded that Britain made an 11th-hour concession only when the Japanese were at India's gates instead of recognizing the urgency of the Indian problem, at the very latest, when the war with Germany started.

Then the Times went on to say: "Whatever questions may be raised regarding their details, no one can question the sincerity of the proposals brought by Sir Stafford Cripps....common sense would dictate their acceptance on at least a provisional basis."

Although the American people as a whole have had a curious interest in India for years, particularly in Mohandas Gandhi and his struggles against the British Raj it is apparent that the All-India Congress Party and the Moslem League, in rejecting the Cripps proposals, have caused India to lose sympathy and support in the United States.

Deluxe Pearl Harbor Coup for Siberia?

Experts See Hitler So Bogged In Russia Call For Jap Stroke At Red Rear Sure

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(CP).—A sudden Japanese attack on Siberia, a Pearl Harbor on a bigger scale, is regarded by many informed military and diplomatic observers here as a direct possibility.

The suggested it might either come as a prelude to a German drive against the Caucasus oil fields or coincide with a campaign of that sort. It would be an Axis attempt to smash Russian resistance this year by simultaneous attacks on widely separated fronts with its attendant dilution of Soviet military strength.

Although the Russian campaign now is in its 10th month and has been perhaps the most costly and the most brilliantly contested military operation at al ttimes, it is believed that neither the Germans nor the Russians today stand in position for a knockout punch against the other.

Germany, it is admitted, is still in a fair position for an offensive against the prime objective of the Caucasus but, because the Russians, by their winter counter-offensive have carved central-front salients which they might develop as wide flanking operations against Nazis in the south, it is believed in some quarters here the Germans may seek the assistance of the Japanese in drawing off Russian strength from the whole eastern front.

The strength of Russian forces in Siberia is unknown but Premier Stalin and his military advisers, realists every one of them, are not likely to be caught napping on he Pacific side of the Soviet Union, despite the fact they were forced to draw troops from the Siberian garrison this winter to reinforce the eastern front.

As far as Japan is concerned, there are at least two reasons why an attack against Siberia might appeal to her war lords. The first is that Siberia, particularly the Kamchatka peninsula and the heavily fortified area surrounding Vladivostok, provide ideal bombing bases against Japan, within easy flying distance of her vulnerable and teeming cities and she might wish to put them out of business while the Germans are still comparatively strong and fresh on the European side of Russia.

Secondly, Japan can never hope to consolidate her "co-prosperity sphere" in Asia, most of which she has over-run since Dec. 7 as long as Russian armies and Russian bombers stand poised within that loosely defined sphere of influence.

Tre biggest imponderable is the degree to which Russia has rebuilt her industrial machine in the interior to counteract such known facts as the loss of Kharkov, her steel centre. While industries have been transplanted to the Urals and beyond but only the Russians know how they are producing.

Escaped Hun Here A Week

Arrived With Group Of 200 From Britain

BOWMANVILE, Ont., April 18 — (CP). — Erich Boehle, a Nazi airman, was back behind the barbed wire of an internment camp here to-day after a brief period of freedom in which he reached Niagara Falls, N.Y., before being captured. His companion in the escape, Peter Krug, is still at large.

Boehle, a blond thick-set air force lieutenant, was captured in Niagara Falls carrying forged papers of a Royal Norwegian Air Force officer. He and Krug, also an air force lieutenant, were with a group of 200 prisoners brought from Britain last week. The pair cut their way through several layers of wire fencing.

Meantime Royal Norwegian Air Force headquarters in Toronto said in a statement last night that "The R.N.A.F. would like to make this point clear, the papers found on Boehle were completely fraudulent and not even similar to our identification papers, so they could not have been copies. We wish to correct any impression that this German could have had access to Norwegian papers in the forging of the ones he carries."

VICHY, April 18—(AP).—German occupation authorities announced today that a new attack against Nazi headquarters at Arras, in the occupied zone, took place April 15.

Reprisal measures against the civilian population in Pas de Calais department, have been ordered by the Germans the announcement said.

Cabinet Troubling Laval

Includes Lindbergh Aide On Mechanical Heart

VICHY, April 18.—(AP).— Admiral Jean Darlan, anti-British but none too sympathetic with the Axis, assumed command of all French land, sea and air forces to-day while France's new premier-designate, pro-German Pierre Laval, manoeuvred to complete his collaborationist cabinet.

Informed sources indicated anew that Laval was having difficulty in filling several posts and cited a Vichy radio report that announcement of the government's ministerial list would be delayed again until later to-day.

Darlan, meanwhile, took over his new job to which Marshal Petain nominated him yesterday by publication of a decree in the official journal naming him to be commander in chief of the three armed services.

Reports reaching Vichy to-day said a German no-commissioned officer at Bordeaux had been stabbed to death by the husband of a French woman, apparently in family argument heightened by jealousy.

A newcomer in the government was reported to be Dr. Alexis Carrel, collaborator with Charles A. Lindbergh on the mechanical heart. He was mentioned as the new health minister.

WORLD'S LARGEST SUBMARINE CONSIDERED LOST BY FREE FRENCH

Surcouf Overdue Giant Sub Is Feared Lost

LONDON, April 18.—(CP).— The Free French announced to-day that the submarine Surcouf is considered lost.

The Surcouf, a vessel of 2,880 tons, was the largest submarine in the world and accommodated a seaplane in a small deck hangar.

Free French naval headquarters issued this communique:

"Free French naval headquarters regret to announce that the submarine Surcouf is considerably overdue and must be considered lost."

The Surcouf, carrying a normal complement of 150 men, participated in the Free French seizure last Christmas of the Vichy-ruled islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon off the Newfoundland coast.

The largest known submersible—some believed her extra size was a disadvantage— was 361 feet long, and was launched at Cherbourg Nov. 18, 1929. She mounted two eight-inch guns.

When France sued for an armistice she was in a British port and in a fight between French and British seamen one Briton was killed, two officers and another seaman wounded and one Frenchman slain. Less than two months after the war began in 1939 the French crew aboard her captured a German merchant ship 1,000 miles at sea.

The Surcouf underwent repairs at the Portsmouth navy yard in September, 1941, and again at Boston a month later.

No "Short Circuiting"

The Board said its restrictions crack down on the practice known as "short-circuiting" by forbidding manufacturers or wholesalers from selling consumer goods direct or on the order of a purchasing agent to any consumer unless the manufacturer or wholesaler has an established retail outlet.

Sales direct to employees for their own use of any good manufactured or distributed by their employer have not been touched.

"The Wartime Prices and Trade Board is permitting manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers to discontinue giving premiums and coupons with goods sold, but they must continue to give additional quantities of the same goods or allowances of any price discount which they customarily allowed," the Board said.

An order of Services Administrator James Stewart of Toonto already prohibits any retailer from making more than one motorized delivery a day over the same route, or in the same area, except in the case of doctors' prescriptions, fuel orders, newspaper deliveries and deliveries to hospitals, steamships, railways or the Departments of Munitions and Supply and National Defence.

Many retailers have voluntarily restricted their delivery services or instituted a system of pooled deliveries. Nothing in the order prevents the maintenance or establishment of restrictions more severe than those provided in the order, the Board said.

Christian Stewardship

"A conference on Christian Stewardship, and what is that?" So asked a practical business man. And no wonder. A word that had almost fallen into disuse, has been revived recently in religious circles and used as though it were self-explanatory. Into the word "stewardship" is compressed a definite view of life. Nothing that we have is really our own; all comes from God. "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" Life itself, our particular abilities. a clever mind, a musical voice, skilful fingers. A familiar parable bids us think of ourselves as entrusted with talents in varying degrees, to some five, to others two, to some only one. But each must give account of the use made of the talents. The best known picture of stewardship in the New Testament is, by strange coincidence. the parable of the Unjust Steward, a story that asks us to learn some good lessons from the example of a bad man. Dr. Moffatt, in his rendering of this parable, betrays Scottish antecedents, but fails to simplify "stewardship" by translating it "factorship." The word in common use to-day for this occupation is "manager." But steward is a good English word, and, once we understand its implications, is best retained. There are other references to stewards besides the "Unjust" in the New Testament. It is the grand name that Saint Paul claims for himself and for all clergy since his day. "Let a man so account of us as of the ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God. The chief thing required in stewards is that a man be found faithful."

The idea of stewardship has a definite and searching application to our possession and use of money. It is imposisble to show that Christianity favors, much less prescribes, one economic system rather than another. But it is plain that the Christian must apply the principle of stewardship to money as to all else in life. Money is never our own; we are the stewards and not the owners of whatever money passes through our hands. We hold it in trust for God and have the opportunity so to handle it as to serve the best interests of God, our fellowmen and ourselves. There is something both romantic and solemn in looking on the dates of coins in our pockets. They may be older than ourselves. Could they but speak, what stories they could tell. Our paper currency is lacking in this eloquence, dollar bills are short-lived. But the dimes and quarters can talk. They have been in the pockets of rich and poor. They will be ashamed to tell you how often they have been placed in the church offering and who put them there. Sometimes they saved the hungry from starvation and then were squandered by thoughtless spendthrifts. Some of their stewards compelled them to serve evil ends, others redeemed them to good purposes. We shall die, but some coins we have handled live on for many a year to bring joy or sorrow to the unborn. We never own them, we could only use them. We cannot take them with us, for shrouds have no pockets. The last thing they procure for us is a casket. What we must take is the selves we have made by our use or abuse of money. Perhaps selfishness, greed, cruelty? Perhaps kindness, generosity, compassion? These are the sort of friends or foes we make by our stewardship of money. A man and wife had this epitaph carved on their tombstone: "What we spent we had. What we kept we lost. What we gave we have."

Some Of Laval's Men

VICHY, April 18 — (AP). — An authoritative indication of the make-up of the important military section of the new Vichy Cabinet of Pierre Laval was contained in a German broadcast of dispatches from that capital.

This broadcast said it was regarded as certain that Rear-Admiral Rene Platon, resigned Secretary for Colonies, would become Secretary of State for Air; Vice-Admiral G. A. Auphan, Naval Chief of Staff, Secretary of the Navy; and Gen. Henri Dentz, who fought the Allies in Syria and Lebanon, where he was High Commissioner, Secretary of War.

Secretary Of State Hull

Personal Limning of United States Secretary of State

By William A. Breyfogle

William A. Breyfogle dodged a speaking engagement with the Kiwanis Club Friday, possibly due to diffidence in address, but he sent along a character sketch of Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of States, that was stamped with the Breyfogle quality of authorship.

CORDELL HULL

Peterborough's only contributor of fiction to the big magazines must surely have appreciated the sharp impression his article made upon the Kiwanians, and also to have acknowledged its lucent reading by L. J. Pettit.

And as the writings of Mr. Breyfogle for home consumption are infrequent favors, his sketch of Mr. Hull is published in full.

"Mr. Hull has been referred to as a saint in blue serge. The blue serge is demonstrable; the saintliness somewhat less than obvious. Certainly, Mr. Hull has served his ideals with patient and selfless devotion. Just as certainly, he has been a hard-headed and shrewd politician. It is this mingling of the visionary and the man of affairs that makes him the effective figure he is.

As Secretary of State, Mr. Hull has worked consistently and hard and well for the cause of peace. He sees peace as dependent upon economic factors, chiefly of the freedom of trade, and his first task was to undo as many as possible of the iniquities of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act. He had to fight against the bitterness that this short-sighted policy had caused abroad, and he had to make the governments and peoples of the other Americas believe that he meant to make his end of the Good Neighbor policy work. The dispute with the Cardenas government of Mexico over the expropriation of American-owned property was a striking example of Mr. Hull's forbearance. He spoke softly, but he ignored the other half of Theodore Roosevelt's injunction. There was no big stick. At a time when a good legal case could have been made out for drastic intervention, Mr. Hull tackled the problem in a way that he believed to be slower, possibly, but much less costly and much more effective. The United States had sent armies into Mexico before, and it was by such acts that the legend of "Yanqui" imperialism had spread throughout Latin America. This time, Mr. Hull tried negotiation and made it work. An agreement with Mexico is in sight, and all Central and South America have had a demonstration of the fact that the Colossus of the North can be a reasonable Colossus.

Of Tennessee's Democracy

Mr. Hull has had a wide and varied experience in dealing with all sorts of people. He was born in 1871, and grew up in the rough, working democracy of the Tennessee of those days. He has been a raftsman of the Tennessee rivers, a soldier, a lawyer, a judge and a politician. The informality of his early days is still strong in him. Experts in protocol were horrified to see him dropping in unannounced to visit delegates from other countries at Pan-American conferences. He would shake hands and say, 'I'm Hull, from the U.S.' That this might be a perfectly natural impulse with him did not lessen its startling effect upon those he visited, more accustomed to the impeccable correctness of such trained diplomats as Mr. Sumner Welles. Mr. Hull, it appeared, was not impressed by the fact that he was the senior delegate from the greatest power represented at the conference. He wanted to meet these people with whom he had matters of importance to discuss, and he did it just as he would have done it in Tennessee when he was a young man. He went to call on them and sat down to have a talk.

His record in Washington before Franklin Roosevelt appointed him to the cabinet was not particularly colorful. He never had the eloquence of Borah or the colorful personality that multiplied the stories told about Carter Glass. Mr. Hull came to the House of Representatives after four years in the Tennessee Legislature. Except for two years, he served in Congress from 1907 to 1931, and for twenty years of that time, he served on the all-important House Ways and Means Committee. In 1931 he was elected to the Senate for a six-year term, but resigned to become Roosevelt's Secretary of State. In the House, he was best known for his grasp of difficult fiscal matters. He was the author of the Federal Income Tax Law in 1913 and of the revised Act of 1916, as well as of the Federal Estate and Inheritance Tax law of the latter year. This would seem to indicate a willingness to work hard at thankless tasks, and to leave the limelight and the publicity to those who cared for such gauds and vanities. He is a democrat, without the capital 'D'. To him, party politics have always been a means to an end, not an end in themselves, and one of his best friends and advisers was Colonel Stimson, his predecessor as Secretary of State under Hoover and now Secretary for War in Roosevelt's cabinet. It is legitimate to wonder just how much Mr. Hull had to do with the surprising appointments of Colonel Stimson and Colonel Knox.

Eclipsed Moley

It has often been said that Mr. Hull's greatest asset in public life is his ascetic and somewhat mournful apparance. It covers a righteous stubbornness. When Raymond Moley made his spectacular and ill-advised dash to the World Economic Conference in London, sure of his position as head of the 'Brain Trust' and favorite of Presidest Roosevelt, detractors said thtat Mr. Hull had been superseded, thtat he might as well go home. But it was Moley who lost his place as chosen adviser, and presently returned to private life. As saints go, Mr. Hull has a surprising way of getting rid of his opponents.

Indeed, this has always been characteristic of him. He demonstrated it in a small way as early as the Spanish-American War, when Captain Hull returned from his stay in Cuba with something like two-third of the money in the whole regiment. A sadder and wiser comrade said it was because Hull could sit at the poker-table sadly and timidly meeting every raise, like a man convinced that his low straight has scarcely a chance of winning, when all the time he had four aces in his hand. Somewhat unbecoming in a saint, this ability hs its uses in a attesman."

A vote of thanks to Mr. Breyfogle was moved by John Troke with the request that John McKone write the letter of the Club's appreciation.

War Charities Thriving In Port Hope

PORT HOPE, April 18.—(ENS)— Mrs. Howard Jordon's primer class held a very successful afternoon tea in aid of their ditty bag fund for the sailor which they are adopting on the H.M.C.S. Port Hope.

For weeks past the class has been preparing a display of coloring work, designing, cutting and pasting achievements which were on display at this tea for their mothers and the teaching staff of the central school.

This was called a ditty bag party and a large crowd of interested parents attended, while the class made $6 for their fund.

Tea was poured by Miss Netta Brownlee with Miss Agnes O'Neill assisted by two girls chosen from her class, Marion Kellough and Nathalee Jordon doing the serving.

Each room in the schools having adopted a sailor different methods have been used to raise the funds for their ditty bag. Mrs. Saunders' grade six made an afghan on which tickets were sold and the sum of $40 raised which was divided between the different funds for war work.

Miss A. O'Neil's class had a candy sale at which they realized around $9 while Miss Smith's class made about $5 from a hot dog sale to the children one recess.

Miss Dorothy McElroy and Miss Haydon combined their class efforts on an afghan which netted the funds $16.

Miss Scott and Miss Long's class collected about $5 each in donations while the other clases are still working. Miss Saunder's class are making an autograph quilt, Miss Brownlee's are selling tickets on an afghan, Mr. Dowler's girls are making felt name pins. Mrs. Jordon's class are having a hand craft sale and Miss Thompson's girls realized over $40 on an afghan.

Jesus Speaks Strongly Against False Leaders

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 19 is Luke 11:14-54; 13:31-35, the Golden Text being Luke 11:23, "He that is not with Me is against Me; and he that gathereth not with Me scattereth.")

TODAY'S LESSON is a little difficult—in part, at least—to explain to younger persons. In it Jesus steps out of his role of gentle teacher, and speaks out to the Pharisees and Scribes whom He knows to be His enemies.

Jesus had just cast a dumb spirit out of a man and the man, freed from the evil thing, was talking. Everyone was amazed at his fluency. The evil minded ones among them were, however, saying among themselves that it was undoubtedly through Beelzebub, chief of the devils, that Jesus cast the spirit out. Others insisted that Jesus show them a sign from heaven.

Jesus knew what they were thinking, and said to them, that a house divided against itself would fall; and if Satan also was divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? His kingdom was sure to be destroyed if his followers were divided. And if the Lord cast out devils by the power of the evil one, by whom did their sons cast them out? The Jews believed that their chief men could cast out demons. Through whom were they doing this? asked the Master.

On the other hand, "If I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the Kingdom of God is come upon you."

Strength Will Prevail

Then Jesus said that a good man who was strongly armed could keep his palace and goods; but if a stronger were to appear he would be overcome and lose all. In other words Satan is strong and his followers are his goods. God is stronger, however, and Jesus, working with God to cast out evil spirits, would bring the Kingdom of God, defeating Satan.

Then Jesus laid down the law concerning His friends and followers and His enemies. He said: "He that is not with Me is against Me." Again He spoke of a man out of whom an evil spirit had been cast. The evil spirit, he said, having been cast out of the man, walked through dry places seeking rest and finding none, so he said, "I will return unto my house whence I came out."

When this demon came again to the man he found that he was clean and whole, but alas, the evil one not only entered himself, but took seven other spirits with him, and the man was worse off then than he had been before. You see, Jesus' point was that although the man had been rid of the demon and had reformed, he was not strong enough to withstand another onslaught. He did not try hard enough to live the Christian life and to keep close to the Master who had helped him overcome the evil which was in him.

As Jesus finished saying these things a woman in the crowd spoke, exclaiming how blessed was His mother above all women. But Jesus answered, "Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it."

Even hearing the Lord speak in person was not enough. They should hear, but must also keep the word of God.

An Evil Generation

Probably wearied with the growing tension and opposition of the leaders of the Jews, Jesus burst out: "This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall be no sign given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet." Jonas was sent to warn the Ninevites, but the Son of Man, a "greater than Jonas," was with them, and they would not hear.

The "queen of the south" (Sheba), came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of the Jews' great king, Solomon, but his listeners had a greater than Solomon with them but they still demanded a sign.

If their eyes were open and not closed or "full of evil," they would see and recognize their Lord and so save themselves.

A certain Pharisee then invited Jesus to dine with him. As the Lord sat down to the meal, the Pharisees marveled that Jesus had not washed before eating. Possibly Jesus did not wash purposely because He wanted to show these people their faults. At any rate, He said, "Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness."

"Woe to you Pharisees," exclaimed the Lord. He called them hypocrites, and told them they were more concerned with keeping old written laws than with doing good and living righteously. Then a lawyer or scribe said, "Master, thus saying, Thou reproachest us also." So Jesus' righteous wrath was turned on this class of men, too, who magnified the importance of laws and thithes, and earthly things, and neglected charity and the things of the spirit.

The ancestors of these men had persecuted the prophets, said Jesus, and they built the tombs in which to lay them. And well did the Master know that these were the men who were planning His death.

United Church Moderator To Conduct Anniversary

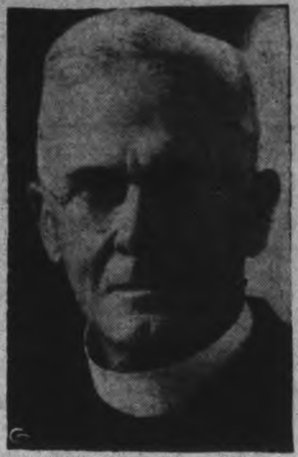
Dr. Aubrey S. Tuttle, moderator of the United church of Canada, will visit St Andrew's church on Sunday, April 26th, for the 109th anniversary and conduct both services.

Dr. Tuttle was born in Pugwash, N.S. He entered the ministry in 1897 as a student missionary in the former Methodist church and served for three years at Bridgetown, New Harbor and Truro.

He graduated from Mount Allison University in Arts and Theology in 1905, obtained his Master of Arts degree from Mount Allison University in 1907 with first-class honors in Philosophy.

Transferring to the Alberta Conference, he was pastor of Grace church, Edmonton, for four years. He also served in three other pastorates: Wesley church, Calgary, Fifth Avenue church, Medicine Hat, and McDougall church, Edmonton. During his term at Wesley church, Calgary, the present church building was built.

In 1919 he was appointed Principal of Alberta College South, which college was amalgamated with Robertson Presbyterian College at the time of Union as St. Stephen's College, Edmonton. Since Union he has been Principal and Professor of Christian Theology and Philosophy of Religion at St. Stephen's College.



REV. AUBREY TUTTLE.

Dr. Tuttle was President of the former Alberta Methodist Conference in 1918 and of the Alberta Conference of the United church in 1934.

From Mount Allison University in 1920 he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity and the degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of Alberta in 1936.

What Will New Russia Be Like After the War?

The Dean of Canterbury, The Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, has written a book recently entitled "Soviet Power", in which he discusses every aspect of life in Russia. This great church man tells us why the Russian leaders abandoned Christianity at the time of the revolution. He takes us into the heart of that movement, shows the condition of the people under the Czarist government, and contrasts that condition with the present regime.

Probably the greatest surprise that the war has given is the revelation of the strength of Russia as an ally in the struggle against Germany. All have little sympathy with Communism because of its materialistic outlook, yet people must acknowledge facts when they meet them. One of the questions that arises is, what will the new Russia be like after the war The democratic nations will exert a tremendous influence over her future, and the crucible of suffering through which she is passing will punify her life. It should determine that our attitude in the future towards Russia should be one of Christian tolerance and sympathy. There have been profound misunderstandings and mistakes in the past, they must never occur again.

The Christian attitude towards Russia will be the subject of the address in St. Andrews church on next Sunday night.

Unusual Service To Be Held In St. James' United Church

A group of soldiers now serving in England with the 14th Canadian Hospital unit have sent a request to Rev. Fred Craik of St. James' United Church to hold a special service of prayer and thanksgiving remembering the soldiers, sailors, airmen, nurses, and prisoners of war on Sunday evening. The complete order of services has been carefully arranged by an officer in the hospital unit who has been overseas for more than a year. This request service will include: Flags of the Empire deposited at the altar. Congregation will read the 91st Psalm. The sailors' hymn, "O Lord Be With Us When We Sail the Lonely Deep." Soldiers' hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers." Airmen's hymn, "Hear Thou O Lord for Thy Crusaders of the Air."

Sergt. W. N. Peterkin, M.M., requests, "What A Friend We Have in Jesus" Pte. Ian Carswell asks for "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go." Pte. Robert Merry requests the singing of his favorite hymn, "Art Thou Weary, Heavy Laden." Pte. William Mounds has requested the solo, "In the Hour of Trial Jesus Plead For Me," with special thought of the prisoners of war.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Budge of Crowethorne, Berkshire, England, in whose home these Canadian soldiers have found hospitality request the well-known selection, "Land of Hope and Glory."

Citizens of Peterborough interested in the spiritual welfare of the men and women in the armed forces will appreciate such a service being held in the hour of national need.

Rock of Christianity Is Founded On Resurrection

By REV. E. R. JAMES

The Lord is risen indeed.
St. Luke 24; 34

These words are uttered in a tone of absolute surprise. It is the evening of the first Easter Sunday. Ten men are gathered in that upper room which is full of the memories of their Master's last words and acts on that Thursday night. Three days and nights full of agony and tragedy have passed.

When you read the Gospels carefully one thing strikes you. The Apostles are sure that Jesus of Nazareth is indeed the Jewish Messiah, the Servant of the Lord, anointed for the work of delivering the Jews from the Roman yoke. Their minds are full of the approaching triumph and their own rewards. "Who should be the greatest in the Kingdom" is their primary thought. Yet the Master tells them that He is to suffer horrible disgrace and die on the Cross.

They enter Jerusalem on Palm Sunday full of joy and expectation. They expect Him to announce His mission. One of His Apostles through disappointment and avarice betrays Him. His words of suffering and death cannot enter their minds so full of earthly rewards and triumphs. They are expecting thrones—He a Cross.

The arrest comes like a thunder clap. All His disciples leave Him and flee. His cause was lost. Trial after trial followed through the night. The ecclesiastical authorities brought Him early to the Roman Governor and forced Him to order His execution. "If thou let this Man go thou art not Caesar's friend". He is led out of the Holy City bearing His Cross. He is crucified with the title: "The King of the Jews".

With His last breath He cries: "Father, into Thy Hands I commend My Spirit". He is buried in a rock hewn tomb and a great stone is rolled to its mouth. He is dead. His followers are scattered. His enemies have triumphed. God has apparently failed Him. He has gone into the silence of death.

That Good Friday night there is sorrow and despair in the hearts of His followers. It is the end, they say. "We trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel". They are unwilling to accept the news of His ressurrection. "They are idle tales"—utter nonsense.

Then something happened. Otherwise how can you explain what you read in the succeeded chapters and in the Acts of the Apostles. These broken hearted, despairing men, assembled behind barred doors "for fear of the Jews", are changed. They are full of joy, full of enthusiasm and full of courage. They face bitter criticism, savage scourgings and the loss of all things gladly; "rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His "name".

Something had happened. "The Lord is risen indeed". "God raised Him from the dead". This is the rock of Christianity.

His modern enemies claim that the Apostles has seen a vision; they were deceived through their expectation of the resurrection. Is it likely that men for the sake of a vision would suffer such horrors? Above all we have the testimony of Saul of Tarsus, the bitterest persecutor of these men. He never saw the Lord in the days of His flesh. He claims to have seen the risen Lord at the gate of Damascus. It is important to remember that Saul, afterwards called Paul, is the greatest spiritual genius of the ages. He is a man of wide reading and ability. He is not likely to be deceived by a vision seen by a handful of fishermen and similar folk. His Gospel is that Jesus Christ rose from the dead and ever liveth. He is perfect God and perfect Man, the only begotten of the Father.

This is the creed of the Christian Church. It means that a new life enters into you because He lives. "Because I live ye shall live also". Jesus Christ is the Head of the new creation. Through faith in Him men become new creatures, changed men. Through His Spirit they conquer sin and reveal Christ being formed in them. In every generation this is the proof seen of all men. Transformation of character is the proof to your friends that Christ is risen indeed. Are you bearing this witness?

I know in whom I have believed.

Keep In Step, Canada

There remains but one week before the plebiscite, and it is high time that every Canadian decided what he means to do on April 27, if he has not made his decision already. This community was given its lead yesterday by Gordon K. Fraser, M.P. for Peterborough West, in his broadcast from CHEX. Mr. Fraser took the line that as Canada was committed to the plebiscite the only course was to make a success of it, and success will only be achieved if there is an overwhelming Yes vote. This paper has been asking for local leadership in this matter, and Mr. Fraser has provided that leadership by his emphatic plea that the Government be released from its present commitments; the matter now rests with the electorate.

We have not the slightest doubt that the consensus of the people of this district favors releasing the Government from its pledge. But there is a gap between agreement in principle and accomplishment, and that gap can only be bridged by action on the voting day. Have you given any real thought to the matter? Do you know where you are to vote? Do you know the wording of the ballot and are you sure that you know how to fill it in?

Three courses are open to you. The first, and the only proper one, is to go to the poll early on April 27 and mark your ballot with an X beside the Yes which is printed on it. That is your inescapable duty as a loyal citizen of this country. It is necessary that Canada keep in step with Great Britain and the United States as this war progresses, for disunity or inequality of sacrifice may lose us the victory. Nobody likes the idea of conscription; coercive methods are repugnant to democratic people, but others have taken this step in order to defend democracy as a whole, and we must not lag behind.

The second course is that you may mark your ballot No. Nobody will know that you have done so, and you will have struck a blow in person for Axis victory, if that is your desire. For personal reasons, and without wishing harm to this country you may be tempted to follow this course; you may feel that you are serving your own best interests, or you may feel that you are protecting someone whom you love. Think again. Will Axis victory serve your interests, and will those you love fare well in a Canada dominated by the Axis? The decision may be a bitter one, but there is only one wise and patriotic course for you to follow.

There is a third course. You may not vote at all. You may take this line either because you do not want to vote Yes and yet cannot bring yourself to vote No, or you may do nothing because you are so sure that the Yes vote will triumph that you see no need to incommode yourself. Do not take this evasive attitude, for it may betray you. There is no absolute guarantee that the Yes vote will have a majority at the polls. There will not be a single No voter who will fail to register his vote; he is determined to have his way if at all possible. And, as we have repeated in these columns, the Yes majority must not merely be sufficient; it must be overwhelming in order that our allies to the south may not think us half-hearted in our support of the war.

This is no time for Canada to be out of step with her allies. Although the war situation now is grave we are able to see light far ahead, and our progress toward that light will be rapid in direct proportion to our determination. A Yes vote is not necessarily a vote for conscription but a vote that will place in the hands of the government the power to do as it sees fit.

Peterborough Women Register

One of the most valuable of the many secondary war organizations in Canada is the C.W.V.S.—The Canadian Women's Voluntary Services. It undertakes to supply women for any tasks which they may be asked to perform; its function is executive. As an instance of the work of the C.W.V.S. in Peterborough, it was they who supplied the typists necessary for the Prince of Wales Rangers recruiting campaign. Fifty volunteers in all were needed, and they were supplied promptly.

At present more than 200 women in this district have registered with the C.W.V.S., saying what they can do, when they are free and declaring their willingness to undertake tasks of national importance. This reserve of power is drawn upon for all sorts of tasks, and is of course available if any sudden emergency should arise.

This is everybody's war, and anyone who can help is patriotically bound to do so. The women of this community have made a fine response to the call of the C.W.V.S. and are doing work now, and are being trained for further work, which will be of real importance in this country's war effort. There is plenty of room for any more women who wish to join, and their interest will be appreciated.

"The rank is but the guinea stamp, and now in this age of social revolution they are beginning to take on a meaning which would have surprised the Scottish poet. He meant that a plain man, if he were upright and God-fearing, was as good as any nobleman; nowadays many a nobleman is anxious to prove that he is as good as a plain man. The wheel has come full circle.
The man's the gowd, an' a' that…"

The particular instance which brings this to mind is the recent notable exploit of Lord Louis Mountbatten, a member of the Royal House, in planning and bringing off the highly successful raid on St. Nazaire. In this war he has had two ships torpedoed under him, and fought well both at Norway and at Crete; he was in command of the aircraft carrier Illustrious until he was summoned back to Britain for special duty. He co-ordinates forces of the three services, and is at once a Vice Admiral, a Lieutenant-General, and an Air Marshal; he is, apparently, one of the most imaginative and daring officers in the British forces.

He is also the Kings' cousin and, if we are not greatly mistaken, received his education at one of England's most distinguished institutions of learning. He may not wear it, but we suppose that he has an Old School Tie somewhere in his effects. Like Winston Churchill, he is a living proof that not all members of the British upper classes are quite worthless.

We make this point, not because we have any special affection for noblemen as such, but because we like to see fair play. Since the outbreak of war, and since the discovery that many highly born and expensively educated persons in the British Civil Service were incompetent, there has been a great outcry against the Old School Tie, and a general condemnation of British aristocracy generally. Unfortunately this cry has been taken up on this side of the water by persons who know very little about the matter, but who have considerable resentment of the aristocratic principle. They know nothing of the Old Schools which they condemn so roundly, and they would not recognize their Ties if they saw them. We do not think that this is fair. A nobleman or a man of aristocratic lineage is what he is by an accident of birth, and should not be condemned therefor. As well as Lord Louis Mountbatten it would be possible to list many other Britons who have done valiant work in this war, and who have not in any way been impeded by the special circumstances of their education or the eminence of their ancestors. The rank, we repeat, is but the guinea stamp, and there are many Englishmen of noble birth who can hold their heads high, even in an assemblage of Labor leaders.

Inevitable Montague Norman

Before the last war no man was ever Governor of the Bank of England for more than two years. But since that time Mr. Montague Norman has been Governor for 22 years, and has just been re-elected for his 23rd term. Mr. Norman is that romantic figure, "an international financier" and just such a one as would delight the heart of E. Phillips Oppenheim. He is reclusive in his life, he wears a decidedly international beard and he is in the habit of travelling incognito under the name of Professor Skinner.

There are a great many people in England who do not admire Mr. Norman. They do not like him because he was a financial appeaser of Germany before the outbreak of war; they do not like him because he was a close friend of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank and Hitler's chief financial operator, rigging Europe's finances for the benefit of Germany; they do not like the fact that Mr. Norman allowed British financiers whom he advised to lend heavily to Germany, and did nothing to reduce Germany's heavy bank debt; they remember with resentment that Mr. Norman was the prime moved in Britain's ill-fated return to the gold standard in 1925; and they remember also that he was strongly against the Government's policy of "cheap money" before the war and managed to have that policy discontinued. Not long ago an article appeared in Picture Post, the popular British magazine, making even more disagreeable charges against Mr. Norman.

But the people of Britain have nothing to say in the matter. The Bank of England is not, as many people imagine, a Government concern; it is simply a bank like any other, and its directors may elect what Governor they will. Although a year over the retirement age, Mr. Norman will direct Bank policy for another term. There are great changes going on in England today, but they have not yet reached the Bank of England.

Bitterness In Brittany

According to information disseminated by the Free French, the Germans are having trouble in Brittany and have even threatened to declare a state of seige in Brest. This is because the Breton shipbuilders think that the Germans should have provided shelters for the men who worked on the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, who were in continual danger of bombing by the R.A.F. It is estimated that over 3,000 tons of bombs were dropped on the ships while they were under repairs there, and in all that time no provision was made for the workmen, nor were their families compensated in any way when they were killed. Now that German troops have had to be withdrawn from France to help in Russia the situation in Brittany threatens to become serious.

We are not surprised. The Breton people are Celts, more closely akin to the Welsh than to any other European peaple; indeed, during the Great War Lloyd George and Aristide Briand used to converse in their own tongue, greatly to their own delight and the mystification of their colleagues. Breton regiments fought brilliantly against the Germans then, particularly on the Yser river. Anyone who knows these Brythonic peoples knows that they are easy to lead but hard to drive, that they are independent and impatient of tyranny, and that when they are roused they will cause trouble out of all proportion to their numbers. Like all Celts they are implacable haters and are reckless in pursuit of vengeance. If the Germans are having trouble with the Breton folk we are glad, for they have infinite trouble in store for them. The irascibility and reckless violence of an aroused Brythonic Celt is just what we would wish for our worst enemy.

NOTE AND COMMENT

One-seventh of Russia is desert, we learn. The Nazis would probably put the percentage even higher.

Sir Thomas Beecham says: "The world is out of tune." But you can't say that the news is flat, Sir Thomas.

The Kingston Whig-Standard observes: "One of the proudest feathers in Canada's cap in this war was the part played by Canadian airmen in rendering the Japanese raid on Colombo, Ceylon, futile. The enemy planes were first spotted by Canadian-manned aircraft, and the early warning made possible the war's most successful single defence operation.

Now that bicycles are coming back into popularity it would be as well for cyclists to realize that the ordinary traffic laws apply to them as well as to motor cars. The tendency of cyclists to run lights and to see how close they can come to pedestrians without actually knocking them down needs curbing. And cycling on the sidewalks and without a light after dark should disappear too. In fact, we suggest a wholesome reform of cycling ethics, assisted, if necessary, by the police.

DRIFTWOOD

Today the sea is calm, the wind is still, and yet this driftwood clinging to the shore
Stirs fretfully with every ebb and flow endeavoring to break away once more.
Tonight, perhaps, high-winds will ride the cape to sweep the sand and set these captives free
And when the storm abates they shall be gone like vagabonds, wind-driven, out to sea.
But all tomorrows offer nothing more;
a moment's respite from the stress and strife
And then another storm, another shore.
and on and on until the end of life.

Have You Seen Any Of These

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

IN these days of expensive books the Modern Library is a refuge and a delight for the omnivorous reader; since it has been taken over by Random House this collection of reprints of fine books has become quite the best thing of its kind on the market; the volumes are handsome, well-bound, and are printed in type which is easy to read, even by artificial light. The list of titles is a long one and it includes some of the best of the classics as well as the best writing of the past forty years. In an era when the purchase of a novel eats the heart out of five dollars the Modern Library is a godsend; almost every modern American book of any real merit turns up in it eventually.

The latest addition to the list of titles is an anthology called "Sixteen Famous American Plays"; it is one of the Modern Library Giants. The selection is a good one, covering the period between 1924 and 1939. How many of these plays, I wonder, have you seen? Here in Canada we see very little of the drama unless we happen to live in Montreal or Toronto, and lovers of the theatre exist in a perpetual state of malnutrition. Still, we can always read, and thus anthology provides a rich repast for the drama-lover.

THE first play in the book is "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard. This simple tale of how an Italian wine-grower living in California bought himself a wife, as it were, by mail-order, only to have her stolen by his foreman, was immensely popular in its day, and recently appeared as a movie, with Charles Laughton and the late Carole Lombard playing the chief parts. Regarded from the third year of a war its philosophy that "people should not fight; people should try to make each other happy," seems a little naive, but it was good stuff in its day. Another play from this book which made an excellent movie is "The Front Page," by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, and this drama has probably done more than any other single piece of writing to convince the public that all newspapermen are unkempt lunatics, wildly bent on 'scooping' one another, and that all managing editors are ready to commit mayhem and arson in order to get an exclusive story. Neither of these things is really true, but they make for plenty of excitement on the stage.

Marc Connelly's delightful play about negro Christianity, "The Green Pastures" is in the book too; described by the author as "an attempt to present certain aspects of a living religion in the terms of its believers" this play caused a furore in 1931. Its negro God and its presentation of Heaven in terms of a Harlem fish-fry scandalized the Pharisaical, but the simple sincerity of the piece and its actors won the hearts of a more generous part of the public. Unlike many plays, "The Green Pastures" reads almost as well as it acts.

EUGENE O'NEILL is the only living American dramatist who may fairly be called great, and his name is associated by the public with plays of gloom and complex emotion. But "Ah, Wilderness" is undoubtedly the tenderest and deepest comedy written in America since the last war, and it is his work. Its theme is adolescent love, and it contains one of the most beautifully written love scenes in modern drama. This work of O'Neill's gives new life to the hackneyed dictum that it takes a great writer of tragedy to write a really fine comedy. After O'Neill, Robert Sherwood is probably America's most gifted dramatist, and of his works "The Petrified Forest" is reprinted in this collection. It was the first of his plays to bring him general recognition; Leslie Howard played in it with distinction and it gave Humphrey Bogart his first part as Duke Mantee, the desperado.

The American theatre has been particularly rich (if indeed it is riches and not dire affliction) in tendentious plays, and of these some have been good and some very bad. In this book Sidney Kinsley's "Dead End" is reprinted; this famous play gives a gruesome picture of juvenile delinquency and its causes, driving its message home without mercy, but always remaining dramatic in form. Also included is "Waiting For Lefty" By Clifford Odets, a play which I personally dislike very much. When it appeared in 1935 New York critics fell over themselves in their efforts to pat Mr. Odets on the back; he was, they gave us to understand, the champion and the voice of the oppressed workers. Seven years have gone by and Odets' voice has grown weaker as he has grown more and more prosperous. This may be tough on the oppressed workers, but it is a lucky break for the theatre, which is never at its happiest when it is used as a propaganda platform.

THE book includes several comedies; there is the hilarious skit on Hollywood life, "Boy Meets Girl," by Bella and Samuel Spewack, and there is "The Man Who Came To Dinner," by Hart and Kaufman, which has recently had a second blossoming as an excellent movie; there is Howard Lindsay's "Life With Father" which is still doing very well on the stage, and deservedly so, and there is S. N. Behrman's "Biography," a somewhat undistinguished work; there is also, if you like it (and thousands of people did) Clare Booth's bitter and cynical piece, "The Women," which I personally find detestable. There is Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," (now a splendid movie) and William Saroyan's brilliant and unusual "The Time of Your Life," which is certainly one of the most original plays to appear in a quarter of a century. Finally, there is Thornton Wilder's interesting novelty, "Our Town," and Arthur Kober's pleasing commentary on the Jewish race, "Having Wonderful Time."

It is, as you see, a generous collection containing many good things and giving a fairly comprehensive survey of the best and most popular new plays to appear in America in the past twenty years. If you like reading plays, you will find that this book is cheap at its price of under two dollars; if you do not know whether you like reading plays or not, this is the very book to make you a confirmed and happy play-reader for the rest of your life.

Darlan the Key Man Now

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 18 —(AP)— Pierre Laval, willing tool of the Nazis, comes back into power at Vichy under circumstances that seem to cast him for a backseat driver's role unless and until he can prove his case to French public opinion.

The first official outgiving of the reconstituted Vichy regime commits a definite veto power to other hands. Admiral Jean Darlan, Laval's great rival, emerges from the shakeup not only as announced heir-designate to Marshal Petain as Chief-of-State, but also as commander-in-chief of French fighting forces. The French fleet, army and air force will take its orders from him.

Laval must reckon with Darlan if his intentions involve direct or indirect use of French armament to aid the conqueror of France. It is the essence of totalitarianism that he who commands the fighting forces controls all.

EYE ON WASHINGTON

There can be little doubt that whoever conceived the procedure at Vichy did so with an eye on Washington. Grave fear is reflected that drastic American action might follow if France became a complete Nazi puppet.

The extent to which Washington-Vichy tension has been eased is only conjecturable. Darlan's formal promotion as successor-designate to supreme power, backed by his control of the army, navy and air force, makes him for the moment at least a more important figure than Laval in American and British eyes.

Hostile as he has been toward Britain, Darlan stands committed not to yield to the Axis. He proclaimed that by radio broadcast following his elevation to the Vice-Premiership last May in succession to Laval, ousted by Petain. At the time he was explaining his own conversations of that date with Hitler. The German leader had not asked him "to hand over our fleet," Darlan then said, adding:

"Every one knows—and the English better than any one—that I will never hand it over."

Assuming that Darlan is of the same mind now—and there is every argument of personal political ambition to urge his retention of the fleet in his own control and under his own selected crews and commanders—its surrender to Germany at an early date seems wholly improbable. That fleet is the admiral's political anchor to windward. Without it he would fade from the political scene in Vichy and cease to be a factor in the war.

What Hitler actually hopes to gain out of forcing Laval back into so limited a degree of power at Vichy must remain a mystery until Laval shows his hand. It seems obvious, however, that Hitler had to accept Darlan's veto power to attain some other ends—possibly greater French industrial co-operation with the Nazi war effort or recruitment of French skilled labor.

Both probably would be coupled with assurances of French readiness to resist a British or British-American invasion of the Continent to strike at Germany from French soil. Darlan likely would concur in that.

Whatever greater French collaboration Hitler is seeking through Laval it seems clear that he could hardly expect important results if he sent Laval back to Vichy empty-handed. Berlin almost certainly has commissioned Laval to disclose Nazi relaxations of the occupation regime to induce general French acceptance of the program. Laval's impending broadcast will be searched for indications of that.

QUITE TRUE

Tom had just put one over on Jim. The latter, out to even things, leant across the table to ask, with a grin.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord….This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. — John xxi. 12, 14, 15.

Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour. And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple; who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms….

Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.—Acts iii. 1-3, 6-8.

Figure the interest on $90,000 at 6 per cent for 85 years, then add the principal, and you get the present amount of a loan the town of Peterborough made to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway and did not collect. The total is $549,000, but it is just one of those credits which you forget about knowing that it has been invalidated by time long ago.

And in that investment back in 1857 when small communities like Peterborough, a full day's walk from the lake front, were pleading with fortune for railway connection with the big outside world, it was then that the City Trust Commission originated. The Commission was not authorized until four years later as a financial safeguard for the taxpayers of Peterborough, but the genesis of this continuing body traces directly to the town's first subscription of railway bonds and a subsequent embarrassing experience in meeting the payments of interest.

Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Commission, recalled these circumstances to-day in a tangential reference to the appeal of district municipalities to C.N.R. executives here on Wednesday not to abandon the Peterborough-Port Hope railway south of Millbrook after the end of this month.

"The old loans made to the first railway north from Port Hope have nothing to do with our present problem," Mr. Eastwood said, "but they retain a local and community interest, especially in the light of the transportation needs of those early days and of the difficulties which had to be overcome in establishing adequate railway connections."

Briefly, then, because there were many chapters in those records of early railway building through Peterborough, the town decided in 1857 to subscribe $120,000 of the stock of the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway. In the following year the company was still short of funds for their project, and Peterborough bought another block of $60,000 of the bonds. The town then took a mortgage for $80,000 on the road, the company agreeing to pay back $1,200 a year with interest at 6 per cent.

"Eventually Peterborough got back the full amount of that mortgage, $80,000, and probably it may be of further interest to citizens to know that the last $7,000 we received was spent in building the public rest rooms on the Market Square," Mr. Eastwood Stated.

But, that is a long stretch ahead of the brief story about the town's buying of bonds of the railway extending north from Port Hope. The two blocks of stock purchased by Peterborough amounted to $170,000, of which the $80,000 mortgage was repaid, leaving a balance of $90,000 which simply lapsed.

To invest these moneys the town had to obtain the assent of the Government of the Province of Upper Canada, legislative forerunner of Ontario, and that assent involved to a certain extent the endorsement of the province.

Assessment Under $60,000.

Well, Peterborough had raised the money which it had invested in the railway company at a stage in Peterborough's development indicated by its total assessment of less than $60,000, and then it faced the problem of paying the interest on its debentures and providing for a sinking fund for the ultimate liquidation of the debt. Incidentally, the fact that the obligation in that purchase of bonds, assuming a liability of more than three times the total assessment or valuation of the town, is a reflection of the eagerness of the community to obtain railway transportation.

The Council began laying aside sums to meet the interest and sinking fund of the investment, properly intending to lay the money on the line when it became due, but before long the municipal fathers were using those ear-marked funds for the ordinary current expenses of the municipality. And that improvident and actually irregular practice overtook the local administrators, some eighty years ago, just as inevitably as it would now if it were attempted.

"Peterborough got hard up," was the expression Mr. Eastwood used. Troublesome days and probably nights harassed the townspeople. Community services were exceedingly simple, but such as they were they had to be maintained, police and other officials had to be paid, and on top of that was the big interest bill, an inescapable demand on the town's finances.

Commission Set Up.

In their extremity the representatives of the town approached the Government of Upper Canada with their plight, and the outcome of that old necessity and its grief was passing of a special bill authorizing the establishment of the Peterborough City Trust Commission. That was in 1856. The town's municipal debts were consolidated, and the trustees were authorized to requisition from the Council whatever annual amounts were required to provide for the yearly interest on the debt and provision for the sinking fund, an amount to be collected every year which in its accumulation would retire the outstanding debentures, virtually the community's promissory notes. Such in a sketchy outline was the beginning of the City Trust Commission.

From Want to Wealth.

The Commission was authorized in its inception to borrow required sums on the security of the town, and as time passed and levies were made annually for the purposes of meeting and at length retiring the debts of the municipality, the lean years were left behind. Sound financing put money in the hands of the Commission for its various obligations. A surplus of earnings resulted from the investment of sinking funds, and during the last few years the City Council has been drawing upon that surplus for the amounts which are used to lessen the tax levy thereby completing that financial cycle which began in community penury and ended with a large sum to the credit of the city and its ratepayers.

One other detail of the financial eventualities of that time, Mr. Eastwood also mentioned. In 1861 the Grand Trunk Railway took over the Midland which had succeeded the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, and the continuing company acknowledged the $80,000 mortgage which Peterborough held.

Principal and interest were paid by the company, as mentioned at the beginning of this story as Mr. Eastwood told it to the Examiner to-day.

Cobourg Hears About C.L.W.S.

COBOURG, April 18—(ENS).—"If we are willing to pay the price of victory, carry our responsibilities and rise to the heights of our privileges, God will use us as an instrument in His hand to destroy the force of tyranny," declared Rev. Maxwell Allen, field officer of the Canadian Legion War Services, in an address at the Opera House here. Comrade James Collings, president of the Legion Post, presided. His Worship Mayor Burnet introduced the speaker.

Rev. Maxwell Allen said the Canadian Legion was formed following the last war to provide a unified service for the veterans and their families so that the position of both might be made as happy as possible. In the present conflict, he said, the Legion is playing a leading role in stimulating interest in the war as well as catering to the amusement and welfare needs of the men in training camps and overseas.

He stressed the fact that what the democracies do in 1942 may determine the destiny of mankind. He expressed the belief that when the year ends we will know if we are to be free or enslaved. The audience was asked to cast aside the selfishness and greed which are sapping the life blood of the nation. Everyone must recognize there are those who are willing to sell their country and have no desire to face the realities of war, he said.

The audience was asked to forget politics for a day and vote "Yes" in the plebiscite. The past was strewn with the broken promises of politicians and since the Government had been frank enough to ask to be released from its pledge, Canadians as a free people should free the parliament. Canada, the speaker said, must tell the world we are willing the Government should take whatever action is necessary to assure victory. An affirmative vote would be a vote for democracy and a vote for victory.

Speaking of the war effort, Rev. Maxwell Allen said Canada is now getting into her stride. While the Canadian navy was once almost a myth no one today would think of talking dispairingly about it. At present it consists of four hundred ships on the seven seas.

Springville News

There was keen disappointment in the community last year when it was learned that there would be no presentation by the Young People's Dramatic Society For that reason, their play for this year "Only Sally Ann," which is to be presented in Springville United Church on Friday evening, April 17, is being eagerly looked forward to.

This is a lively comedy-drama in three acts full of interesting situations and built along lines that will enable all the players to appear to good advantage.

The case of "Only Sally Ann" includes most of the former members of the Dramatic Club and the directress was particularly fortunate in adding three new members, Miss Jean Fairbairn, Miss Marjorie Galbraith and Jack Preston who show surprising aptitude for dramatic work.

Throughout the entire three acts the rapid action brings about one situation after another in which are mingled thrills, laughs and surprises.

At the close of this very interesting and instructive address Lion Carmen Davey moved a vote of thanks to the speaker on behalf of the club.

PORT HOPE

Athletic Night Draws Crowd

PORT HOPE, April 18—(ENS)—An Athletic Night was held by the students of the Port Hope High School on Friday night, April 17 in the High School Gymnasium.

The students put on a fine display of gymnasium work and dancing as well as outstanding displays of badminton and table tennis.

The boys who owe much to the fine coaching of Mr. Comfort gave a splendid display of mat tumbling and high bar work, while the girls showed the result of much training under the capable leadership of Miss K. Eaton.

The program consisted of a mixed doubles badminton game by Helen Brown, Bob Minaker, Gracie Kembo and Albert Martin.

Grade nine girls came next on the program with a Naas March while grade nine boys gave a fine showing in Danish Gymnastics.

The fourth item was a relay race by different groups of grade 11 girls followed by pyramids and tumbling by Grade 10 boys.

Six cadets took part in full cadet uniform of a precision drill which was given with good military style, these cadets were Jim Poynton, Bob Minaker, Bob Porteous, Bill Luer, Art Trott and Ken Lloyd.

At intermission a splendid exhibition of table tennis was given by Robert Sculthorpe and Keith Staples.

An outstanding display of mat tumbling and team work was given by Chub Downey, Joe McGillis, Ernie Austin, Jimmy Watson and Paul Correlly.

Number 10 on the program was ballroom dancing by grades 12 and 13. These girls all dressed in skirts and blouses looked most attractive and as if they were really enjoying themselves.

Grades 11, 12 and 14 boys took part in the high bar display and showed the fine coaching which they had received.

Horseplay by three horseless riders made much laughter with their comical antics, those taking part in this comedy were Joe McGillis, Ernie Austin and Jim Watson.

Stunts of all kinds were given by Grade 10 girls, while Grade 11 girls gave a pretty Peasant Dance.

The gymnasium was crowded with interested spectators and the comments were most encouraging to those in charge, while the finances were gratifying.

Girls' Class Selling Summer Knitting Bags

HAVELOCK, April 18—(ENS).—The April meeting of the Girls' Class of Knox Presbyterian Church was held on Tuesday evening with [illegible] members present and the first vice-president, Miss Violet Scott, presiding. The usual devotional period of a hymn, Scripture lesson, prayer and roll call followed. The class decided to make summer knitting bags of the washable type and offer them for sale amongst their friends, also their spool racks. A special meeting will be held next Thursday for quilting and a pot-luck supper will be served. Meeting closed with a hymn and the Mizpah benediction, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Ted Watson and Miss Francis Thompson.

Special The Examiner By a P.C.V.S. Student

The war sales graph hit the highest peak since March 10 this week and it was a total sale of $541 that did the trick. An increase of $115 in Stamps was noted and Certificates shot from zero to $176 as students settled down to the task again after the exams.

From September 1941 to date a total of $13,843 in Stamps and Certificates has been sold; $6,311 of this sum was tallied up before Christmas and the remainder — $7,532—in 1942. This shows a substantial upward trend and should influence sales considerably in this closing term. Now for one last figure to climax this review—total for complete sales of War Savings Stamps and Certificates in the Collegiate from the very beginning of the campaign is approximately $36,798. If that isn't enough to spur us to even greater efforts we feel incapable of supplying the solution. Can YOU help on Monday?

Gridiron Anti-Climax

Official and lasting recognition was bestowed on the members of the champion P.C.V.S. Senior Rugby Team—C.O.S.S.A. 1941 conquerors — by the Board of Education this week in the form of a delayed presentation of garnet and gray gabardine windbreakers to the 22 stalwarts.

H. G. Walker, chairman of the Board, made the presentation after a short congratulatory speech in which he emphasized the importance of team-work in all fields of endeavour in military and civil life. Mr. Walker mentioned the fact that several of the boys had already enlisted for active service and that the ranks would probably be depleted still more next season.

Coach Bamforth assisted in the presentations and undoubtedly recalled with pride the achievements of his champs. A season of eight straight wins in which the team overpower their opponents by 194 points to 14 . . . these would be some of the memories.

Hearty clapping broke out as the following boys received their awards—Gordon Matthews, Murray Dewart, Gord Beatty, Max Graham, Gerald Ackford, Lloyd Routly, Bill Cuppy, Gord Burns, Rob Roy, Ed Geraghty, Harold Mather, Ken Murray, Leslie Graham, Tom Lillico, Tom Craig, Stu Saunders, and the faithful water boy—Jim "Squeak" Fallon. Manager Bill Loomis and J. Allen are in the army but will receive their windbreakers. Absent from the hero parade was Captain Harold Matthews, J. Giardino, and B. Menzies.

There are the boys responsible for the honors brought to the school last fall. They hope to repeat the triumph next term if conditions warrant the fielding of a team. To coach and team alike go once again the thanks of all P.C.I.'ites and the best wishes for a successful season this year.

Cadet Preview

The decks have been cleared for action—or the campus has dried out. From now until May 8, the campus will resound with the thud of marching feet and the roll of drums as the cadet corps whips into shape for the annual inspection. An organization parade was held on Wednesday and a semblance of order achieved under the watchful eyes of the instructors. Several changes have been made this year as H. L. Bamforth replaces H. A. Craig now acting adjutant of the Rangers. Bob Crocker was to have assisted with the cadet training but he also has enlisted for active service. Sergeant Griffin now takes the bulk of the load so be prepared for the best. Drill will be held five times a week—from 3.30 to 4.00 on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and from 3.00 to 4.00 on Tuesday and Thursday. Don't forget to bring books for five periods in the morning on these two days. Extra training time will be taken in the P. T. periods so there will be no lack of drill.

The Bugle and Drum Corps plays an important part in every inspection and this year is no exception. The band has the jump on most of the cadets since the boys have been in constant practice since last September. A number of route marches were made with the Rangers during the holidays and Drum Major Routly's charges were out strutting their stuff again on Wednesday.

Another group that trains throughout the year is the Headquarters Company. The Signallers and First Aiders retire in solitude until the day of inspection and then drop like a bomb with all the color and action of their displays.

No statements can be made yet regarding the ranks of individual officers but we hope to have this information for you next week. The guard, color party and Stores department have been more or less filled but students leaving for farm work may bring about some changes. Whether or not the cadettes will appear this year is somewhat of a mystery. Last year the inspector expressed the opinion that the girls humbled the boys completely so the girls should try to repeat in this inspection.

Several boys have been getting army haircuts but it is not suspected that the forthcoming inspection has influenced their actions in this regard.

A camp is to be held this year for cadets from high schools throughout Ontario and quite a number of students from the Collegiate have applied for admission. Military training and organized sports will be the order of the day and wise were the pupils who took advantage of this splendid opportunity.

Teasettes

A new teacher joined the staff this week in the person of F. W. Casserly. Mr. Casserly is filling the position left vacant by Mr. Craig and on behalf of the students we wish him the best of luck.

Provincial Inspectors from Toronto were roaming the corridors this week and had a favourable report to leave with the school. The only black mark was the whistling in the school so students are requested to curb their exuberance until out of the building.

A letter was received by the Students' Council, March 26 from E. W. Stapleford in Ottawa to whom the draft for the mobile kitchen was sent. Mr. Stapleford expressed his appreciation of the gift and reported that the draft had been forwarded to England. A duplicate was sent two weeks later to ensure safe delivery. It is not yet certain to which city the kitchen will be presented but details will be published as soon as received.

Barring any unforeseen difficulties "The Echoes" should be on sale next Friday or the first part of the following week. Co-operation is asked in order that students who left school will receive their copies in good time. Don't forget.

HEALTH CHATS

TOXOID WEEK, APRIL 19-25

Under the aegis of the Health League of Canada and sponsored by the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Health, many municipalities throughout the country will be putting on a special campaign for immunization against Diphtheria. This campaign, lasting from April 19th through the 25th, will be called "Toxoid Week."

Though a great deal has been accomplished in lowering the diphtheria incidence throughout Canada and especially in some municipalities, however, the fact that there were 8,071 cases reported in Canada during the past three years with 800 deaths (over 10% has made it apparent to the Health League that we are far from reaching our easily attainable ideal of no diphtheria. The importance of further effort should be manifest to us here with the memory of several cases and one death in Peterborough only last summer and the knowledge that Toronto, quite near to us, had quite an epidemic just recently.

It is my belief that the people of this city are intelligent enough to take the simple steps necessary to insure that their children are immune to diphtheria without any special campaign carried on with a fanfare of trumpets or a loudspeaker car parading our streets. A great many newcomers in Peterborough may not realize that most of the folks here have their children toxoided against diphtheria as a matter of course both for their own protection and for the protection of others. For their benefit and for the few sleepy folks who have not yet wakened up to this dual responsibilty, I am writing to inform and to remind them that every doctor in Peterborough will be glad to give the necessary treatments and that these can also be had free of charge at either of our weekly Child Welfare Clinics held each Wednesday afternoon in All Saints' Church Sunday School rooms on Rubidge street, or each Friday afternoon in the kindergarten room of Central School on Murray street. It is our belief that such year-round service is much better than sporadic campaigns and all that is necessary for an intelligent community is an occasional reminder of the facilities available.

The toxoid treatment against diphtherai consits of three small injections given three weeks apart. Reactions are very rare and the younger the child the less likely are they to occur. Six months is none too young and it is never too late to get it done. Every child that has been immunized before entering school should have what we call a "step-up" dose after entering school to insure permanence of protection.

More babies have been born in Peterborough since January than have ever been born before in a corresponding period and also more children have been brought into the city than ever before. This means that there are more potential cases of diphtheria and therefore we should have a larger number appearing for immunization either at the doctors' offices or at our Child Hygiene centres than ever before. We believe that our people are more conscious of the need and value of preventive treatment than ever before. Come on citizens and show to us that our faith is not unfounded. Let's make it our boast that in Peterborough every child is given that protection against diphtheria that every child has a right to expect of intelligent parents.

Spring Tea Held At St. John's Guild

PORT HOPE, April 18.—(ENS)—A successful spring tea was held by the ladies of the St. John's Anglican Parish Guild on Friday afternoon, April 17.

From a beautifully arranged center table two of the oldest members of the guild, Mrs. Stratton and Mrs. Dench poured tea. The table was centred with a silver basket holding yellow daffodils and white narcisses while silver candle holders held tall green candles.

Mrs. R. Duke, the president of the Guild received while Mrs. Jamieson was convener of the kitchen and Mrs. H. Hills, convener of the tea tables. A number of the guild members assisted in serving.

A well laden talent table was in charge of Mrs. Lawson and a bazaar table with many novelties was in charge of Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Facey.

The receipts were looked after by Mrs. Ford at the door and the tea which was enjoyed by all those attending proved to be a financial success.

Lions Entertain Forty Brownies

PORT HOPE, April 18.—(ENS).—The Port Hope Lions Club entertained over forty Brownies of the Port Hope pack, number two, at the theatre on Saturday afternoon. The Brownies enjoyed Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney in "Babes On Broadway."

The Brownies in full uniform, paraded from the town hall to the matinee on Saturday afternoon. After enjoying the picture they were taken to Tickell's ice cream parlour for a further treat of ice cream.

These Brownies have collected from fifty to one hundred names each week and given them to the Lions Club, who pick up the salvage at the names and address given them by these Brownies twice a week. During February alone these Brownies brought in enough names tha the salvage collected from them netted the club almost $100.

Many Citizens, Friends Attend Funeral Service Of J. T. Braund

The Salvation Army Temple was crowded to its vestibule for the funeral service in memory of John T. Braund Friday afternoon.

Friends of his long associations of nearly fifty years in Peterborough were united with many others from across the province, united in a common bond of mourning for a man who had held a high place in their esteem, and whose respect and affection for him deepened with the years.

Prominent in that large assembly were men of the elder sports of curling and bowling who had often seen the test of his character in that close but unbound fraternity of friendly competition on the ice and the grass. Many of the members of those clubs were with "J. T." as figuratively he played his last "end" while in their silence they counted the score and whispered their final elation in his winning.

The simple service was conducted by Adjutant Buckley, including prayer by Mrs. Buckley, two choral hymns, "The Better World" and "Lead Kindly Light," and a solo by Gerald Routly, "Some Day the Silver Cord." Mrs. Routly played the organ accompaniments and the recessional music.

Adjutant Buckley quoted a text from Micah: "He that showed thee, O Man, what is good; what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy and to walk humbly with God." As a man of business whose work had different aspects to success, Mr. Braund had acquired a reputation which signified to everybody that he had done justly, and he had left behind him a name unsullied by any devious practice, Adjutant Buckley said. He was a man of kindness in his words and his acts; and he walked humbly all down the way of life. The laurels which came to him he wore worthily and modestly. He was a man of sincere nature whom so many others trusted, and that confidence was one of the fine rewards of his fidelity in all things.

The pall bearers were J. J. Cunningham, Sergeant of the Salvation Army Corps; F. H. Dearborn of the Peterborough Bowling Club; T. F. McArthur and James Harkness of the Curling Club; Nelson Routley and Garth Braund, nephew.

All the members of Mr. Braund's family were present, his widow and their children, including his son, Dr. Eldon Braund and Mrs. Braund of Toronto and his daughter, Miss Phyllis Braund also of Toronto; and his sister, Mrs. Thomas Stacey of Oshawa.

Others who attended from out of the city were: Mr. and Mrs. James Carnwith, Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bellamy, Chatham.

Mrs. Nora Heard, Oshawa and Mrs. Elsie Pomeroy, Toronto. Dr. Norman Found and Mrs. Found, Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. James McArthur, Toronto.

Officers of the Salvation Army were: Colonel and Mrs. Wallace Buntin, Captain Jean Bunton; Colonel and Mrs. Jennings, Adjutant Jennings, Toronto; and Mrs. (Brigadier) McElhinney, Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. William Found, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Found, Mrs. Charles Found, Mr. Arthur Found, Mrs. William Lymer, all of Bowmanville.

John Braund, nephew, and Mrs. Braund of Oshawa; Mrs. Ralph Braund, Oshawa, and Miss Dorothy Braund, niece, Oshawa.

A. J. Reynolds of Toronto, former manager of the Peterborough branch of the Bank of Commerce; W. P. Fess, president, and William Sykes, secretary, of the Toronto General Insurance Company, with Alderman Thomas Mark of this city.

Many beautiful floral offerings contributed their beauty to the deep sentiment of the service in the Temple. The funeral proceeded to Little Lake Cemetery.

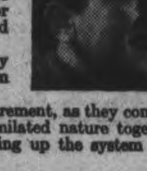
Help the Young People To Health - Happiness



What a common sight to see a young person whose bloodless face and feeble frame are evidences of poor circulation and weakness where bounding health and rosy cheeks should reign.

Young people in such a condition are generally of an anæmic nature and require a preparation containing iron to improve the blood content.

Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills meet this requirement, as they contain three concentrated forms of iron of an easily assimilated nature together with other valuable ingredients indicated for building up the system and helping to improve the blood content.

TRICKY BOB PASTOR IS GIVEN A DECISION OVER JIMMY BIVINS

Pastor Floored Twice, Whips Bivins In Ten

CLEVELAND, April 18 (AP)—Bob Pastor of New York got up from the floor twice in the first round last night and, wearing his man down with jolting blows, carved out a firm ten-round decision over Jimmy Bivins. The victor scaled 183, the Clevelander 176¼.

The Cleveland Negro tossed his heaviest dynamite in the first round, flooring the hevyweight contender for a count of two with a left-right-left to the face and again a half-minute later with two jarring lefts for a count of three.

But just when the 12,742 customers got the scent of a potential upset the Saratoga Springs, N.Y., battler came back to save himself the prospect of a third shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight crown.

It was the twelfth triumph in a row for tricky Robert, although the official verdict was not unanimous, Referee Joe Sedley's ballot being needed to break a deadlock between the judges.

On The Associated Press scoresheet, Pastor had an easy edge, dropping only the first two rounds and taking all the others except the fifth, which was even.

The victor started to rally in the third, catching Jimmy in a corner and pummelling him on the ropes for a full ten seconds. Concentrating constantly on the Clevelander's mid-section, Pastor forced the fight most of the way in the last five stanzas.

By the seventh Bivins' punches had lost their zoom and Pastor was taking all he was offering and whamming away at the loser's stomach. The tired Clevelander was glad to call it a night after making a desperate try for a knockout in the tenth. Pastor came in and slammed away, too, for as good as he took.

After the fight, Pastor said he twisted his right ankle in the fourth or fifth round and as a result was not able to put full weight on this foot. However, he added, this threw Bivins off as much as it bothered him.

"I wasn't hurt in the first round," Pastor added. "I was just surprised, and I knew then I'd have to fight faster. I guess I just wasn't warmed up."

Ball Clubs Plan Funds For Army

NEW YORK, April 18 — (AP).— Baseball is in the war now—with a unified fund raising program for United States Army and Navy relief and a double-decker all-star series.

Every major league club has agreed to set aside the entire receipts of one home game to be divided equally btween the Army Emergency Relief Fund and the Navy Relief Society, and as many minor league clubs as are financially able will join in the movement.

These same service charities also will receive everything over $100,000 that is taken in at the two all-star games, the first of which will be the usual clash between the best players of the National and American Leagues at the Polo Grounds in New York on July 6 and the second of which will watch this winner with a service team at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium on July 7.

These arrangements were agreed upon during three days of conferences between Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, major and minor league executives, and representatives of the Army and Navy.

Power Credited For Fliers Entry In League

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 18.— (CP). — Canada's hockey-minded Minister of Air had a lot to do with the fact Ottawa RC.A.F. Fliers are now playing off with Port Arthur Bear Cats for the Allan Cup. In fact if Hon. C. G. (Chubby) Power, an old pro himself, hadn't used his influence it is doubtful if there would have been a team such as the Fliers

Lorenzo Lafleur, K.C., a delegate to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association annual meeting in progress to-day and president of the Ottawa City Hockey League, tells the story.

"The Fliers had entered a club in our League but a month before the season opened we were advised they had to withdraw their entry," Mr. Lafluer said.

"The powers that be, it seems, had decided too much time would be necessary for the players to gather for workouts and games from Uplands, Rockcliffe and Headquarters."

Mr. Lafleur said he went to see Mr. Power, who played professional with Quebec in his younger days and the Minister, unaware of the club's withdrawal, promised to do what he could.

Later Mr. Power called Mr. Lafleur, explained reasons for the steps taken and said he did not wish to over-rule his advisors.

"However, just six days before our schedule opened and just when we had given up hope of obtaining a replacement I was advised the Fliers would operate as originally planned," continued Mr. Lafleur. "Credit for the change I give to Mr. Power."

While he didn't mention it, the Ottawa prexy no doubt had in mind the fact the Fliers got a "windfall" when the Boston Bruins' Krault line of Milt Schmidt, Porky Dumart and Bobby Bauer were taken in the Air Force and then got on the Flyers' team. The club hasn't lost a game since this trio joined it.

Famous Umpire Quite The Game

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Associated Press Sport Writer

NEW YORK, April 18 — (AP).— You've probably seen the last of Bill Klem on a baseball field. The old arbitrator is strictly front-office now; just a grandstand quarterback sitting up there on the concrete terrace every day gazing blandly in slack-jowled content at the performance of his underlings.

Not that the 68-year-old supervisor of umpires thinks he couldn't work a good game any more.

The old arbitrator maintains that his eyes are as sharp as ever, but he says eyesight is greatly over-rated as an umpire's chief attribute. The chief factors are courage and decisiveness, he says.

He explains for the umteenth time his famous "line" originated accompanying the explanation with vivid imitations of the parties involved.

"It was at Milwaukee in 1904, the year before I came to the National League," he says. "They told me there was one player there I couldn't handle a big outfielder.

"On the first close decision this fellow came rushing in. I didn't see him. I just felt him. I was out by the pitcher's box and I just drew a line in the dirt with my back to the plate. I didn't say what the line was for, but he knew it, and everybody in the park knew it. He just came up to the line and stopped, and that was all there was to it. It was the most natural thing I ever did in my life.

"Sometimes after that I'd never even draw a line. I'd start walking away and then turn and say, 'Don't cross that line or yer outa the game,' and they'd stop."

NEW YORK, April 18 — (AP).— Any of you guys who think baseball won't go right on through the season may be interested to hear that Jedge Landis already has been dickering with the radio folks on World Series broadcasting rights....On his new estate at Rumson, N.J., Mike Jacobs has a swimming pool that cost $75,000—and Mike never goes into the water because of his sinus trouble.....New York turf writers, who have been blasting the race tracks for not contributing their own money instead of the public's to war funds, will contribute $1,000 to the war chest. The boys probably will be playing longshots for a week trying to get their dough back from the public.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

Leafs are pronounced favorites to take tonight's Stanley Cup final game. Apparently the Toronto gang have the Red Wings on the run and should grab off the decisive battle on their own ice. But the Leafs had better not be too confident. The Detroit team is liable to come up with a desperate effort tonight to take the silverware that a week ago they thought was a gift from Santa Claus. The last time the two clubs met in the finals for the historic trophy, it shouldn't be forgotten, the Red Wings took the first two games of the best-of-five series on Toronto ice. The Leafs, as on this occasion fought back from the brink of elimination, won the third and fourth games played in Detroit and everybody arrived at the conclusion that with the Red Wings' morale shot the fifth and deciding game would be a pushover for the Toronto gang. There were a lot of red faces when the Detroiters, battling desperately, outfought the Leafs in that all-important battle and took the Stanley Cup.

Although most fans seem to have forgotten the other occasion this was not the first time that a club down three straight games in a Stanley Cup series fought its way back by taking the next three fixtures. The New York Rangers did that stunt against the Boston Bruins in the cup series at the end of the 1938-39 season. It was in the first round of the playoffs. Boston opened the series with a 2 to 1 win over the Rangers in New York, the game going 59.25 minutes overtime before the Bruins finally sank the winning marker. Then the teams moved to Boston for two games. Boston grabbed off the second with a 3 to 2 score after 8.24 minutes of overtime and when they took the third 4 to 1 in regulation time it looked to be all over but the cheering. Rangers got back into the running by winning the fourth game, played at New York by 2 to 1. Back in Boston for the fifth game the fighting New Yorkers picked off another 2 to 1 victory, this one taking 17.19 minutes of overtime and then evened up the series by a 3 to 1 triumph in the sixth game, played in New York. The seventh game was in Boston and Rangers after having staged one of the most gallant comebacks in the history of hockey finally had to admit defeat, dropping the final struggle 2 to 1 after the teams had battled 48 minutes of overtime. That was probably the closest series in the archives of the Stanley Cup. In the seven games Bruins scored 14 goals as against 12 by the Rangers and the teams had to play two hours, 23 minutes and 8 seconds of overtime during the series to get a winner.

One way and another the blurbs in the Toronto sport columns are good for a chuckle or two. Here is a comparison of two recent sentences from the typewriter of one Andy Lytle: "We have been plugging a bunch of bums all season"—Mr. Lytle after the third game of the series with Detroit. "You can beat the drums for every member of the Leafs. They were all superb."— Mr. Lytle after the sixth game of the same series. We can hardly wait until Monday to get the final verdict from Mr. Lytle as to whether Hap Day's men are to be definitely listed as heroes or bums.

Some Great Pitching

Friday's doings in the big show were featured by two great pitching duels in the American League and by the fourth straight win of the Boston Braves in the National loop. Hero for the day in our book was the great old veteran of the Chicago White Sox, Ted Lyons, who strode out to the hill top after his club had taken it on the chin three times in a row and weaved a magic spell around the bats of the Cleveland Indians to take the Tribe into camp 1 to 0. The lion-hearted Lyons kept seven Cleveland hits well scattered and although the Pale Hose could only manufacture one run for him that was enough in the face of the Indians' inability to solve the puzzling delivery of the grand old man of the White Sox. There was another 1 to 0 battle in the American circuit yesterday Ernie Bonham of the Yanks shutting out the Boston Red Sox by that score. It was a tight duel with Oscar Judd who allowed the Yanks only five hits but they bunched two of them to put together their solitary run. Bonham picking up where he had left off last season was touched for only six hits.

* * * * * *

At that we imagine Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox would be almost as tickled over the pitching performance of Judd as if the Sox had taken the verdict. The pitching problem has been a pain in the neck for so long that the performance of his hurling staff so far this season must have the Boston pilot smiling all over. Newsome, Dobson and Wagner have each turned in a winning effort and Judd came through with a performance that would have meant victory 99 out of 100 times. Meanwhile the surprise team, the St. Louis Browns remained on even terms with the Yanks by taking their fourth straight win, beating Chicago White Sox yesterday 7 to 6. Connie Mack's Athletics said it with home runs to win their first triumph of the season over Washington. Bob Johnston's circuit clout in the ninth with a man on sewed up the game and Bill Knickerbocker's homer in the tenth gave the A's a 5 to 4 win.

The End Of The Season

In the National League the Boston Braves remained out in front by taking their fourth game in a row, nosing out the Giants 4 to 3. It was a loss for Hal Schumacher who was the starting pitcher for the New Yorkers. Manager Mel Ott hit his second homer of the season in a losing cause. The Brooklyn Dodgers won an easy victory over the Phillies, who dropped their fourth game in succession. Allen pitched for the Bums who won 7 to 1. The Pittsburg Pirates triumphed over the Cards 3 to 2, defeating Lon Warneke who was touched for nine hits as against seven allowed by Sewell. Bill Lee, although he allowed 10 hits pitched the Chicago Cubs to a win over the Cincinnati Reds, despite the fact that Johnny VanderMeer allowed only half the number of safeties. Altogether the pitching in both leagues so far has been surprisingly good considering the earliness of the season.

The final basketball game of the season will be played at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium tonight when the Quakers and Dominions will clash in the second game of the final series for the City League championship. Quakers finished the regular schedule at the top of the heap and Dominions took second slot, after a playoff battle with the Collegiate and Vocational School team. In the first game of the final round last Saturday Quakers turned on a hot attack to pick up a big margin on their opponents to carry into tonight's game but in spite of that setback the Dominions hope to give the league leaders much stouter opposition in tonight's battle. It should be quite a lively affair as there is keen rivalry between the two squads.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The Kingston Canadian Women's Army Corps basketball team with three Peterborough girls, Jean Metcalfe, Agnes Bowler and Florence Gynane on the lineup won the provincial cage title in that division by defeating a Toronto team in the London tourney 20 to 13....The season is just nicely started but already Leo the Lip Durocher has been fined $100 for brawling with umpires....Bob Pastor had a tough time beating Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland last night, getting up off the floor twice to finally earn the decision....Joe DiMaggio went hitless again yesterday for the second day in succession....Quebec had more hockey players registered this season than Ontario....The total for Canada dropped from 20,751 to 13,038....A contest between the Leafs and Ottawa Flyers is mooted, assuming that both outfits will win their respective playoffs....Perhaps Detroit and Port Arthur may have something to say about the matter....Bobby Bauer will not play for the Ottawa Flyers tonight.

Score As Leafs Tie Stanley Cup Series

Don Metz, Bob Goldham and Billy Taylor, who scored the three Leaf goals in the sixth game of the Stanley Cup finals, are pictured with Sweeney Schriner, who set up the play for Goldham and Taylor to score. Schriner was badly cut and bruised during the hard fought battle which saw the Leafs tie up the series with the Red Wings.

OBA Playdowns Net $6,825 Attract 35,788

HAMILTON, April 18 — With President J. C. McDonald of Chesley in the chair the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Ontario Baseball Association opened here last night. The agenda as presented by Secretary Bill Snyder of Hamilton was a short one. The longest item was the secretary's report in which he reviewed the happenings of the past year and revealed that playoff games in all series from senior "A" down to bantam had attracted 35,788 people and brought the sum of $6,825.80. The biggest money makers were the senior "A" and the intermediate "B", the former drawing slightly more than 10,000 people for twelve games with a total gate of $2,667.02, while the latter attracted 5,168 spectators for seventeen games and the "take" was $1,647.66. This was in keeping with 1940.

The report also revealed that in 1941 a total of forty-one leagues, comprising some 180 clubs, made up the O.B.A. membership, but this was much smaller than in the 1940, the decrease being brought about by the loss of several legues, including Huron and Perth, Lake Shore, Halton County Central and other intermediate leagues and the decrease in the number of clubs affiliated with organizations such as the inter-County and Haldimand.

During the 100 playdown games the secretary was called upon to deal with only two protests and both were dealt ith without a great deal of trouble. In his lengthy report Mr. Snyder thanked the members of the association for the always ready support, the press for their reports of O.B.A. meetings and games.

Application of J. Tudor, Hensall, Ont., for re-instatement was refused. Tudor played with the London Pony League team during the latter part of 1941, and the O.B.A. constitution reads that he must remain out of amateur sport for one year.

Permission granted Max Samuelly of Brantford to workout with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League came up for discussion and the ruling was that if Samuelly was back in amateur company by July 1 he would be allowed to compete with the Simon Pures this season

Little Giants Cop 4-1 Win From Royals

By The Associated Press

They debated the question "resolved that it pays to have a big league trial" in the Jersey City baseball park yesterday and John Wittig and his Little Giant mates won the verdict easily from Al Sherer and Montreal Royals.

Wittig, big righthander who was a member of the New York Giant pitching staff last summer, allowed only two hits in subduing the Royals, 4-1. Sherer, equally as big and also a righthander but who got his test with Brooklyn Dodgers, was clouted for 10 blows.

It was the second victory of the young season for the Jersey City team and kept them at the top of the ladder with Rochester Red Wings, who downed Baltimore Orioles for the second straight time, 10-8.

The Orioles finished the contest with a seven run splurge that hurried Max Surkont to the showers. George Dockins came in and was touched for only one hit — a three run homer.

The Toronto-Syracuse contest was postponed because of weather while Newark Bears mastered Buffalo Bisons, 5-1, behind the nine-hit pitching of youthful Tommy Byrne. The Toronto-Syracuse game will be played as part of a doubleheader May 3.

How well Wittig learned all the answers in his argument with Sherer is demonstrated by the fact that he struck out four and did not allow a hit until the eighth inning when Tom Tatum, another player who had a trial in the big time, doubled.

He issued four bases on balls, however, and three of them were combined with Homer Howell's fly for the lone marker.

The Little Giants bunched their blows, getting three in the first frame for two tallies and duplicating their efforts in the sixth.

CAHA Head Sees Clubs Of 10 In Senior Loops

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO, April 18 — (CP). — Reports of the rules and resolutions committees will be submitted to the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to-day for disposition by the delegates at large.

Both committees met yesterday following the opening session of the three-day meeting and drafted their reports. Neither report is expected to advance anything that might prove contentious.

Only 10 resolutions have been received, Frank Sargent, chairman of the committee and first vice-president of the association, said following his meeting.

Any change in the rules, of necessity, would have to have the approval of the National Hockey League because both organizations collaborate in this respect.

Some delegates privately have expressed a dislike for the scrambly "fore-checking" style of hockey which has gained ascendancy of recent years. It has been suggested that the accent on this type of play could be lessened if some means were devised to stop a club from dumping the puck into the other team's defence zone and then tying up their rivals with slap-bang tactics of boarding and bumping.

In his presidential address yesterday, George Dudley of Midland hit out at the "tourist" in hockey—the player who peddles his services to the highest bidder and does nothing else but play hockey during the season. Such a practice no longer can be condoned with the country facing such a serious situation as regards to manpower.

"This association cannot countenance clubs composed of men who play hockey only for a living," Mr. Dudley declared. "Young men capable of playing hockey are capable of either being in the armed services or in necessary industries."

The president said this necessarily brought up the question of curtailed schedules and smaller groupings to reduce the time spent in travelling.

"If necessary the senior series may have to be revamped; long schedules curtailed and groupings arranged so as not to have an adverse effect on men in war work."

Mr. Dudley believed that another eventuality would be a reduction in team personnel. He visualized clubs of 10 men—a goalie, three defencemen, and six forwards—rather than the 13 now allowed.

"We must carry on without affecting the military or industrial operations yet in such a way as to give relaxation and recreation to the public," he said.

Follow The "SKYWAYS" Trail

Yes, if you want to add to your smoking enjoyment step in to your favorite tobacco store and ask for a pouch of "SKYWAYS." This new pipe tobacco, although recently introduced, has already won a host of friends. That's because it offers something a little different in the way of flavor. Made from the finest Ontario-grown burley tobaccos, it is so processed as to retain its full tobacco flavor without bite or sting, while its subtle aroma is pleasing to a degree. Be sure to ask for "SKYWAYS" in the 15c flavor-protecting pouch. You'll enjoy every pipeful.

Ott, Two Players Ousted, Giants Lose 4-3

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

If there's a more startling sight in this young baseball season than Boston Braves on top of the National League, it's Melvin Ott of New York Giants being bounced from a game for arguing with an umpire.

It took Ott only four days to crash the circle once dominated by Leo Durocher and Frankie Frisch, and that amazing manoeuvre kept the Braves in their unfamiliar position at the head of the parade.

The score was 1-1 at Boston yesterday afternoon, with Hal Schumacher of the Giants and Dick Errickson of the Braves locked in a pitching duel.

Ott's home run in the top half of the fourth inning had tied it up after Manny Fernandez had sent the Braves out in front with a four-bagger of his own, one of the two hits of Schumacher in three frames.

Then the Braves came to bat and Fernandez led off with a walk. Paul Waner forced the runner at second, but Umpire Ziggy Sears ruled that Waner reached first base ahead of the throw on the attempted double play, a decision with which Ott did not agree.

As 4,043 fans gasped in surprise, Ott charged in from his right field post and was joined by Schumacher and shortstop Billy Jurges, the Giants captain, in a three-ply argument that had the usual chance of victory.

Sears jerked his thumb toward the clubhouse and the Giants' brand new boss, who had been tossed out of only three games in 16 years as a major leaguer, headed for the showers—the loss of the first debate in his managerial career.

Sear then gave Jurges the heave-followed by chasing Schumacher. Harry Feldman, with no warmup whatsoever, replaced Schumacher on the mound and before he could withdraw he was thoroughly chilled.

Three hits and a walk produced three runs and that was the ball game. Johnny Mize whittled the margin down for the Giants with a sixth-inning home run and a trio of blows added another tally in the seventh, but rookie Johnny Sain arrived on the scene in time to save the 4-3 decision for the Braves.

Yanks Blank Sox 1-0

New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns continued along their unbeaten ways in the American league. The world champion Yanks dropped Boston Red Sox out of the ranks of the undefeated with a 1-0 shutout.

Two hits and an error produced the only tally, with Charlie Keller's single scoring the payoff run. It was the fourth in a row for the Yanks.

The Browns kept pace with the champions by nosing out Detroit Tigers, 7-6 although they were outhit, 12-10.

In fact, every winner in the American League and two of those in the senior circuit got fewer hits than their opponents yesterday. And seven of the eight games were decided by a single run.

At Cleveland, Ted Lyons pitched Chicago White Sox to a 1-0 decision over the Indians. Bill Knickerbocker's 10th-inning home run gave the Athletics a 5-4 victory over Washington Senators at Philadelphia after Bob Johnson had brought the A's from behind with a tying homer in the ninth.

Brooklyn Dodgers downed Philadelphia Phils 7-1, with a 12-hit attack as Johnny Allen hurled six-hit ball and Pittsburgh Pirates stayed even with the league champs by tripping St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2.

Chicago Cubs cashed in on Johnny Vander Meer's wildness to squeeze out a 3-2 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

Requested And Alsab Entered

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 18 — (AP).—Alsab and Requested, two of the Kentucky Derby's big "name" horses, and twelve other 3-year-olds were entered yesterday in Saturday's Chesapeake Stakes the traditional trial for the May 2 classic.

Although six other Derby candidates were named for the twenty-third running of the Chesapeake, chief interest centres in the performances of Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab and Ben F. Whitaker's Requested, which at present are quoted at about 5 to 1 in the Derby.

Other Derby eligibles entered for the $15,000-added mile and one-sixteenth race, were Mrs. Ralph McIlvain's Bright Willie, Mrs. E. du Pont Weir's imported Hyancinthus, Foxcatcher Farm's Baby Dumpling, and Fairy Manah, C. H. Jones' Phar Rong, and T. D. Buhl's Sweep Swinger.

Completing the field are R. Sterlink Clark's Colchis, Cedar Farm's Grey Wing Mrs. S. S. Zell's Incoming, Whitaker's Eternal Peace, J. J. McIntyre's Redthrown, and Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Seamanlike.

Leafs And Wings Strategy Close Secret

TORONTO, April 18 — (CP). — The reason hasnt been explained, but officials of the Detroit and the Toronto hockey clubs no longer formulate their strategy for the morning paper trade. Usual pre-game announcements are missing to-day as the clubs wait for the seventh and deciding game to-night of their Stanley Cup final.

Both coaches said last night that lineups would not be decided until a few hours before the game. Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit said "any lineup changes will be decided at a meeting on Saturday morning with Jack Adams," and Hap Day of Toronto parried questions with: "I won't know myself until to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon."

There is almost certain to be a switch in the Detroit lineup, although the principals are not known definitely. It is likely that players to figure in any lineup change are Adam Brown and Eddie Bush, who were taken from the lineup for Thursday night's game, and Gus Giesebrecht and Doug McCaig, who replaced them.

Eddie Bush, aggressive defenceman who picked off four assists and one goal when Detroit won the third game, was benched because of his defensive weaknesses. Brown because of general deficiency. As Giesebrecht was one of the stars of Detroit's losing cause on Thursday he likely will remain. It's a toss-up whether McCaig will hold his spot or Bush will be sent back into action.

Detroit's Main Hopes.

Goodfellow said last night that much will depend on Don Grosso and Syd Abel in Detroit's attempt to crack Leafs' three-game comeback record to-night. Grosso and Abel were leading lights in Wings' first three victories in the series, but faded in effectiveness as Toronto took the fourth, fifth and sixth contests. Goodfellow said both are tired.

There was little likelihood that Gord Drillon, Hank Goldup, and Bucko McDonald, Toronto regulars benched to make way or spare forward Don Metz and rookies Ernie Dickens and Gaye Stewart, would find themselves back in the lineup. They worked out yesterday, while the rest of the club had a light skate. Wings rested, without even going htrough the formalities of a workout.

Probable starting lineups:

Detroit.	Position.	Toronto.
	Goal.
Mowers		Broda
	Defence.
Orlando		Kampman
Stewart		Stanowski
	Centre.
Grosso		Apps
	Wings.

The coast champions beat the Flyers two straight in the best-of-three series, winning the second game last night 43-26. They took the first 47-3.

Win By Flyers May See Tilt With The Leafs

OTTAWA, April 18 — (CP).—The Cinderella-like rise to hockey prominence of Ottawa's Royal Canadian Air-Force Flyers swings into its final phases tonight when they oppose Port Arthur Bearcats here in the second game of a best-of-five series for senior hockey's Allan Cup.

Flyers won the series opener 7-4 here Thursday. A victory tonight and another in Montreal Monday would complete their rendezvous with destiny and bring the Capital City its first Dominion senior crown in 34 years.

But the youthful Bearcats loom as a serious obstacle in Flyers' path, with the western champions counting heavily on the return of defence star Bert Laprade to swing the tide in their favor during the remaining games.

If they do win the Allan Cup, however, Flyers may play at least one additional game before hanging up their togs for the season. This possibility emerged last night when Flyers' manager, Sqdn. Ldr. Jimmy Campbell, disclosed the Airmen, as senior champions, would challenge the Stanley Cup winners to a challenge match for war charity.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings wind up their Stanley Cup series tonight. Campbell said he has been assured Toronto Maple Leafs would be agreeable to the benefit contest. But Tommy Emmett, spokesman for the Wings, said in Toronto today "Win or lose, Detroit plays its last game of this season . . . tonight."

Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins proposed the amateur-professional challenge game Feb. 17, the day before Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer of Boston's Kraut Line played for the first time with the Air Force. It would be the crowning climax of a rags-to-riches season for Flyers, undefeated in their last 19 starts.

Whether Bert Laprade will be able to join his brothers, Edgar and Remi in the Port Arthur lineup will be decided today. He is still bothered by an eye injury suffered in the western final series against Kimberley Dynamiters.

If the ailing defence star is kept out of action Coach Hugh O'Leary's lineup will be unchanged from the first game. Flyers planned one shift, Coach Bill Touhey electing to send Jack Seymour in to replace Hank Blade on Ottawa's third line with Vic Haneberry and Johnny Acheson.

Probable starting lineups:

Port Arthur	Position	Ottawa
	Goal
Dartell		Pinke
	Defence
Maki		Cain
Gordon		Murray
	Centre
Kelly		Schmidt
	Wings
McDougall		Snell
McKenzie		Dumart

Officials—Curly Wheatley of Trail, B.C., and Bert McCaffrey of Toronto.

WILL MEET ARMY TEAM.

NEW YORK, April 18.—(AP)—Baseball's leaders, headed by High Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, decided at a conference Friday that the winning team of the all-star game at New York July 6 would meet a team composed of major leaguers now in the United States military service at Cleveland July 7.

Cricket Club Meets On Monday

A meeting of the Peterborough-Whitaker cricket club will be held at the Chamber of Commerce on Monday night at 8 o'clock.

At the annual meetings held last fall it was decided to carry on under the name of the Peterboro-Whitaker Club, with A. H. Radford as secretary-treasurer.

The important appointment of a captain was left over until this spring and will be one of the matters to be considered at Monday's meeting.

Under present conditions it is uncertain whether the old game can be carried on. The secretary will report to the meeting in regard to his efforts to obtain matches under present difficulties as to transportation. Any newcomers interested in cricket are invited to attend Monday's meeting, especially cricketers who have the inclination and the time to play the game.

In this connection it is pointed out that cricketers are carrying on in the Old Country, although of course to a limited degree. For matches have been arranged to be played at Lords, all but eight of them one-day games and the season will close with a match between the Army and the Air Force both of which can put into the field elevens composed of first class county players.

Petawawa Cage Champions Edge Kingston

LONDON, Ont., April 18—(CP).—Petawawa's army basketball team today is tthe first Ontario military cage champion.

Victory over Kingston, 43-37 in the final game of a two-day tournament here gave the crown to Petawawa last night. Kingston's Canadian Women's Army Corps team won he C.W.A.C. title with a 20-13 triumph over Toronto.

Personal fouls cost Kingston a good deal of effectiveness in the men's final. The squad drew a total of 16, with Barbasin, one of the outstanding players, forced from the game in the second half. The half time score was 22-22.

In semi-final games played earlier Petawawa defeated Ottawa 35-3[illegible] and Kingston swamped North Bay 39-23.

The basketball tournament was fourth in a series of athletic events for military units stationed in Ontario. Previously, a boxing tournament was held at Kingston, a hockey tournament at Toronto and a track and field meet at Hamilton.

Agnes Logan Green Recital For Art Association

A treat all too rare in Peterborough's musical season was enjoyed by members of the Women's Art Association and their friends when Agnes Logan Green, distinguished Canadian pianist, gave a recital on Friday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A.

Acclaimed by critics as a truly fine concert pianist, Mrs. Green has an artist's sensitive appreciation of the great works of music and her performance has a delicacy and attentiveness that make it seem a service of love. Her interpretations are marked by sincerity and a careful technique. That we in Peterborough hear her all too seldom is perhaps because we, in our Canadian way, have unappreciative of the treasure in our midst.

The program, which was, everyone agreed, too short, included an early Sonata by Beethoven, Opus 27, No. 1 in E flat, the Mendelssohn Variations Serieuses in D Minor, and a group of three short numbers, first, three Harpsichord pieces by the English composer, Henry Purcell; exquisite jewels of music which Mrs. Green played with grace and skill; a waltz by the modern English composer, Cyril Scott, the lovely and popular "Clair de Lune" by Debussy, and an exquisite Bach chorale. For encores she played a waltz by Schumann, and Brahms ever-beautiful "Cradle Song" as arranged by Percy Grainger.

When the too brief concert was over the hope was expressed on all sides that this fine artist would be heard soon, and often. Pianists of Mrs. Green's skill and artistry are few and far between and we of Peterborough should be proud of her.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, president, was in the chair for the meeting and announced that Miss Gertrude Cox, a member of the Association, would hold an exhibition of her paintings at the Y.W.C.A. beginning next Friday. The annual meeting of the Association will be held in the Green Room next Friday afternoon.

Tea was served in the Green Room, where a beautiful tea-table, centred with a huge bouquet of sweet peas and fern in a crystal bowl, with slender pastel colored lighted tapers among the flowers.

THE YOUNGEST OLD MAN IN B.C.

C. C. Reynolds

Mr. C. C. Reynolds, 82 years of age, walked from Chilliwack to his farm 16 miles away. He also walked to Abbotsford, a distanct of 21 miles. Feeling so fit and vigorous, instead of taking the train or bus, he could not resist the pioneer urge to walk. Six years ago at the age of 76, Mr. Reynolds was in such a critical state of health he could not walk upstairs, due to serious ailments and advanced years. Here are his own words:

"While three score and ten is the alloted span of life for man, I have entered my five score period — still enjoying the blessing of health and vigor. I can safely say that I owe my last six years' health and happiness to LANG'S MINERAL REMEDY, which meant a new lease of life to me — with new hope and sound health taking the place of misery and despair." Mr. Reynolds is one of those fine old Canadian pioneers whose word is as good as his bond.

Mrs. Richard Irvin writes: "I was afflicted with Arthritis over ten years. For a long period I was unable to walk, and my hands were so crippled I could do nothing to help myself, all treatment having failed. It was a fortunate day for me when a friend told me about LANG'S MINERAL REMEDY. I now walk anywhere and do my own house work. I thank God for the day I heard of this Mineral Remedy. I am 78 years of age."

We do not pretend to claim that Lang's Mineral is any miracle worker. It is simply a product of nature from the earth and our only claim is that the Minerals it contains assist nature through the blood stream in relieving weakness or disease in certain forms, and building new health and vitality, for which the two bona-fide cases quoted above speak for themselves. It has helped a great many and may help you. Lang's Mineral has been used over half a century — simple to us and inexpensive. Several months' treatment is necessary in chronic cases.

Those afflicted with Arthritis, Rheumatism, Stomach Ailments, Kidneys, Nerves, Piles, Colitis, Eczema, Female Ailments, Weakness, Run-down, etc., we will gladly refer you to responsible men and women who have proven the merit of Lang's Mineral Remedy to their own satisfaction. Write us for free information, we don't ask you to buy anything.

Jean Dorris Wins Quilt In Club Draw

The draw for the applique quilt, the proceeds of which are to be donated to the woollen blanket fund of the Red Cross, was held on Friday afternoon in Mr. Harold Coleman's store, by members of the Hill-top Neighbors' Club: Mesdames K. Kingston, H. Coleman, J. Willey, R. Waldorf, J. Roberts, J. L. Smith and Ed. Johnston.

Prior to the draw, Mrs. Johnston thanked all those friends who assisted in the sale of tickets, the proceeds of which, the club is proud to announce, exceed $77. Mrs. Johnston referred especially to Mrs. J. Tinney, who took charge of the quilting, and to Mr. Coleman, for his generosity in donating display space for the quilt, and to Miss Evelyn Hill for her able assistance with the tickets and money.

Little Miss Dorothy Kingston, daughter of Lieut. Ken Kingston of the Glengarry Highlanders, overseas, drew the winning ticket number 214, which bore the name of A. Jean Dorris, 535 King Street.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

It is to be hoped that all you ladies are planning to use your franchise on April 27. Men and women lived lives of unceasing sacrifice; suffered imprisonment and torture; died on the scaffold and the field of battle to give you the right to vote. Today, again, men die in battle or before the firing squad, and dare death and torture in concentration camps the ancient, beloved cities of the world are laid in ruins, women and children die or are maimed for life because the franchise you hold and all that it stands for are things too precvious to be lost. If you fail to use that franchise—and use it honestly and intelligently—you betray the faith and trust of every man and woman, who down through the centuries, has sacrificed everything freedom. You are unfaithful alike to the heroic dead of Thermopylae, Yyres and Dunkirk. You are, in your small way, a traitor to Democracy. Why? Because rights and privileges thrive on use and if we do not use them we wake up one day to find that they are gone. We have no right to insist on the continuance of privileges which we are too lazy, too complacently self-satisified to use. How you vote is your own business. If you don't vote it is a fairly clear indication that Democracy means nothing to you and that you'd just as soon have a dictator to do your thinking for you......No matter what you read in the Toronto papers, the Peterborough Salvage committee doesn't want and won't take tin cans.... Treasure every drop of the syrup from canned fruits for use in sweetening fresh-fruit mixtures, tart fruit juices, pudding sauces and so forth, in your plan to save sugar.... The Kingsway Workers are having a tea and sale of Home cooking at the home of Mrs. A. H. Straton on Park street a week from Friday ....Draw for the beautiful quilt made by the Hilltop Neighbours Club will be made a week from Friday....Helps is still needed at the Salvage Depot. What's the matter, ladies? Afraid of getting your hands dirty? War is neither a clean nor a pretty business, and before this one's over you'll suffer more than dirty hands and broken finger nails....Bruce Hutchison's book, "The Unknown Country," is one that all Canadians should read and see themselves, not as others see them, but as they appear to the eyes of a discerning fellow countryman....It seems some people still don't tie up their newspapers for the Salvage. How many times do you have to be told, anyway? There's a war on, and it's yours as well as everybody else's. If you can't or won't go and help you might at least make the work as easy as you can.

Week's News Of Peterborough Red Cross Branch

The Red Cross Society is interested in nutrition as in all worthwhile enterprises and the Peterborough Red Cross branch has its own nutrition program, as well as its many other activities.

A famous nutritionist once said: "We are what we eat," and in wartime this is brought home to us more fully than at any other time. War brings added strain on health and endurance; and good nutrition is as vital a part of our war effort as the production of ships, planes and guns. The Canadian Government has recognized this and has formed a national nutrition committee to carry to all parts of the Dominion the knowledge of proper and adequate foods. The Red Cross Soviety has always had its nutrition program and is working in close cooperation with the government's committee.

Since the war started thousands of young men have volunteered their services to their country, hundreds have been rejected and 40% of these rejections have been traced to conditions arising from faulty nutrition. Surveys across Canada show that faulty nutrition is general and occurs in higher income groups as well as in groups with lower incomes.

By helping families to obtain larger quantities of more nourishing foods, and using to the best advantage the surplus now on our market, the homemakers of Canada are definitely helping their country.

A nutrition committee was formed in Peterborough last fall and under its sponsorship two courses were given in "War Economy Nutrition." Each course consisted of eight lessons and approximately seventy ladies enrolled for these classes. Attendance certificates were given to those who attended seven of the eight classe. One coure was conducted on the Y.W.C.A., while the other was held in the household science kitchen of the Collegiate

Last year when the call came from the Provincial Red Cross for jams, jellies, etc. to be shipped overseas Peterborough shipped to Toronto 448 pounds. This was made up of donations form the following:

St. Paul's Friendly Group, 48 pounds of jam; Lily Lake Red Cross, 16 pounds of jelly; Lakehurst, 48 pound of jelly and 144 pounds of honey; Benfort, 96 pounds of honey; P.C.I.V.S., 96 pounds of jam.

This year the call will come again and it is hoped that the response will be even greater. These jellies jams and honey are all shipped in 4 pound tins which are provided by the Red Cross Society.

Peterborough's Nutrition committee has a larger and more extensive program under consideration, and hopes everyone in Peterborough will protect themselves against disease by eating the proper kinds and amounts of foods. In addition, good health enables wage earners to stay on the job.

We have a war to win. We must be fit for whatever task is required of us. Every housewife can do her bit, and help others to do theirs, by keeping her family's health at a high level.

George Street Choir Aided By Assisting Artists Present Beautiful Concert

Unmistakable evidence of fine training and plenty of hard, enthusiastic work were present in the fine concert presented on Friday evening by George Street Choir under the direction of Mr. Charles Renaud, assisted by Charles Dobias, violinist, and Evaleen Kilby, contralto.

The choir started well and grew better as the program progressed, singing with a skill and enthusiasm under the very able direction of their leader. The chief qualities of their performance were careful attention to detail, clean cut phrasing, and surprisingly good enunciation. They sang with confidence, in themselves as individuals and in the choir as a whole; and they gave wholehearted attention to their singing. They had none of the drag which often characterizes church choirs, in fact in one or two numbers, notably "The Sleigh" by Kountz, they were inclined to go a shade two swiftly. Miss Lenore Skitch and Mrs. Charles Renaud shared the honors of accompaniment.

Outstanding numbers by the choir were "Two Temples" by Eichoran, sung by the ladies' chorus, Psalm 150, in a musical setting by Cesar Frank and "Sheep and Lambs" by Homer, sung by the whole choir; "Jesus Tender Shepherd" by Strickland and "Flower of Dream" by Clokey, two gentle, exquisitely lovely lyrics, sung with grace and delicacy, and a rollicking number, "County Fair" by Kanitz, all sung by the Ladies' Chorus; and the negro spiritual arranged by Christy, "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho" and "Goin' Home" by Dvorack by the whole choir. The last mentioned number was a particularly fine piece of work.

It is to be regretted that the audience did not show more appreciation of the truly fine work of the choir. Painstaking care and loving artistry are the same, whether it lives in your home town or is imported from outside, and deserves the same recognition.

The assisting artists were fine indeed. Charles Dobias, young Czechoslovakian violinist, plays with a fine appreciation of the music and his playing gives rich promise of finer things to come, for, somewhat naturally it lacks the quality which maturity and experience alone can bring. His technique is excellent, though in some of the more spectacular pieces, his execution seemed not quite smooth enough. In addition to his talent, Mr. Dobias is gifted with a charming and self-possessed platform manner. In the last number of the first group his "E" string broke and he was able to finish the number on three strings and apologize gracefully to the audience. It seemed, however, as if the incident had affected his playing, for he showed definite signs of nervousness in the next group of pieces, but recovered his poise for an encore, a lively and vivacious "Czardas" which he played with spirit and grace.

Charles Dobias' numbers included Air on the G String," by Bach, "Hejre Kati" by Hubay, "Tambourin" by Smith, "On the Wings of Song" by Mendelssohn, Slavonic dances by Dvorak, and "Hora Staccato" by Heifetz.

Evaleen Kilby, contralto, has a voice of exquisite purity in its upper register and of caressing sweetness in its lower register. Not overly powerful, it is delicately lovely, a joy to listen to. She sings fastidiously, with flawless technique and perfect enunciation but without any apparent effort, naturally, and with grace and dignity. Her choice of numbers showed discernment; Haydn's "The Spirit's Song," Torelli's "Well Thou Knowest," Peri's "Invocation Orpheus," Mary Turner Salter's "The Cry of Rachel," which she sang with telling dramatic effect; "Silent Noon" by Williams, and "Yarmouth Fair," a swift rollicking ballad by Peter Warlock which displayed her fine technique admirably.

Charles Dobias was accompanied by his sister, Gabrille Dobias, and Miss Kilby was accompanied by Nan Shaw. Gabrille Dobias showed herself not only a skilful accompanist, but a fine musician in her own right.

Lillian J. Roche Bride Of Sidney Armstrong

PORT HOPE, April 18.—(ENS)—The wedding took place in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Saturday, April 18, at 2:30 p.m. of Lillian Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Roche to Sidney Earl Anderson of Toronto, son of Mrs. W. Anderson and the late W. Anderson of Cobourg, Ont.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. G. Rowland, B.A., B.D. The church was prettily decorated with roses, spring flowers and ferns. Mrs. Lenore Greer of Cobourg supplied the wedding music and during the signing of the register.

Miss Aileen Russel sang, "All Joy Be Thine" accompanied by Mrs. Greer on the organ.

Given in marriage by her father the bride looked charming in a white crepe gown, with sweetheart neckline, tight bodice and bouffant skirt with which was worn a full-length veil and carried talisman roses and bovardia. The bride was attended by Miss Irene Baxter in pink tafefta with sweetheart neckline, tight bodice and long, full skirt and carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Little Miss Marilyn Darling acted as train bearer in a floor-length blue taffeta gown.

The groom was attended by Private Wesley Roche, brother of the bride and the ushers were Mr. Art Smith and Mr. Sherwood Haydon.

After the ceremony a reception was held at "Seaton Hall" for 75 guests, where the bride's mother received in a black crepe frock with turquoise blue trim with hat to match. The groom's mother who also received wore black with matching accessories.

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to western points, the bride travelling in turquoise blue afternoon dress under a beige top coat with dark brown hat and brown accessories.

Mrs. W. J. Scott Of Norwood Honored at Party

NORWOOD, April 23—(ENS). — The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Marks was the scene of a lovely party on Thursday evening, when Mrs. Marks and Mrs Harry Peters were joint hostesses to the neighbors and friends who met to bid Mrs. W. J. Scott farewell before she leaves to take up residence in Peterborough.

An enjoyable time was spent playing games and contests, which were arranged by Miss Florence Nevins, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostesses. An address read by Mrs. Marks, expressing the regret felt at losing their neighbor, was followed by the presentation by Mrs. Peters of a beautiful chenille bedspread to Mrs Scott. The guest of honor, although taken completely by surprise, replied, thanking everyone for the handsome gift and the kind words of the address, and expressing appreciation of the followship she had enjoyed in their midst.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 19

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of the sudden, surprising, spectacular and sensational, but at basis it should be safe and sane, the denouement depending on which course is pursued to gain the adventure, romance and unique experience indicated. Overdoing in any direction may have its penalties and regrets, so shun extravagance of act, expenditure, emotions and general behavior.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of great if not sensational adventure, which may result in substantial growth, returns and general stability if the spirit of romance, adventure and novelty be directed into safe channels. The great danger is from peculiar friends, strange persons or situations rather than the dramatic urges of themselves.

A child born on this day although fond of the unusual and good things of life yet may possess many solid traits. Its peculiar urges should turn to creative expression and it may attain secure and worthy position in life.

For Monday, April 20

Monday's astrological forecast is for a continuance of the surprising and unforeseen developments of the affairs, with the promise of a stabilizing result if reason, good judgment and not emotionalism are allowed to hold sway. There may be menace of cheating, treachery, and designing associates.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a thrilling and romantic year, with unpredictable adventures, probably romantic. But be vigilant as to false persons and circumstances in both business and domestic affairs. Shun extravagance, doubtful intrigues.

A child born on this day may have much ingenuity and skill, with many solid traits but may be easily led away by false values and associates.

WIFE'S SUSPICIONS OFTEN DRIVE HER HUSBAND AWAY

Show Trust in Them and Nine Out of Ten Times They Remain Faithful

Dear Miss Dix.—I have a friend who constantly harps on the idea that all men are philanderers and that no husband can be trusted. She will never leave her husband for even a week-end because she says that when the cat is away the mice will play. She tags her husband everywhere he goes as far as possible, but I don't think he looks very happy. Now, I never thought about not trusting my husband until this woman put the danger of leaving him into my head, but she has said so much about it and what he might do if I left him alone that I have gotten jittery and am thinking of giving up a three weeks' trip I was about to take to visit my relatives. I know I need the change and I want to go very badly, but I don't want to risk losing my husband either. What shall I do?—Undecided.

Answer.—Go along and have your visit; have a good time, come back rested and refreshed and with a lot of new and interesting things to tell your husband, and you will have a second honeymoon. Nothing does so much to put pep into domestic life as for a husband and wife to be parted occasionally. A three-weeks' trip, such as you are contemplating, would save many a divorce. For, no matter how much a man and woman may love each other, no matter how congenial they are, if they are together day after day, week after week, month after month, seeing the same people, doing the same things, they are bound to bore each other in the end. They have talked out. Each knows what the other is going to say before he or she says it, and they sit up in dead silence, or else take to fighting and quarreling just to put a little spice into the conversation.

Absence is Good Thing

It is a good thing for a wife to leave her husband occasionally for a short period, because it makes him appreciate her more and realize how completely his happiness is in her hands. When she is at home he takes the comforts of his home for granted, but when she is away he finds out what an amount of work and worrying and planning it takes to turn a house into a home and keep it clean and orderly, with good food on the table, and a light in the window to welcome him when he comes home of an evening.

Also the wife's short absences give her husband, who is perhaps too busy to have a vacation himself, a little change that he needs. He can slip the domestic yoke a bit and eat around at restaurants and visit old friends and stay out a few nights with the boys and discover that, after all, he has lost his taste for bachelorhood and wants to get back to home and mother.

Not All Philanderers

But the wife's absence, like everything else in life, should be taken in moderation and not too often. She should go away just long enough to make her husband miss her, but not long enough for him to find that he can get along without her.

As for your silly friend's idea that all men are philanderers, that's nonsense. Otherwise there wouldn't be anything but broken homes in the community.

Bancroft News

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wiggins, of Belleville, arrived in town Saturday night and will spend their holidays visiting with relatives in town and Baptiste.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Leedy and family and Mr. Rodney Robinson, all of Peterborough, spent the week-end visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Robinson of Bancroft.

Many of the teachers returned to town over the week-end preparatory to commencing their last term of teaching prior to the summer vacation.

Many of the farmers were seen using sleighs on the roads and the Department of Highways were busily engaged Friday and early Saturday clearing the main highways. Saturday afternoon the sun's re-appearance diminished most of the fall and made the motoring very sloppy.

We have had the pleasure of doing business with you a number of years and we are gratified in the feeling that we have served you at all times to your satisfaction.

During the past season, however, through circumstances beyond our control and due to our vast increase in business, it has been utterly impossible to maintain our usual high standard of service. The slow delivery of materials, labour shortages, and many other items, have been factors in retarding our usual service.

We extremely regret if, at any time you have been inconvenienced, but knowing the unusual circumstances we had to contend with, we trust you will overlook it and appreciate our predicament.

We thank you most heartily for the co-operation you have given us.

FISHING SEASON "OPENS."

"I don't need to worry about meat for Sunday," a certain man about town told the Examiner today. "A friend of mine brought me a fish this morning. That was his good deed for the week. Charlie Kingan would not think so, of course, especially as this fish was probably speared. As to where this good samaritan got the it!—I didn't ask, he didn't say—so I don't know."

NO CUFFS ON DRESS SUITS

"Do you see officers of the Air Force with cuffs on their trousers? The first time you see an officer with cuffs bringing him in and I'll give you a suit. D'je ever see cuffs on the trousers of dress suits, the morning stripes, you know, or you should? Of course you never have and never wil. So why should there be any fuss about cuffs for everyday sack suits? Seems to be quite a lot of men here and there who do a lot of cheap kicking about everything the government is trying to do, with one exception, — and that's kicking Germans and Japs." That's a quotation from a men's wear dealer.

GRENFELL MISSION

The Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission is making its annual appeal for funds. Mrs. Gordon R. Langley, 239 Burnham street and the Examiner office are receiving the subscriptions.

TOUGH GOING.

Pte. Frank O'Leary, Mark Street, and Pte. Ron. Horton, George Street, are finding that gas and tire shortages are making hitch-hiking a heart-breaking business. They left Ottawa at six last night and did not reach Peterborough until ten this morning, despite the fact they travelled by way of No. 2 highway. There is very little traffic on the road, they say.

REMANDED FOR TRIAL.

Arrested on Monaghan Road last night by Officers Gordon K. Hardy and Gordon Trennum, A. E. Pammett faced a charge in police court this morning of driving a motor truck while intoxicated. At the request of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., the accused was remanded until Monday for trial, bail being set at $400.

MAKING A GOOD RECOVERY.

Business men and customers of Eric Howard, popular young men's wear merchant, will be glad to know he is getting along fine. He was seriously injured in a skiing accident on February 25, but is now home from hospital and has been walking around for several days. He expects to be back to work in about two weeks.

Patriots Active

MENTION some commodity temporarily in shortage immediately all the patriots from Halifax to Vancouver, and including Peterborough, reach out and try to grab.

This week it has been beef. When the disturbed market was mentioned toward the end of last week, the meat-eaters rushed to the shops and cleaned up the remnant stock.

"There is a small supply," G. S. Matthews of Canada Packers said today. "I believe all the stores have some, but not as much as they want."

Rangers Vote Monday On Plebiscite

The officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the Prince of Wales Rangers go through all the trials and pleasures of army life. Dental parades continue daily to the Training Centre. Those who come back say they are indeed thorough. Hidden talent in the shape of a barber has also been discovered. His chair is now set up and scissors and clippers are at work each morning and afternoon. The sergeant's mess has made Monday morning the deadline for close-cropped hair and C.S.M.'s Walsh and Poole are ready to try their latest patterns on any tardy Rangers.

Monday is the day, too, for the Rangers to vote on the national plebiscite. The forms have been posted to inform the men and the voting should go through smoothly.

Gas and oil and tires are precious in the army too. A group of six N.C.O.'s returned from district headquarters today with four trucks for the use of the regiment. In the meantime, Part 1 orders have placed a careful check on the use of all regimental vehicles, so that they may not waste precious rubber and gasoline.

Lieut. J. Nichols completed his adjutant qualifications course at St. John, Quebec, and attained a very high standard of efficiency in his tests. He returned to the regiment last Saturday and proceeded to his O.T.C. course at Gordon Head, B.C. on Monday.

Eight new applications for enlistment have come in since yesterday morning. Five men have been added to strength.

LEAVES ARE NOT GARBAGE

Householders have been busy raking up their lawns of old grass and leaves for some days. This material is not strictly garbage and it is optional with the garbage collector whether or not he will remove it.

Frankly the garbage collector has not the wagon space to take away such raked up material, nor has the incinerator sufficient capacity to burn it.

It is urged that householders co-operate by hiring carters to remove this material to the dumps.

Fund In Aid Of War Victims Tops $40,000

The most recent objective for the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund has met with success in a decided manner, for not only has it reached the 440,000 mark, but it has gone beyond that by a substantial margin, due to the splendid results obtained from the pet dog show held in the Peterborough Armouries on April 8, and sponsored by dog fanciers of the city.

From the success which this effort met with, the first of its kind in some time there can be no doubt that it aroused considerable public support, and the amount of money raised testifies to that in no uncertain manner, for with returns from one small lot of tickets yet to come in, the total proceeds as credited in to-day's list for the fund amounted to $267.75.

There were no expenses in connection with the event, the printing and prizes, both for the door prize and raffle, were donated, and all the prize ribbons, special prizes, and the special advertising were given in the same manner. To sum up, the dog fanciers of the city, together with all those who contributed in any way by the giving of prizes or services are to be congratulated on the success of this effort.

As a class the printers of the city have been very good to the fund, and in connection with this particular event we pay due tribute to the Commercial Press, George C. Scott of King Street, and the Peterborough Printing Company, Ltd., for the help they gave, with Jack Lewis, manager of Kresge's adding an assist by supplying the ribbon for the prizes. Specials were donated by R. Dale, Merritt's Dairy Co., Stock Bread Co., Stan. Braund, George Cunningham, A. Ward Smith R. Knox, Men's Style Shop, Peterborough Pet Shop, Empress Hotel, Robert Kingdon, W. J. Welch, Canada Packers Ltd., Gains Dog Food Co., Master Dog Food Co., Monarch Dog Food, Ross Miller Dog Food, Farmers' Co-operative Co., Dr. King, Dr. H. Worton, Dr. C. A. Temple, Millbrook, Mrs. A. Spicer, a Big Ben from a Friend, a traveller's alarm clock from a Friend of Dogs, H. S. Routley, and A. C. Wolfe, while door prize was donated by Mrs. W. J. Welch, and the raffle prize by A. C. Wolfe with H. S. Routley contributing the advertising; the judges, who gave their services for the cause, were Rev. Canon W. R. Robertson, Mrs. J. McMartin, Mrs. H. Smith, Mrs. W. Thompson, Mrs. J. The prizes this year will feature Victory Bonds. The first draw prize will be a $1,000 bond, the second $300, the third $50 and the fourth $25.

NEAR FREEZING.

Chills returned to the market this morning with reports that the thermometer was down to one degree above freezing. (See weather column for official figure). The touch of Spring was missing from the vending of pigs and potatoes, maple syrup. Anyway, farmers are now concerned about work after a winter of comparative marking time in the less exacting routine. On the lighter land along the western highway some of the neighbors nearer the city were kicking up dust this week from the first action of the year.

Taken For Nazi Young Swiss Hides In Swamp

When he was stopped on Highway 28 Friday night by a party of Peterborough men who suspected him of being the German prisoner who escaped from Bowmanville Thursday night and is still at large, Franz Bishof, a young Swiss-Canadian living near Oshawa, believed that he was being held up and bolted off the road into the swampland, a short distance south of Kendry station.

Although police searched for him for several hours afterward to assure him that there was no need of his hiding, Bishof was afraid to come out to the highway and spent the night in the bush, coming into the police station this morning to report.

The young Swiss left Oshawa yesterday on a bicycle, intending to ride to the farm of Alfred Sturzenegger, another Swiss who for some time has been farming on part of the Sanderson land on the Chemong Road. Bishof had worked in that district himself some time ago and was planning to purchase some land so he carried $300 on his person.

After he had passed through Bewdley last night, a garagemen who had noticed Bishof's foreign accent and his appearance believed that the rider might be the missing German airman and accordingly telephoned his suspicions to the police here. Traffic Officer L. A. McClure and Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher met Bishof near Fraserville, questioned him closely, checked on his story and gave him a clean bill of health and the Oshawa Swiss resumed his journey toward Smith township.

Unfortunately for him, however, the Bewdley garageman had told a party of Peterborough citizens who passed through Bewdley that he thought the missing German prisoner was riding a wheel toward Peterborough. They did not know that the police had already examined the man and accordingly when they caught up to the cyclist near the farm of Victor Sweeting they stopped him. Bishof was being questioned when he suddenly bolted off the highway into the bush land to the west, leaving his bicycle on the road.

Later Provincial Officers McClure and Price Morris tried to locate the frightened Swiss and Alfred Sturzenegger also visited the vicinity early this morning and called the young Oshawa man in the Swiss language. However, Bishof failed to appear and could not be found by the officers. He turned up at the police station this morning, declaring that he had remained hiding in the swamp because he was afraid he might be robbed if he came out. He said that he had seen the lights of the police cars but did not know what they were at that time.

60 Men Apply To Join Canadian Navy

More than sixty men applied for enlistment in the Royal Canadian Navy on Friday when an officer and two ratings from Kingston set up a recruiting office in the city building for nine hours, and came close to setting a record for navy recruiting in Eastern Ontario.

Lieut. E. M. Bassingthwaight, who was in charge of the recruiting described the response as magnificent and he added that on the whole they were a keen bunch of boys who applied. Sixteen of them were given transportation warrants to Kingston for immediate enlistment, while the applicants of the others are being given consideration, and each one will receive notification on the final decision.

Several recruits with specialized training which will enable them to fit right into the Navy program were taken on, and the officer was particularly glad to get this type of man. A few others were too young but will be able to re-apply in a short time. Two of the men accepted are boys of Italian parentage indicating that here again the Italian population of this city is making a splendid contribution to the war.

Actually it was an overflow response as the officer had to close ing officer will be back in the near the boys to wait a short time while he slipped out for a bite of lunch as he had been unable to get away during the noon hour. It is not known whether or not the recruiting officer wil be back i nthe near future.

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

THE STORY: Returning to Montreal from a summer resort, Myra Mack shares a train seat with Lieut. Nigel Monkhouse. They discover a mutual friend in Ferdy Lorton, artist, and a mutual admiration of a pretty girl aboard the train. Back at her stenographer's job Myra makes a business call, sees the pretty girl behind a desk.

CHAPTER III

That evening Myra dropped in to see Ferdy Lorton on her way home. It was a peculiar friendship that drew the two together, a friendship that owed more to frankness than to good looks. Ferdy had an amused cynical outlook towards the world and knew everybody in town, Myra had an outspoken bluntness and was thoroughly capable at everything she undertook. Ferdy was a confirmed bachelor who seemed to be particularly attractive to attractive females, whereas Myra was more or less resigned to the fact that her face was not her fortune and that she was by necessity a career girl.

She found Ferdy alone buried in a book.

"Hullo," he said, pleasure registering under his casual tone. "Have a cocktail. You've been neglecting me."

Myra looked around the studio. "Not painting?" she asked.

Ferdy rummaged in his cupboard for the makings of a cocktail. "No," he answered over his shoulder. "The weather is too good. I'm thinking of packing up and hieing me to the hills."

"Some frivolous people get all the luck," sighed Myra, throwing a hat that she disliked onto the comfortable settee.

Ferdy grinned. "All work and no play?"

"Too much work. By the way, I had a weekend on the lake shore and met a friend of yours."

Ferdy shook up the cocktail with a professional vigor.

"Name?"

"Nigel Monkhouse."

"Thought he was up in Petawawa."

"So he was," said Myra. "But now he's on leave before going overseas."

"Nice chap," said Ferdy. "I must give him a call."

"Is he married?" asked Myra.

Ferdy poured out a cocktail and looked at her with a suspicious grin. "No. You haven't any designs?"

Myra grunted. "I'd have as much chance there as I would with a plaster statue. Besides, he was looking pretty hard at a peaches and cream something on the train."

"Poor Nigel," said Ferdy. "Plenty of money. Charm. But he had a bad time with one of our Montreal debs a year or so ago."

"Then he's recovering nicely," said Myra.

"Not thinking of doing more matchmaking?" asked Ferdy. He sat down by her side on the settee and disposed himself in lazy comfort.

"Not me. I'm tired of fixing up other people's love affairs and leaving myself on the shelf. Every time I go down to the office these days I think what a blessing a nice comfortable husband would be. You know the kind—no flowers and chocolates, just good honest bread and butter. Then I could sit at home and read a book for a change."

Ferdy grinned. "You need a holiday. So do I. I'm going up to my place in the Laurentians this weekend. Why not come up? We'll make a small party of it. Let's see — what about your father?"

"Cut Danny out. I love him, I obey him when he isn't unreasonable, I respect him. But I see him every weekend in the year and I'd rather see a new face or two."

"Good," said Ferdy. "We'll ask Nigel Monkhouse. Haven't you got a few more sisters in the family?"

"There's Peggy, but she's dynamite."

"That's the young one I haven't met. Who do you mean, dynamite?"

"Well she's only 17, the kind of poison that puts frogs in your bed and burrs in your pyjamas."

Ferdy nodded. "She'll do."

"No," said Myra. "My brother has just come home from overseas. We can't go."

"Ask him too. That's three men, two girls. I'll find another girl."

"No," said Myra firmly. "No more weekends for me at your place with any of your social friends. Remember the last time. Society and Myra Mack are like oil and water. They don't mix, even at high temperatures."

"All right," said Ferdy. "We'll take peaches and cream. Has she a face worth painting?"

Myra sat up. "If you think I am going to go and pick up a strange female to make a Lorton weekend, you're mistaken."

"But think of Nigel!"

"Sorry," said Myra firmly. "Peaches and cream is wrong. I should have said, mascara and lipstick."

"I like them both," said Ferdy. "That is, at the proper place and time."

"Exactly," agreed Myra. "That's just what I meant."

That night at the Mack household in Notre Dame de Grace it was an evening of celebration. Michael Mack, the eldest son, had been overseas for more than a year, and it was not likely that he would have many more leaves before going overseas again with the Third Division. Something had happened to him in that year of absence. He had filled out. There was new firmness to the set of his lips and his eyes were thoughtful. Some of the things he had seen had matured him more than his 23 years in Canada. Michael had lost none of the bantering ways and happy-go-lucky carelessness that his father had tried vainly to cure him of, but he had with it a clear cut self-possession. His dark hair waved thickly from his brow just as gently as it had always done but there was a fine line drawn across his forehead, and bronzed cheeks now hollowed slightly gave him a lean, hard look.

Myra, when she first saw him, realized at once that the boy she had always regarded as "kid brother" had suddenly, swiftly grown up. Peggy, her younger sister, had been not quite 16 when he had gone overseas, and Michael was obviously just as surprised to see what changes 18 months had made in her as she was rapt with brother-worship over the changed young man who had come back again.

Myra made no mention of the projected weekend.

She had had enough experience with her family to suggest things quietly to each member separately rather than drop any proposal, mild or bombshell, into the family circle. She took her sister aside quietly later in the evening and told her what was proposed. Peggy was delighted. She had heard so much about Myra's friend Ferdy Lorton, and knew his reputation as an artist, but she had never yet met him and was consumed with curiosity.

More important, she had not yet had much opportunity to escape from the family circle. Peggy, as Myra had told Ferdy, was "dynamite." She yearned to meet interesting people and see something of the world beyond school and home and teen-aged friends. She had a healthy curiosity, an idle young lady's penchant for intrigue, irrepressible energy, and a gay beauty that was just the percussion cap these spirited traits needed to set them off.

"Fun!" Peggy exclaimed to Myra. And I'll see that it's exciting, too, she added to herself.

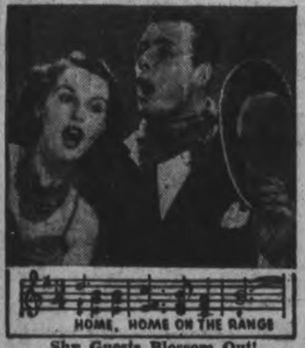
Cowboy Songs for Pleasant Hours



Shy Guests Blossom Out!

If your party guests are shy, open a songbook of cowboy ditties and see how joyfully everyone falls to warbling.

"Home On the Range" is a favorite no one can resist:

"Oh give me a home where the buffalo roam,
Where the deer and the antelope play—
Where never is heard a discouraging word
And the skies are not cloudy all day."

What to sing next? That gay ballad, "The Border Affair." It begins:

"I learned Spanish from a girl
Who lived down Sonora way,
Sparkling eyes as black as jet,
Hair as fine as softest spray."

Singing that plaintive cowboy lament, "The Texas Song," you get pretty soulful:

"I'm going to leave old Texas now,
For they've no use for the longhorn cow.
They've plowed and fenced my cattle range,
And the people there are all so strange."

On you go, singing the many other hits in our songbook. Has 18 cowboy songs complete with words and music; some with guitar diagrams. Includes "Goin' Down to Santa Fe Town," "Git Along Little Dogies."

COWBOY SONGS FOR PLEASANT HOURS

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of "Popular Cowboy Songs" to The Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of songbook.

ENOUGH TO BID HIGHER

THERE ARE times when your hand does not justify your entering the bidding with an overcall at the range of one, but is good enough to bid two at a later stage. If your partner had done nothing but pass when your chance to bid one arrived, and the last call had been made by the opponent at your right, the bidding still is open. It is then possible that the opponent at your left has all of the remaining strength and your partner is blank. But, if a suit bid by the man at the left is then passed by the one at your right, you know the opponents are not extra strong, and that therefore your partner has something.

North: ♠K 7 4 ♥A K J ♦J 4 3 2 ♣10 9 2

West: ♠10 6 ♥7 4 3 ♦K 6 5 ♣A K 8 5 4

East: ♠Q 3 2 ♥Q 10 8 6 5 ♦Q 7 ♣Q 6 3

South: ♠A J 9 8 5 ♥9 2 ♦A 10 9 8 ♣J 7

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1♣	Pass	1♥	Pass
2♣ (	Pass	Pass	2♠
Pass	3♠	Pass	4♠

Leonard J. Wyeth, of the Union club in New York, sitting in the South position, gave a very splendid example on this deal of the advisability of making a bid based on deductions that his partner had a certain amount of strength.

After East had bid 1-Heart over his partner's 1-Club, it would have been highly dangerous for Mr. Wyeth to call 1-Spade in the South while vulnerable. The opponents might have been in a position to double him and hold him to about four tricks, perhaps setting him 800 points. But after West bid 2-Clubs and East passed this, he knew the other side could not be very strong. Hence he knew his partner had a fair amount of strength, so he then bid 2-Spades without trepidation.

Sure enough, his partner had some strength and raised to 3-Spades, being sure the suit was a five-carder, and Mr. Wyeth took it to 4-Spades.

The reward was a nice game, as only two tricks were lost in clubs and one in diamonds, since the trump finesse worked.

Your Week-End Lesson

If you have in the dummy four cards of a suit headed by the A-9-7, and in your own hand four headed by the K-8, what should you try to do in order to give yourself the best chance to avoid losing two tricks in the suit?

Millbrook Agriculture Society Makes Plans For Spring Fair

MILLBROOK, April 18—(ENS).—Reorganization of the Millbrook Agricultural Society continuously in existence since 1875, was effected at a meeting held in the Town Hall on Wednesday afternoon, with the retiring president, I. W. Larmer, in the chair, and with representatives of the various live stock breeders' clubs of the district now included on its board of directors.

The matter of holding a spring fair came up for considerable discussion, and it was finally decided to have this event at the local Agricultural Grounds some time in June, with all classes of live stock competing in the several sections of the prize list.

Representatives of live stock breeders' clubs promised substantial backing for the undertaking. The matter of financing the spring fair was discussed at some length, possible sources of revenue being the gate receipts, which in the case of the Clydesdale Field Day held here last summer was between $60 and $70, as explained by S. S. Staples; grants from the Municipal Council of Millbrook and surrounding district; the Government grant; and possibly anything that might be contributed by the breeders clubs interested, and the Agricultural Society.

Grant Is Sought

Since Government grants have been slashed owing to war conditions, it was felt that some definite action should be taken to find out what amount is likely to come from this source, and at a directors' meeting, immediately following the organization gathering, R. McCamus and S. S. Staples were appointed a delegation to go to Toronto and personally interview J. J. Carroll regarding this, and other details.

The election resulted in the following slate: President, Robert McCamus; vice-presidents, L. C. McNeil and S. S. Staples; directors, Robert and Gerald Larmer representing the younger men; Stuart Donaldson, the beef ring; Roy Ferren, the Percheron Club; Roy Armstrong, the Jersey Breeders; J. Whittington, the Clydesdales; Walter Moncrief, the sheep breeders; H. A. Fallis, light horses; and for the Holstein breeders the secretary was instructed to write the Durham Club for suggested names.

Associate directors: G. A. Fair, A. J. Henderson, L. W. Smith, R. O. Larmer, I. W. Larmer, T. W. McCamus, J. J. Powell, R. I. Fallis, Garnet Shield, W. E. Ball, P. Stinson, V. R. Hunter, N. Belch, H. Tate, Harry Campbell, Percy Donaldson.

Honorary presidents: W. F. Rickard, M.P., Cecil Mercer, M.P.P., J. F. Staples, Harry Patterson, Dr. C. A. Temple.

At the directors' meeting, J. N. McGill was re-elected secretary, treasurer, with Reg Fallis as assistant, and delegations were appointed to wait on the Millbrook, Cavan, Manvers and South Monaghan councils to solicit grants toward making the spring fair an assured success.

In his address, the retiring president, I. W. Larmer, thanked the directors for their support, and purged co-operation and willingness to work as two essentials for the successful carrying on of the society. Mr. Larmer also mentioned that during his three-year term of office (one more year than usually accorded a president), the debt under which the Millbrook society had labored for some years, had been wiped out. This fact was also mentioned with appreciation by the sponsors of the vote of thanks to Mr. Larmer for his faithful services, the mover and seconder being L. C. McNeil and N. Belch.

The new president, R. McCamus, made a brief inaugural address, and L. W. Smith spoke appreciatively of the fine record of service left by the late Thomas Donaldson, for over sixty years connected with the Millbrook Agricultural Society, and also that of the late J. L. McCamus, likewise the past president. The loss sustained by the death of these two men during the past year has been keenly felt by the organization, and the secretary was instructed to send letters of sympathy to their respective families.

burg followed swiftly upon a two-day series of raids in which more than 1,000 planes rained tons of explosives on Nazi targets stretching from the coastal rim of France into the heart of Germany.

Augsburg is also the site of a Messerschmitt plant.

Only two planes, a fighter and a bomber, were lost in the bold stabs yesterday which found bomb-carrying fighter planes attacking throughout Northern France as well.

"Little opposition" was encountered from Nazi airmen, a communique last night said, and this was taken as indicative of Germany's increased problem of fighting vast aerial wars on two fronts.

A shell-filling factory was hit at Marquise on the Cherbourg Peninsula, a main railway line struck at Calais, a power station at Rouen, and shipyards and fuel tanks at Cherbourg, the communique said.

The Germans retaliated only sporadically last night, dropping a few bombs at several places in Southern England where slight damage was caused, but at least 10 persons were killed and others injured the Air Ministry said. All except one of the casualties were caused by a direct hit on one home.

Fires started by Nazi oil bombs were extinguished quickly. One Nazi raider was shot down.

The Daily Express, to emphasize what 600 attacking planes mean, printed tiny figures of that many aircraft—eight rows of 75 each — across the top of page one over an eight-column banner line "Runstedt Front Blitzed."

Lindsay Air Gunner Describes Fire Of Germans In Raid Over Kiel

LINDSAY, Ont., April 18—(CP).—(CP).—As a sergeant wireless-air gunner, Perry D. Teatro, 21, has had many thrilling experiences recently over Germany, with the bomber command of the R.A.F.

"Last week we were over Kiel and it was a hectic trip," he wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stafford Teatro. "Searchlights caught us. In trying to get away from them we came down from 12,000 to 800 feet. Our ship was riddled with holes and I think that every gun at Kiel was on us."

"None of us was hurt. On the way down I was firing at searchlights and put out several of them. When we got back the other fellows said they saw us and that we deserved the Victoria Cross for getting out of that fire. Earlier in the week we were twice over Essen."

Tokyo radio announcers, alternating Japanese and English-language broadcasts, claimed that nine raiders were destroyed; that a number of bombs were dropped, but that the total of damages and casualties was slight.

Greater Tokyo, embracing industrial and transportaiton areas at the heart of the Empire, has a population of more than 7,000,000, about one-tenth of the people of the islands. In Yokohama a major Pacific port 18 miles away, live 865,000.

"Just After Hospitals."

A Japanese-language announcement claimed the raiders did not attempt to hit military establishments and "inflicted damage on grammar schools, hospitals, and cultural establishments."

"These planes were repulsed by a heavy barrage of our defence guns," the announcer said. "I wish to reveal that our losses were extremely light."

Further broadcasts piled up details. Some announcements called the planes "Allied," others said they were unidentified.

"Metropolitan Tokyo experienced its first taste of an enemy invasion shortly past noon on Saturday when a small unit of unidentified planes appeared shortly following the alert warning," it was announced..... "They batted about releasing a few bombs on the outskirts of the city.

"Japanese interceptor planes immediately took chase. The hostile planes were seen winging at high sped, but were made easy prey for the Japanese pursuit planes.

"Ironically enough, the bombs dropped struck several homes, while other reports indicated that a school and a hospital were hit.

"Military authorities disclosed that none of the military establishments were made targets of the raid.

Claim Nine Downed

"First official reports of the raid from the eastern army headquarters revealed that nine enemy planes had been shot down."

The boadcast closed with a statement that "mounting indignation over the indiscriminate bombing is being felt among the people."

(The announcement that the planes converged from several directions suggested a combination of operations by long-range bombers and carrier-based craft.

(That such a feat is entirely possible was shown by the destructive raid by a United States naval-air force March 4 on Marcus Island, within 1,000 miles of Japan, and the 13-bomber attack against Philippine bases this week which involved a 4,000-mile round trip from Australian bases.

(While Japan had never before felt the jar of aerial bombs, Chinese fliers made pamphlet raids on various populous centres of the islands in 1938. Tons of literature were dropped in an effort to influence the Japanese people against the invasion campaign their military leaders started in 1937.)

Domei, the Japanese news and propaganda agency, pictured the people as unperturbed throughout the raiding.

"As the enemy aircraft appeared for the first time over the Tokyo-Yokohama region people remained calm and unruffled," Domei said. "Unperturbed housewives and civil defence units closed windows and checked anti-air raid equipment with the same cool efficiency shown in practice.

"Children peered into the sky for hostile craft.

"In the downtown districts of the Ginza and Narunouchi business flowed on as usual with buses, street cars and other vehicles running without interruption.

"While the Japanese air defence smashed down the invaders, lunch-hour crowds unhurriedly finished their meals and returned to their offices satisfied that defence workers were doing their jobs well."

50 Bombs n Moresby

MELBOURNE, April 18—(CP).—Five Japanese bombers, escorted by five fighters, raided Allied-held Port Moresby, New Guinea, this morning, a report from that advanced base said.

It estimated 50 bombs were dropped, causing neither damage nor casualties. United Nations fighters engaged the formation.

YOU CAN STILL BUILD!

Essential Building Materials Are Still Available—

Building Costs Are Only Slightly Increased

Over recent months there has been a great deal of mis-information circulated about the cost of building and whether or not contractors can complete houses for civilian occupation—

HERE ARE THE FACTS—

1—You can still build homes under $5,000 without a license from the Controller of Construction—over $5,000 a license is necessary.

2—A contractor can still get all materials necessary for home construction

In addition to the foregoing, any building which you do will help to relieve the housing shortage and thus allow out-of-town workers to find accommodations.

Building Loans Under The National Housing Act Are Still Available

BUILDING A HOME

Mr. O. J. Hayward, prominent builder and contractor, in discussing the advisability of building a home this year, states "that costs of building have not advanced unduly, but the larger demand of building products in the coming years would indicate a rise in price. Up to the present time 99% of building materials are available for the average home and we have the assurance that this condition will continue for the coming year at least."

Mr. Hayward stated that in his opinion New Real Estate at the present time was one of the soundest investments that any person could make.

It is a truly patriotic venture to build a home now, because when you vacate your present house or apartment you automatically help to relieve the housing shortage in this city.

Claim Tokyo Raiders Went to China

By The Canadian Press

Japan broadcast a new version today of bombing raids Saturday on Tokyo and three other great cities, implying that the assault was launched from three United States aircraft carriers in the Pacific and that some of the planes raced on to safety in China after loosing their bombs.

Tokyo imperial headquarters issued this announcement:—

"A hostile navy unit centring around three aircraft carriers appeared April 18 at a distant point off the eastern coast of Japan proper but, fearing Japanese counter-attack, fled without approaching Japanese shores.

"On the same day approximately 10 enemy aircraft of Northern American B-25 type appeared over Tokyo and other areas, flying singly or in pairs.

"Hostile planes which managed to escape being downed appeared to have escaped to China.

"Damage caused was extremely light."

The world still was dependent on Japanese accounts or other Axis versions originating in Japan for news of what occurred Saturday, when the Japanese declared that planes bearing the insignia of the United States Air Force bombed Tokyo, the capital; Yokohama and Kobe, the two chief ports, and Nagoya, Japan's third city and centre of aircraft production.

Nothing From U.S.

There was no word of such a raid from Washington or any other United Nations capital and if the raids were launched from a task force such as the Tokyo announcement describes, it may be 10 days or longer before the American version is published. Washington's policy is to permit all units to return to their bases before publishing results.

As if to support the Tokyo thesis of a carrier-based attack with the raiders continuing on to China, a Reuters dispatch from Chungking said the United States planes which struck home at Japan had arrived safely at their destination. Quoting "well-informed quarters" in the Chinese provisional capital, the dispatch gave no details as to this destination. Chungking had reported earlier that the attack was not launched from Chinese soil.

The North American Aviation Incorporated's B-25 is a twin-engine medium bomber with a top speed of more than 300 miles an hour and a cruising range of 2,650 miles.

However, either the Japanese identification of the raiding planes or the implication that they were carrier-launched seemed in error.

2 Allied Raids Wreck 40 Jap Airplanes

Rabaul Base, Docks Left In Ruins, Japs Shy Of Food

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

U.S. Army Headquarters, Australia, April 20 (AP)—Allied airmen, racing through tropical rainstorms in one of their attacks, were reported today to have destroyed 40 Japanese bombing and fighting planes on the ground in two raids on Rabaul.

While these continuing attacks indicated American and Australian determination to press the Japanese in their outer rim bases and perhaps force them to relax their grip, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's new high command in the southwest Pacific began a swift mapping of plans to carry out instructinos to prepare an offensive.

As an initial step, Prime Minister John Curtin met with Gen. MacArthur and other Allied service chiefs in a conference on a "highly confidential" subject.

The attacks on Rabaul in New Britain were made Saturday and Sunday. Thousands of pounds of high explosive were said to have been dropped on Lakunai airdrome Saturday, wrecking runways, blasting to pieces at least four navy zero fighters with direct hits and wrecking many others with flying steel.

Moored flying boats were set on fire by another wave of raiders, while in a heavy attack Sunday at least one Japanese ship in Rabaul harbor was reported damaged by bomb blasts.

The pilots at Lakunai swooped out of low clouds, fought their way through a heavy anti-aircraft barrage and turned loose their bombs and machine guns. The operation was described as highly successful.

Reports from Japanese-occupied Rabaul, New Britain, said that Australian prisoners were being employed as dock workers but that their morale was high.

The Japanese were said to be suffering from an acute shortage of food, owing to the sinking of supply ships.

30 Hostages To Be Shot For 1 Wreck

Ditched Troop Train, Order Civilians Aboard In Future

VICHY, April 20 — (AP).—German occupation authorities at Rouen have ordered the execution of 30 French hostages for bombing of a German troop train in which a "large number" of Nazi soldiers were killed, it was announced today.

Eighty more hostages will be shot if those guilty of attacking the train are not turned over for punishment by April 23 a German notice said.

In addition, 1,000 "Communists, Jews, and sympathizers" were ordered deported to Eastern Europe.

From now on, the Germans said, a number of French civilians will be forced to accompany German soldiers on all troop trains to assure the later's safety.

Coughlin Takes Responsibility

ROYAL OAK, Mich., April 20.—(AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Royal Oak priest, in a public statement to-day assumed personal responsibility for control of the magazine "Social Justice," its policies and its contents "if social justice, as Atorney General Biddle is reported to have declared in his press conference, is 'clearly seditious'."

"Time and again I have said, and here repeat, that I am neither the editor, publisher, or owner of Social Justice magazine. However, I do here and now publicly state, that I alone am responsible for and do control the magazine, its policies and contents."

Chinese Swoop Saves British Units In Burma

CHUNGKING, April 20—(AP).—Chinese troops which swooped down from the northeast have recaptured Yenangyaung, in the heart of the west Burma oilfields, after two days of bitter fighting, and have released a British force of several thousand men from encirclement by the Japanese, a Chinese communique said today.

(British headquarters announced yesterday that "Chinese forces are now operating with our troops on the Irrawaddy front" where the Yenangyaung oil fields ere destroyed last week before the Japanese could fight their way into that area.)

Chinese headquarters said the troops which won back Yenangyaung attacked from Kyaupadaung, 30 miles to the northeast.

Japanese casualties in the ensuing fight were more than 500, the communique reported. Chinese losses were placed at more than 100.

(A military spokesman in London, without giving any details of the battle along the Irrawaddy, said that fighting continued heavy and that British forces at Taungdwinyi, midway between the Irrawaddy and the Salween, were holding their position guarding the flank of Chinese troops to the east.)

The Chinese said yesterday that their advanced forces on that flank had been forced to withdraw from Myohla some 20 miles north of the vicinity of Ela. It is 10 miles south of the important town of Pyinmana on the Rangoon-Mandalay road.

Launching Furious Assaults To Crack Northern Front Before Ice Crossings Slip

Hun Throw All Air Might Into Battles To Prevent Russians Cutting Behind Siege Ring South Of Leningrad

LONDON, April 20—(CP).—Soviet long-range artillery was reported today to be drawn up within range of Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow.

Furious new Russian attacks were reported launched along the Volkhov River front south of Leningrad, and against the Finns on the Svir River, between Lakes Ladoga and Onega.

The Germans were reported throwing all the available might of their air force into support of counter-attacks to prevent the Red army from gaining a solid foothold west of the Volkhov before the ice melts and the stream becomes a great barrier protecting the flank and rear of the German siege forces before the old Czarist capital.

The Russians said they had advanced two miles against the Finns at one point after battering down new defence works.

18 Miles Off the City

The Russians and Germans both were silent about the precise situation in the Smolensk region, but Reuters dispatches said Gen. Gregory Zhuov's troops were advancing from the northeast and were within 18 miles of the city.

The reports possibly referred to that section in which the Berlin radio said a reinforced Russian division had managed to penetrate between two German advanced points. The Germans claimed the line was "straightened out later," despite difficulties of fighting in mud.

The Red army appeared to have little time remaining to take full advantage of ice crossings on the northern front. Kuibyshev dispatches said that the thaw was now general throughout Central Russia and that ice was breaking along the headwaters of the Volga and

Japanese Loose Dive-Bombers Upon Corregidor

WASHINGTON, April 20 (AP)—Opening of an intense Japanese effort to batter the Philippine Island fortress of Corregidor into helplessness by bombs and siege guns was reported today by the United States war department.

From new positions on the Bataan Peninsula and from the south shore of Manila Bay the foe began an intense artillery bombardment Sunday and for the first time dive-bombing raids were made on Corregidor.

Defending gunners replied effectively to the new attack, silencing at least three batteries, a communique reported, and breaking up three motor truck and troop concentrations on Bataan.

Five dive-bombing raids were made on Corregidor and in addition Japanese light bombers attacked Corregidor and Fort Hughes several times from high altitudes.

One bomber was hit by anti-aircraft fire, the war department reported.

Meanwhile near Zamboanga, on the island of Mindanao more than 500 miles to the south, an American-Filipino patrol ambushed two bus loads of Japanese troops and inflicted numerous casualties.

The three enemy batteries silenced by the fort's guns were in addition, officials said, to at least four and possibly five which it was announced yesterday had been put out of action in the past few days.

The bombing attacks on the besieged island forts have been confined thus far to high altitude level bombing, officials noted.

The dive bombers operated on the Bataan Peninsula before defences there were overcome, they were particularly deadly after anti-aircraft defences had been reduced.

2nd Hun Escape False Alarm

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., April 20—(CP)—Authorities at a nearby prison camp for German officers said today that two prisoners reported to have escaped the camp last night had been unable to get outside of the wire enclosure before they were recaptured.

First reports of the escape were made when two men were missing at roll call last night. Ontario Provincial Police and city police in Ontario were notified by the notification later was withdrawn.

The spokesman for camp authorities gave no details of the incident beyond the assurance that no one had escaped.

He said there had been no further reports on Peter Krug, 21, who escaped in a two-man break last week. Eric Boehele, 28, who broke out with Krug, was recaptured in Niagara Falls, N.Y., last Friday. Both were German air force officers. Their escape was reported early Friday but the time of their actual break was not known definitely.

Vichy Setup No Gift To The French Hun Strategy To Rule Their Empire

LONDON, April 20—(CP).—The existence and maintenance of the Vichy Government is not a concession made by the Germans to France. It is a weapon by which Germany can impose her will on the French empire, claims Rene Cassin, Free French Justice and Education Commissioner.

If the Vichy Government had not been brought into being, continental France would have been entirely invaded by the German armies. But they would not have been able to impose their will in the overseas territories.

By installing the Vichy Government, the nearest and richest part of the empire has the illusion that the government of France remains independent.

Without Vichy, the entire French Empire would have followed Gen. De Gaulle but by supporting and maintaining the Vichy Government, the Germans have taken the greater part of the empire under their wing.

The reaction of the French to this carefully-planned partition has been unanimous—the greater the effort toward dismemberment in any one region, the more its inhabitants have shown their attachment to France.

Savoy Holds Out.

In the unoccupied zone it is in Savoy, which the Italians have claimed for many years, that the greatest patriotism has been shown. In the occupied regions, in Alsace and Lorraine, more than 225,000 inhabitants preferred to leave their country rather than submit to German laws. Those who did remain show their disdain for the Germans and their opposition to all measures of assimilation.

In the prohibited coastal zone, the Bretons have already distinguished themselves by their resistance to the

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), April 20 (AP)

HITLER today spent his 53rd birthday at his headquarters "in immediate charge of operations," DNB dispatches said.

The only difference in the routine was a slightly more elaborate luncheon with Field - Marshal Goering, Admiral Raeder, Air Marshal Erhard Milch and Col.-Gen. Franz Halder, chief of the general staff, as his guests.

(The Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Tidningen reported that Hitler received, as a birthday gift, a 1350 globe of the world on which the Western Hemisphere does not appear.

French Distrust Fly in Laval Ointment

Assassination , On Another Collaborator Looms As New Rule Begins

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Dark-visaged Pierre Laval, reinstated chief of the Vichy Government under Marshal Petain, threw his rebuilt pro-Nazi machine into gear today and started out on the tortuous and dangerous road of service to his German master.

There can be no doubt that this fresh Vichy crisis is a momentous development and one fraught with perils for the Allies. However, it still has to be demonstrated that Herr Hitler won't in the long run have done himself a far-reaching disservice by forcing his camp-follower back into a position of power in an effort to obtain the all-out collaboration Berlin so long has sought.

The real answer rests in the reaction of the defeated but increasingly insurgent French people, for Laval's value to Germany is likely to be small unless he can carry public opinion along with him. One wonders whether it was a bird of ill omen for Laval which came fluttering out of Rennes, France, today in the form of a Nazi report that an attempt had been made to assassinate Jacques Doriot, French advocate of collaboration with Berlin. That's a nasty reminder that a bullet all but ended Laval's own life last summer.

Hitler knows the position as well as the next fellow, and it therefore is interesting to see him try the experiment of imposing on the uneasy people a man whom they thoroughly dislike and distrust. It's doubl interesting in view of the fact that every move of the Fuehrer indicates his fear that retribution may boil up among these tortured folk while he is in the midst of his great trial by fire on the Russian front.

Undoubtedly the Nazi leader has been impelled by the intractibility of Petain and Darlan. Laval obviously has proved tractible thus far — and he is crafty. That's what Hitler wants—somebody who can bamboozle the French pepole.

However, the weakness of all this is the French distrust of the acrobatic Laval on his flying political trapeze. It is questionable how far he can go in delivering the goods to Hitler without causing a public upheaval, of which there have been numerous violent signs recently. An attempt to hand the French navy or colonies over to Germany might be expected to draw fire under any circumstances.

In any event, the moment Laval throws down the gauntlet to the Allies, that automatically releases them from any further kid-glove handling of the Vichy Government.

The question will then arise whether the French people on the whole will regard such action sympathetically as calculated to be in their own interest.

EXTRA!

VICHY—(AP). — Pro-Axis Pierre Laval in a broadcast to-day called France's 1939 declaration of war on Germany a "crime" and said that "rapprochement between France and Germany is the condition for peace in Europe."

Laval asked: "Do you accept that with British help you will be submitted to a system which will bring you into misery, or do you want to be integrated into new Europe where our honor and vital interests would be respected?"

Bevin Sees End To Exploitation After War

OTTAWA, April 20.—(CP).—The National War Finance committee to-day announced new war financing measures aimed at doubling, or more than doubling, the amount being invested by Canadians in victory bonds and war savings certificates and stamps.

The committee announced these steps:

1. Bonds of $50 and $100 denomination will be made available for public sale between the large periodical drives for victory loans.

2. "New impetus will be given to the sale of war savings certificates and of war savings stamps."

3. It is "probable" that war saving certificates will be made available for sale over the counter in banks and other places of business.

4. A "systematic selling" of war savings stamps will be pressed in retail stores throughout the Dominion.

Chairman G. W. Spinney told the committee that from now on Canadians, in order to meet the borrowing requirements of the government, would need to double, or more than double, the amount of current savings at present being invested in victory bonds, war savings certificates and war savings stamps."

Must Double War Savings

New Call On Canada To Meet War Borrowings

LONDON, April 20—(CP)—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin declared today that the world could not have a "decent civilization" if its peasants were left cold, underfed and in poverty.

"It must be a people's peace," he told an emergency meeting of the International Labor Office, speaking for the war cabinet.

"The budgetary position of the world," he said, will be such at the end of the war that the "idea of permanent fortunes being made out of it is impossible."

The post-war world, he added will not be able to afford industrial cartels or trust-fixing arrangements, listing them among "devices" which he said would mean "suicide for the industrialist himself."

Mr. Bevin warned that the order would bring "danger of a tremendous reaction" and declared the leaders of mankind must "hold on to some form of controls while the foundations of peace, stability and orderly development are being worked out."

He declared the world must "accept certain fundamental principles such as those expressed in the Atlantic charter" which he said means "an end to exploitation as we knew it in the 19th century."

MYSTERY OF HOW BOMBERS GOT THERE IS GREAT WORRY TO JAPS

US Silence Upsetting Tokyo Raiders At 'Destination' Is Report From Chungking

Believe Bombers Too Big For Carriers, 2 Alarms Scare Nipponese Sunday Damage Heavier Than Revealed Says Berlin

By The Canadian Press.

The air raids which bore home total war to Japan for the first time Saturday dealt her a jolting blow both materially and spiritually, it became increasingly evident today despite her efforts to belittle them.

As effective, perhaps, in mangling the enemy's nerves as the unforeseen, startling bombardment itself, was the mystery of how the bombers got there.

What Japan would most like to learn, no doubt, is that the attacking planes are back aboard aircraft carriers hurrying at top speed out of flying range.

The Japanese radio, perhaps wishfully, has suggested the air raiders were sea-based but the only indications so far have been contrary to such a thesis.

"Martin bombers" were said by the Japanese to have swept 1,000 miles of their shores. Presumably, what were meant were the United States army's B-26 medium bombers—army rather than navy planes and too large to be launched from carriers.

Furthermore, a Reuters news agency report from Chungking today said the planes had reached their "destination" safely. This evidently meant their return to bases.

Neither was there comfort for Japan in the United States' unbroken silence on the attacks, still concealing their origin, and her jittery week-end indicated how insecure she felt about the possibility of a return visit to her capital and great ports and industrial centres.

2 Scares Sunday

Twice yesterday air-raid alarms put central Japan, including imperial Tokyo itself, on the alert, each time for about two hours—once in darkness starting at 2 a.m. and again in daylight at 1 p.m.

These may have been precautions against hostile planes, real or imagined, or merely rehearsals.

The radio listener of the London Daily Mail quoted a Tokyo broadcast announcing that air observers who failed to give timely warning of Saturday's unwelcome visitors would be court-martialled.

Berlin, whence has come reports of destruction in Japan on wider scale than was acknowledged at first, gave conflicting versions of yesterday's alarms. One broadcast said no enemy planes were sighted but another said reconnaissance planes and fighters crossed over Tokyo without dropping bombs.

"The Japanese government," said

separationist movement, artificially created by the Germans. The clergy have condemned the movement without hesitation.

In the provinces of the north, local opposition was so energetic that a part of the administration created by the Germans had to be dissolved and certain administrative services are now carried out in Paris instead of in Brussels. In the unoccupied zone, the Vichy Government can only justify its obedience to German orders by a regime of strict police supervision.

Claim Tokyo

rier-borne bombers are single engine planes which are lighter and can take off from a shorter runway than the B-25 would require.

Either the B-25 or new longer range navy single engine bombers would have sufficient range, however to strike from several hundred miles east of Japan and still be able to speed on 1,400 miles southwest of Tokyo to the Lishui section of southeast Chekiang province. The Japanese, in announcing recent air raids on that part of Chekiang, said their targets were airfields they believed were being prepared for use against Japan by American-made planes.

In London, the possibility that the American bombers raided Japan from advanced bases in the Aleutian Islands and then flew on to China continued to be discussed widely. This would require a range of about 4,000 miles.

British experts said that if carriers were used and the planes continued on to China, Japanese pursuit planes would be unable to trail them back to their carrier and the ship would have a better chance of escape.

Now Claim 1 Came Down

The new announcement from Imperial headquarters made no reference to claims previously broadcast by the Tokyo radio that nine attacking planes were shot down.

Despite the official assertion that raid damage was "extremely light" other Axis broadcasts suggested that industry and transport vital to the war effort had suffered and that there had been numerous casualties.

The Berlin radio told of government grants to rebuild factories and other structures in the Toyko area; Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported a meeting of five ministers to discuss raid destruction and control of "baseless rumors"—suggesting that public reaction was not all the government desires—while Premier Hideko Tojo conferred with Emperor Hirohito, and then summoned the home and railways ministers, officials who deal with construction and transport.

One broadcast recorded by CBS said that one of the raiders was forced to land in mountainous Central Japan because of engine trouble, that its crew of five had been captured and were under close examination.

Still another version was offered in the Italian press: The newspaper La Gazetta Del Popolo of Turin expressed belief that the raiders started from bases in Soviet Russia secretly ceded to the United States.

That, of course, would be no solace to Japan.

other rivers in the Kalinin area northwest of Moscow.

The Finns were said to have thrown tanks, motorized units and heavy artillery into the fray in a futile attempt to halt the Russian attack, apparently launched in a determined effort to deliver a crushing blow to Germany's little ally and to relieve Leningrad.

Actions in which more than 1,600 Germans were killed on the northwest and central fronts were announced in the mid-day communique of the Soviet information bureau broadcast by the Moscow radio.

300 Cornered, Slain

More than 1,200 of the total, it said, were killed on the central front while 300 German automatic riflemen were killed on the northwestern front when they were surrounded as they sought to knife through the Soviet line and attack the Red Army forces from the rear.

On another sector, the communique said, 35 German automatic riflemen broke into woods behind the Red Army lines but the Soviet forces watched them closely and in a sudden raid wiped out the foe.

A guerilla detachment of Poles was credited with destroying large quantities of fuel and food at a German army dump in an operation in which they also killed 68 Germans.

Despite the intensified German aerial activity, Russians said there were no large-scale Nazi land attacks indicating the invaders were about to launch their long-heralded spring offensive.

Soviet communiques said Russian planes were countering the German aerial blows with heavy attacks on Nazi lines of communication. Fifty German motor trucks loaded with troops and supplies, 15 carts loaded with ammunition and many pieces of artillery were destroyed in one such raid alone.

Pravda, Communist party organ, said Russian parachute troops had landed in the German rear in one sector and predicted Soviet prachutists would be used increasingly as the year advances.

U.S. Army Chief Reports From UK

WASHINGTON, April 20—(AP). —Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, and Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease adviser, brought directly to President Roosevelt to-day a report on their war conferences in Great Britain.

The two officials who returned from London yesterday, were luncheon guests at the White House. State Secretary Hull, who has just returned to Washington after several weeks in Florida, and John G. Winant, Ambassador to Britain, also were invited to the luncheon conference.

Four unidentified persons, described as three senior British naval officers and a British civilian, accompanied the General and Hopkins on the return flight across the Atlantic.

Bowlers Quit League To Save Gas

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 (ENS) —Local bowlers who have for several years been flirting with the idea of dropping the Trent Valley League from their schedule did just this when they met for their annual meeting here on Friday evening.

Their decision to dispense with the league this season was made for two reason: to save on tires and gas rationing coupons (there will be no more weekly trips to Havelock, Norwood, Hastings, Warkworth and Brighton) and to salve the feelings of some of the less experienced players who took no part in these tourneys and will now have apportunity to play against members of their own club at local tournaments which will now be larger. However, away from home games are by no means "out" for the duration since members were advised the dates for district tournaments had already been named and these will count for many away from home games. Date of the initial local tournament, a men's doubles fixture, will be on June 10.

The weather will be the determining factor in the opening of the bowling season, but if last year was to set the timing, members could smile in recalling the club had enjoyed the longest season in its history from 28th of April to December 3rd.

J. D. Mills presented the annual financial report showing the club had weathered the second year of the war ending with a balance of $31.55 and an increased membership. Reasoning that the club had done well under its present system of fees they decided to make no change this year. Officers were named as follows: Honorary president, J. F. R. Douglas; president, H. J. Taylor; 1st vice-president, W. A. Kingston; 2nd vice-president, C. H Calver; secretary, J. P. Archer; treasurer, J. D. Mills; business committee, H. J. Taylor, Dr. O. C. Watson, C. W. Palliser, A. J. Five Charges Follow Scrap In Monaghan

As a result of an early Sunday morning episode in North Monaghan township, there were five charges aired in police court this morning.

Gerard Devlin, East City, charged Pte. Edward Johnston and Ray Johnston, North Monaghan, with assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

The two were defended by John A. Bradshaw who intimated that a jury trial would be preferred by the accused.

The charge against Ray Johnston was enlarged for a week and the other will likely proceed this afternoon.

Devlin in turn was charged by the Johnstons, with being drunk in charge of a car and with assaulting the two Johnston brothers. He was represented by W. J. Arthur Fair and pleaded not guilty to all three charges.

Delayed 34 Days

Washington, April 20.

JAPAN had planned its treacherous attack on Hawaii and the Philippines for Nov. 3, it was announced today in a Japanese controlled broadcast heard here, but was unexpectedly forced to defer it for another thirty-four days.

According to the Hsinking radio, which quoted an unnamed "Japanese divisional chief of the military staff who has returned from the front" as saying, "In consideration of the various factors we were compelled to set Nov. 3 of last year as the opening day of operations. But the opening was affected by an unexpected event, so the greater East Asia war started on Dec. 8."

Midland Strike Hangs On, Kingston Next?

MIDLAND, Ont., April 20—(CP). —Clarification of a Dominion Labor Department edict that striking Midland shipyards workers return to their jobs or have the case referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution under the Industrial Investigation Act was awaited by strikers to-day after week-end conferences failed to settle the strike.

Workers, idle since last Wednesday in a dispute they said hinges on reinstatement of a semi-skilled worker, decided at a mass meeting yesterday to ask that the edict of Bryce M. Stewart, Dominion Deputy Minister of Labor be clarified. W. A. Paterson, chairman of the Workers' Committee, said that because "of the ambiguous wording of the Deputy Minister's message" the clarification request would be made to the Labor Department.

Paterson added that many of the employees were of the opinion that a proper interpretation of the message might result in an immediate return to work. Stewart's message called the walkout "not only illegal but also subversive of Canada's war effort." It promised the Department would make every effort to settle the points at issue without delay "but not until the men return to work."

George McLean of Orillia, Liberal member of Parliament for Simcoe East, sought unsuccessfully for a settlement at week-end conferences.

At yesterday's mass meeting, Mayor O. H. Smith, head of a Citizen's

Missionary Givings Exceed Pledges

Missionary givings at Bethany Tabernacle during the past year exceeded pledges by $107, Rev. W. McArthur remarked to the Examiner this morning in a comment on the success of the annual missionary week which ended on Sunday night.

"It is very encouraging to know that our members pledged $1,801 last year, and their actual contributions amounted to $1,908.22," Rev. Mr. McArthur said.

"For the new year of 1942-43, the pledges for mission work have been increased to $2,219.60. This was an entirely voluntary undertaking by our people. There was no canvass. The responsibility for carrying on our mission work was left entirely to them. It was a most inspiring response."

Mission week closed on Sunday night with an address by Rev. C. C. Ellenberger, who spent more than twenty years in French West Africa. It included a description of the Mohammedan in prayer and gave other aspects of the native peoples in that part of the continent to which the Allied Nations are now looking with deep concern since Laval's return to Vichy.

Aussie Chiefs Speed Offensive

MacArthur's Crusade To Mean Much To Future World

U.S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Australia, April 20 — (CP). — The new Allied command in the Southwest Pacific moved swiftly to-day to map the offensive to which it was committed during the week-end following formal appointment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Commander-in-Chief of all land, sea, and air forces.

As the initial step, Prime Minister John Curtin met with MacArthur and other Allied service chiefs in the first of a series of conferences which the Australian Government hoped would enable it to meet the requirements of the armed forces with a minimum of delay.

Mr. Curtin, who said his Government had joined with Great Britain, the United States, New Zealand and the Netherlands in granting MacArthur a charter as supreme commander in this vital war theatre, attended the conference in his new role as Defence Minister.

Informed quarters said the defence portfolio had been created by the Australian War Cabinet to eliminate red tape and provide a channel through which the Allied command could swiftly advise the Government of its needs.

Good Will and Support.

During the conference, they said, Mr. Curtin reaffirmed in more personal terms assurances of his Government's good will and support

Banana Mystery

Halifax, April 20 (CP)

YES, we have plenty of bananas here, but no one knows where they come from.

Found by the thousands littering the shores of the harbor and the north west arm here, the bananas were still in good condition and today and Sunday Haligonians flocked to tidewater to reap this sea harvest.

Origin of the banana bonanza is a mystery. It was not believed the stalks had been thrown from a fruit boat as refuse as the stalks were in perfect condition. However, R. W. Hendry, port manager, said an investigation is underway aimed at uncovering the mystery.

Red Cross Rooms In Port Hope Shows Activity

PORT HOPE, April 20.—(ENS).—The Red Cross rooms was the scene of much activity on Saturday afternoon with some twenty ladies busy in the sewing room, where on a side table was a small display of some of the results of this month's quota. Among these articles were thirty coats beautifully tailored in all wool brown tweed with skirts to match and contrasting blouses to fit sixteen year old girls.

Next to this was a group of clothing to fit eight year old girls, consisting of twenty sweaters, skirts and blouses and a hospital quota of 60 Turkish towels, 50 surgical towels, 160 gauze handkerchiefs, 25 pyjama suits with extra trousers to each suit and 25 dressing gowns.

In the tea room the Canton unit served afternoon tea to over one hundred.

This tea was advertised and the proceeds were planned to be put toward a buttonhole attachment for the sewing room which the committee feels will be a most useful piece of equipment.

Mrs. W. Barrie, Mrs. Percy Carrol, Mrs. Walter Herne, Miss Loraine Barrie and Mrs Barraclough were tea hostesses from Canton, and the sum of $12.15 was realized.

Other tea hostesses for this week were Mrs. E. Wynn, Mrs. J. S. Smart, Mrs. J. Y. Ormsby, Mrs. Boulden Mrs. Baxter, Mrs. Oliver, Mrs. J. D. Willis, Mrs. Price, Mrs. H. B. Wilson Mrs. Briden, Mrs. Chisholm.

Farmer Flung From Buggy Into Ditch

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20. — (ENS).—George Pearson, 65, Brighton township farmer, is in Belleville hospital suffering from scalp wounds and shock following an accident at Wooler on Friday afternoon. Pearson was seated in a horse drawn vehicle on the side of the road talking to a rural mail carrier, James Manner of Wooler, when a car attempting to pass between the two vehicles, caught the left rear wheel of Pearson's wagon with its right fender, hurling the wagon into a four foot ditch and throwing him out. Joe. Valleau of Brighton township, near Codrington, was the driver of the car that struck Pearson's vehicle and with him were Mrs. Valleau and William Campbell. Provincial Constable D. M. Carruthers investigated.

Three Fire Calls

Firemen here had their busiest day in several months on Saturday. They answered three alarms on Saturday afternoon and by coincidence all were on Front street and all were chimney fires. The first was at H. Wannamaker's, early in the afternoon and following this they were called to the Herald office and to the residence of Duncan Clarke. There was no damage in any of the three.

Study Signalling.

Instruction in semaphore signalling which is part of their 2nd class work, was taken up by members of the local Boy Scout troop at their regular meeting on Friday. In addition to signalling Acting Scout Master Jack Connor also reviewed knot tieing with the group and Mr. T. Gilibrand directed a period of physical training.

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

The Story.—Ferdy Lorton, artist, has invited Myra Mack, her soldier brother Michael and her 17-year-old sister, Peggy for a week-end at his country house near Montreal, Nigel Monkhouse, also a soldier, will be another guest. Myra thinks of asking a pretty stenographer whom she and Nigel has seen on a train.

ENTER FAY RANSOM

CHAPTER IV

Peggy's excitement over the week-end suddenly faded to dismay, and her gamin-pretty face melted into a pout.

"But Myra!" she wailed. "I've got nothing at all to wear!"

"If you've got glamorous ideas about this house party, check them at the lipstick counter," replied her sister. "You won't need anything more fetching than your swim suit — especially if the weather is as cooking as it's been today."

But Myra's glance was gentler than her words. Here was another "baby" of the family suddenly grown up, just as Michael seemed to have done. And this no-longer-child, if not exactly beautiful, was certainly dangerously attractive. And more. She had a kind of vitality that made one feel she was charged with electricity. Her dark hair fell in natural curls about the nape of her neck, and with her blue-green eyes there was more than a suggestion of the piquancy of Vivien Leigh.

It was odd, thought Myra, that she had never noticed that resemblance before. It boded no good for some man—or men. She wondered what went on behind that lively face. One got so much in the habit of thinking of one's own family as just a collection of younger brothers and sisters that one often forgot they had lives of their own and were living their own thoughts and feelings independently of the rest of the family.

"No," said Myra, wondering whether it would be wise after all to take her sister away, "you needn't worry about clothes. The place is buried miles away from anywhere."

"That just shows how little you know about anything," replied Peggy, with a toss of the head.

The next day Myra was sent again to the office of Mr. Ransom. And again she saw the copper-headed girl at a desk. There was something familiar about her that puzzled Myra and she could not place it. Something that made the girl seem out of place at a desk. However, she greeted her with a smile and the girl was equally cordial.

Myra stopped on impulse.

"Do you remember that officer you saw me with on the train yesterday?"

The girl blushed faintly and Myra decided that she did.

An irresistible urge toward matchmaking was upon Myra and she pressed her question. "We are going up to Ferdy Lorton's place this week-end. The artist, you know. I was wondering if you would care to join us? It's all very informal, but he has an aunt up there who looks after the place and your aprents are the anxious kind. your parents are the enxious kind.

Again the girl smiled slightly and again Myra wondered what it was about her that she could not place.

"Don't bother to let me know now," said Myra. "Telephone me at the office if you would care to join us."

That afternoon Myra telephoned Ferdy.

"I've hooked her," she said. "She called half an hour ago to say she would come."

Ferdy laughed. "What is her name?"

"Fay Ransom, daughter of the stockbroker."

Ferdy whistled at the other end of the telephone. "Fay Ransom?"

"Do you know her?" asked Myra. But Ferdy was in a puckish mood. He laughed aloud and rang off.

"Darn you," mumbled Myra into the buzzing telephone. "What are you up to, Ferdy Lorton?" She shrugged and replaced the receiver. Wasn't Fay likely to be enough of a problem, without adding mystery to the plot?

Ferdy's place in the lovely Laurentians was just 60 miles from Montreal, yet as secluded as if it had been built upon the highest crag in the Canadian wilds. Tucked away off the beaten track in a countryside of dirt roads, lakes and wooded hills, it was a fairly large estate and had a home farm complete with a French-Canadian family who did the chores for Ferdy.

The house itself was a low, sprawling affair which had grown charmingly as extra space had been added to the original cottage. It was set on a great outcrop of rock at the very top of a low hill, and its windows gazed out on every side over the treetops of thickly-wooded hillsides.

It was comfortably furnished and equipped because Ferdy spent a great deal of his time there, working outdoors or painting in the studio built onto the house, while his aunt attended to the housekeeping.

He arrived there alone a day before he expected his guests and announced to his aunt that she could expect a houseful of guests for the week-end.

She looked at her favorite nephew with a quizzical smile. "Well, it's nice to know in advance. Usually you arrive unannounced bringing hordes of strange people with you."

She was a small woman, so completely composed under all circumstances that it seemed as if the calm of the Laurentian country had become an essential part of her nature. Conveniently, too, she was thoroughly conditioned to Ferdy's whimsies in the way of guests.

"Do I know any of the people who are coming up?" she asked.

Ferdy wandered around the wide lounge, across to the plate glass window that filled an alcove and gave an uninterrupted view of a great sweep of the country.

"Yes. There is at least one you like. Myra Mack."

"Ha," replied his aunt. "I hope nothing is going to happen then."

"What on earth do you mean?" asked Ferdy with a grin.

"You know very well," said his aunt. "She is a very nice girl with a lot of character, but every time she comes here something extraordinary happens. Who else?"

Ferdy listed the others. His aunt listened patiently.

"Must you always be asking complete strangers up here?"

Ferdy grinned. He turned back to his aunt and lifted a cautioning finger at her. "You know very well you are as bad as I am. You always say that nothing is so fascinating as the latest crop of young things. I'm merely pandering to your curiosity, and bringing up a fair selection."

She smiled her admission of what he said. "True. All the same, that Mack girl has a flair for complications. We'll have anything from a circus to a triple wedding before this week-end is over."

WOULD you willingly place too heavy a burden on your wife's shoulders? Care of the family and management of the home are tasks that are naturally hers as a partner. Yet if she were suddenly left without you, burdens that are heavy when shared by both would be hers alone. How could she face them without an income?

There is a way to make sure that she would not have the added, crushing responsibility of earning money to provide the family with food, clothing and shelter. It is to put as much of your income as you can into Life Insurance and to increase the amount as your circumstances permit.

Life Insurance can be arranged to provide a non-cancellable monthly income that will never be uncertain—that fluctuating values or market upheavals can never reduce. Thus your heaviest burden will not fall on shoulders ill-fitted to carry the load.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 — (ENS)—Three short playlettes were a feature of the concert sponsored by the Burnbrae Mission Band before a fairly large gathering at the church on Thursday evening. The program was the initial undertaking of the group this season and the proceeds amounting to over $13 will be used to further the band's work.

Rev. Donald McKay was chairman of the program which began with a welcome song by the band and recitation by June Craighead. Following a second number by the Mission Band Chorus, a recitation "Who Gives the Grain" was presented by five little girls, Shirley Baxter, Myrtle Fry, Marian Wallace, Lorraine Fry, Ruth Bedford.

Another song, "Daffodils," and a recitation by Jean Third preceded the first of the playlettes "Fountain of Youth" with a cast comprising Miss Edith Gibbons, Mrs. D. McKay, Mrs. Victor Taylor, Misses Hazel MacKenzie, Myrtle Fry, Marjorie Wallace, Isobel Lynn.

Six girls took part in the next skit, Jean Wallace, Jean Ingram, Bernice Baxter, Elaine Ingram, Dorothy Billen, Lorraine McCrory. The band then sang "The World's Children For Jesus"; Mrs. D. McKay gave a reading and the concluding number was the skit "Every Girl" with a cast including Misses Jean Murray, Ruth Fry, Doreen Pollock, Helen Nelson, D. Broader Field For Women In War Action

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 (ENS) —Some practical suggestions as to just how Canadian women could play an even greater part in Canada's war effort were given by Mrs. H. M. Aiken of Toronto in an address here on Friday evening. Mrs. Aiken, who spoke to over two hundred ladies at the annual mother and daughter banquet arranged by the Woman's Association of St. John's United Church, disclosed that she knew more than cookery in her remarks that not only gave much valuable information to her listeners but also a very comprehensive picture of Canada at war.

Turning first to Halifax which she characterized "a drowsy city in peace time but a hive of activity in war," Mrs. Aiken related that she had personally contacted several of the crews of torpedoed merchant ships who were hospitalized there and found them in good spirits despite their harrowing experiences. Greatly interested in the welfare of sailors, the speaker remarked that there never seemed to be enough books in the Magazine Depot to go around. One group that remained unthumbed on the shelf just where they had been placed on being received by some well intentioned but thoughtless donor was the "Elsie" series. She asked one sailor who she had known prior to the war, what books he preferred while on shore leave and she was nearly floored by his reply, "Eaton's Catalogue."

Meals Expensive

In addition to more books, the Sailors need two items: 1, a good thirty-five cent dinner. There are few places for the boys to go and few things to amuse them partly due to the fact that the city of Halifax has coralled any services, and profit therefrom, for its own citizens keeping outside organizations out by city ordinance. The only place they can get a good dinner is at one of the two leading hotels and there they must pay a $1.25 which is practically one day's pay. Item No. 2 needed by the sailors is mitts. Mrs. Aiken said the sailors were not issued with mitts by the Government "and though they need them badly they only get the ones we send to them." The speaker declared not one of the boys who reached out for a book at the magazine depot, but did not have a cracked hand.

On the subject of 'shortages' the speaker remarked Canada had "tons and tons of some of the minerals we have been getting from abroad." One of these is tungsten which lies in abundant quantities in the slag piles outside Canadian gold mines. A gold mining company in Noranda was several years ago offered two million dollars for its slag pile by a German syndicate which intended to retrieve the tungsten in it. Fortunately the offer was turned down but Canada continued to buy abroad since it was more economical than salvaging it from the slag. Another surplus taken up since the war is lard. Prior to the war imported vegetable oil shortening was the primary requisite of good cookery but since then with a cutting down of importations for domestic consumption housewives (not knowing it) are using a blended shortening which was unthinkable a couple of years ago, and "it is so good that actually ten per cent less is used than would be required of vegetable shortening. It contains 70 per cent domestic lard and 30 per cent imported vegetable oil, is sold as 'blended' shortening, and slipped on the market early in March without any-one noticing it.

Child Problem

One of the biggest problems arising out of the war is juvenile delinquency, according to the speaker. It is by no means unusual for a public school child in the city of Toronto to arrive with a key tied round his neck on a piece of string. The explanation is that the child is probably the oldest of a group of four or five with the youngest still pre-school age. The mother, who is working at a large munitions plant "because she has to and not because she wants to," said the speaker, "because her husband is in the armed forces and the dependent's allowance and children's allowance she gets won't go all the way around" after paying $35.00 a month rent, leaves for work at eight in the morning after getting breakfast. She puts the key around the neck of the oldest who locks his little brothers and sisters in the house for the day and then goes to school. Lacking time to prepare them a proper lunch to take to school the mother hands the one or two who go a dime, and with this they buy a bottle of pop and a hot dog for lunch. What is happening to the youngsters left at home is anybody's guess. The mother doesn't re-unite with her family till after five o'clock. Even communist Russia does better than this by its children. Where parents work in factories provision is made for them in a day nursery at the factory an they are left in charge of competent nurses. The mothers and their well cared for daughters, were just recovering from the indictment of the social and economic system here and when Mrs. Aiken launched out in another direction. She told the story of a youth she met while conducting cooking school at a northern Ontario town several years ago. The background was a drought stricken Western farm, a large family, the family savings exhausted and the oldest boy in his teens setting out to look for the elusive job in industrial Ontario where there were several thousand others doing the same thing. He never got the job he looked for, but chopped some wood here, mowed a lawn there and did another job in the next town. Mrs. Aiken said she met the boy in uniform in September, 1939, and recognizing him asked how he liked the army. His answer was something to think about. With clothes on his back, three square meals a day and a good bed to sleep in the boy felt he was literally "living the life of Riley." During the past summer the same boy who had subsequently transferred to the air force by studying nights to obtain the necessary qualifications, sent word back to Mrs. Aiken through another airman to the effect he was getting along fine and was not in the least disturbed about ever returning. He feared that coming back would once again return him to jobless roaming. Said Mrs. Aiken, "It is the great job of the women's organizations of Canada to help in making Canada a country that the boys are proud to die for but also to return to live for."

In appreciation of her remarks Margaret Nelson presented the speaker with a bouquet of Spring flowers and a vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. R. E. Fox and Mrs. J. D. Mills expressed thanks to all those who had assisted in making the affair a success. The banquet began with community singing and following the toast to the King proposed by W.A. President, Mrs. W. F. Scott, who presided, other toasts were proposed: to the Empire and our Allies by Mrs. Harold Twigg and Mrs. W. Johnston; to the Armed forces by Mrs. F. Pearce and Mrs. Wib Ward; to the Church and Home by Mrs. E. H. Greig and Miss Nellie Striker; to the Mothers, Mrs. D. Cochrane and Mrs. Morley Petherick; to the Daughters, Mrs. Howard Clark and Miss Leila Mitchell. Other items included a piano duet by Misses [illegible] and [illegible] Ironside; a vocal solo by Mrs. A. G. Watson; and a violin solo by Mrs. H. M. Fowlds.

Spend $2,700 On Roads In Trent Town

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 (ENS) —Council will spend $2,600 and $2,700 on re-surfacing roads inside the corporation this spring it was revealed by Road and Bridge Chairman P. H. MacMillan following a special meeting when street oil and receiving the tax roll were the principal items on the agenda.

The clerk read quotations from three different companies, two of which sent personal representatives to the meeting—Gil Putnam of Imperial Oil and Bruce Wallace of B.A. Oil. Councillors held a lengthy and for a time, hot discussion, over just who would supply the oil, with Councillor Fowlds strongly contending the purchase should, if not in entirety at least in part, be made from the B.A. Company rather than the Imperial, who filled the contract a year ago. He failed in his effort to swing the rest of the council to this viewpoint since they felt engineer Putnam from his previous knowledge of local streets, was in the best position to advise them.

The surfacing will require a 6,000-gallon car of light oil plus 6,000 of heavy oil combined with pea gravel to go over all the streets needing repair and in addition re-surface all leading streets which had not received this treatment a year ago.

Included in the motion to purchase from Imperial Oil by Deputy Reeve MacMillan, was authorization to have spraying, rolling and brooming done by the E. Irven Construction Company and to get stone chips and pea gravel from Consolidated Sand and Gravel. All of the work will be done under supervision of G. Putnam.

In taking over the tax roll from Collector J. C. Birmingham it was pointed out that 1941 arrears, amounting to $6,000, were approximately one-half of the unpaid taxes the corporation had to worry them in 1936. Roughly $64,000 of the $70,000 tax roll has been paid and the collector expressed the opinion that the uncollected amount was practically "one hundred per cent collectable." Old arrears (prior to 1941) added another $5,000 to the amount chalked another $5,000 to the amount However, it was regarded unlikely that any property would be up for tax sale since any of the delinquents in arrears will pay up once this threat becomes real. The collector was authorized to continue collecting arrears under supervision of the town treasurer and for his services he will be paid according to by-law.

Problems regarding the condition of auto wrecking yards, which have for several years been an annual problem before council, were also considered at the special meeting. The clerk put this item on the agenda at the insistance of the Mayor following several new complaints. However, by the time the question got to the meeting the local police had already dealt with the matter and the grounds for complaint had been removed.

One thing which did draw the ire of the road and bridge chairman was the habit of citizens who raked the refuse from their yard into the street leaving it there for the town to clean up or, worse still, burning it on the asphalt pavement. He felt that persons doing this sort of thing, were entirely lacking in consideration for town property as the heat from these fires was likely to do great damage to the roads. Reeve Calver made a motion seconded by Councillor Mason that the Council should advertise to the effect that rubbish is not to be deposited on the streets and left there and further that no leaves or other refuse material is to be burned on the pavement and that all rubbish put on the streets by private citizens, is to be removed.

Unusual Patriotic Service Is Held In St. James' United Church

The unusual patriotic service held in St. James' United Church was well attended Sunday night when the program was arranged and requested by a group of Canadian soldiers serving in England with the 14th Canadian General Hospital Unit.

Opening with the call to worship and the responsive Psalm 91, the order of service was led by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Craik, as prepared by his brother-in-law, Sergeant Peterkin, who has been serving overseas in this unit for over a year, and who served in the first Great War for three years.

The hymns and solos used in the service were all chosen by the soldiers overseas, and were interspersed by special prayers for those in the navy, in the army, in the Air Force, and for those who are sick, wounded or are prisoners of war.

"In the Hour of Trial," was the beautiful message in song by Mrs. E. R. Frost, while Mrs. H F. Doig, in "Land of Hope and Glory", sang this stirring hymn of battle with fine effect in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Budge of Berkshire, England, who have lent their home to this hospital unit on many occasions and who chose this hymn for the special service here tonight.

In a short but uplifting message of a patriotic nature the pastor based his remarks upon the theme "Voices of Britain". From these many voices the speaker emphasized three: First, the voices of the children who cry across the sea for the right to live and develop and for our interest, prayers and gifts. Next, the young men and women speak to us in bewildered voices as to the cause and end of this war, while the aged speak of courage and determination.

The voices of Britain call not only for tools of war, but the devotion and prayers of Christian people everywhere. Almighty God must help civilization to end war or war will end civilization. The pastor concluded with the promise "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit saith the Lord of Hosts."

Prayer for the Empire was followed by the singing of the National Anthem and the benediction, and with the congregation remaining seated the organist, Cecil Lapp, played as a postlude "Abide With Me". The Sea Scouts acted as ushers for this interesting service.

Three Cases Are Set Down In Cobourg

COBOURG, April 20.—(ENS)—Three cases were on the docket of the non-jury sittings of Supreme Court which opened this afternoon. The first case listed is an action brought by Mrs. G. McMillan of Hope Township against her father, James Beatty, and Kenneth Trew, the latter an employee of James Beatty. Plaintiff asks that a conveyance and mortgage entered into between James Beatty and Mr. Trew been declared null and void. She also asks judgment for sale of the premises in her father's name and an accounting from both of the monies received by them since the conveyance and mortgage. Plaintiff states in her statement of claim that on October 10, 1941, she recovered judgment on a promissory note for $2,931.28 and costs but judgment was returned. It was found, she claims, that on April 30, 1940, Mr. Beatty mortgaged certain lands to Mr. Trew for $2,000. She alleges that an attempt was made to prevent her from obtaining payment of the lands of Mr. Beatty.

Cunningham Wells Ltd., transport company, ask $1,163.34 in an action for damages brought against Harvey Austen and Thomas Lingard of Port Hope, outcome of an accident which occurred in Port Hope. Plaintiff claims that a truck owned by the company was proceeding east on Walton street in Port Hope when a truck driven by Austin, going south on Ontario street, collided with the first vehicle.

The final case on the docket is a divorce action which is brought by Ernest Arthur Allin of Bowmanville against his wife, Margaret Cecilia Allin.

IN these days when we are called upon to be wide awake, anything is likely to happen. A cat belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quackenbush gave birth to three kittens on Saturday and each of the trio was born with its eyes open.

Are You a Sufferer From Rheumatic Pains?

These pains come from an inflammation in the muscles and are generally caused by a deposit of poison in the blood called uric acid which produces the irritating and painful effect that causes many days and nights heavy with pain.

During the past 60 years Canadian people have found that by purifying the blood stream, Burdock Blood Bitters aids them to enjoy freer body movement with less rheumatic pain, as B. B. B. helps to tone up the system and clear up the uric acid in the blood, and probably help fortify the system against future attacks.

Crumbs Of Comfort

Although the war continues to go badly for the United Nations in the East, there are some signs of improvement in the West. The raids, so wide and extensive, which the R.A.F. has been making over Occupied France and the Rhineland, have been of a ferocity equal to those with which Germany, in the past, wrecked Coventry and Plymouth. We no longer expect air attack to be decisive in this war, but it would be foolish to discount it entirely because it has not done all that was expected. And there is a difference between our raids upon German territory and the raids which Germany made upon Britain: Germany was assured that she would suffer no raids, upon the authority of Goering himself; Britain expected raids, and knew that they would be bad. The flight of the R.A.F. bombers over Germany is a constant reminder of a broken pledge, made by a much-admired and supposedly infallible leader.

The battle for Russia continues to go unfavorably for the Nazis. They lose men in great numbers, and their Spring offensive has been postponed. Although it is unwise to attach too much importance to the remarks of captured men, the morale of the German troops in Russia appears to be in decline.

There is, more than ever, unrest in the occupied countries. The sudden reorganization of the Vichy government, putting Pierre Laval in virtual charge of French policy, may prove to be a bad move; the wave of sabotage which broke out directly after his appointment was made known shows clearly what the French think of him.

Again, there is news of Mussolini's broken health. For months he has been of no account in Axis affairs, but his breakup means the end of any workable Fascism in Italy. That country is added to the list of those which Germany must police.

These are straws in the wind, and we cannot derive any great comfort from them. But they reflect a slow change in European affairs which should make our eventual victory sure. In 1940 and 1941 the Axis had things very much its own way in Europe; those days have gone forever.

Transport Troubles In Germany

The visitor to Germany before the outbreak of war was always deeply impressed by the magnificent arterial roads, called Autobahnen, which linked all the principal cities of the Reich. Few roads in the U.S. could compare with them; in Canada only the Queen Elizabeth Way gave a faint idea of what they were like; in Britain only the Great North Road served a similar purpose. They stretched, as straight as surveyors could make them, like broad ribbons of concrete across the plains of northern Germany, through the depths of forests, and through the mountain passes of the south. They were the pride of Adolf Hitler's stony heart. Great feats of engineering, he knew, had always distinguished great peoples at the peak of their greatness: Egypt built her fabulous pyramids, Greece her temples which were prodigies of mathematical skill and beauty; Rome built aqueducts across the Italian plains, and the Holy Roman Empire left monuments in cathedrals which were miracles in stone. And had not the Third Reich its Autobahnen?

It had, and it still has, but they are bleak reminders of unfulfilled promise now, for there is no gasoline to make motor travel possible. And the railroads of Germany are in very bad condition. Depending upon the Autobahnen for transport the Germans neglected to keep their roadbeds, rails and rolling stock in good shape, and when war broke out they were unsatisfactory. What the strain of three years of war has done to them need hardly be asked. The requisitioning of all available engines and cars in Belgium, France and the Low Countries gives the answer.

Travel by railway in Germany is restricted to those who are able to prove that they are helping in the conduct of the war. The distribution of food is said to be as bad as it was in 1917. Foodstuffs and commodities such as coal for civilian use are delayed for weeks and sometimes for months, and potatoes, which form a great part of Germany's diet now, often reach their destinations rotten or frozen from long waiting. Germany is feeling the strangulation which results in a modern country when communications are in poor repair.

But the magnificent Autobahnen still sweep across the countryside, untravelled save for an occasional government car, and as the pyramids and the Roman aqueducts stand as symbols for dreams which were dreamed out in past ages, the Autobahnen grow more and more to look like the first portents of a dream which has changed to chaos, futility and nightmare.

Men About To Die

A man who is practically certain to lose his life whatever happens has certain advantages; the greatest of these is that he is free to say what he likes, and indeed he may even go so far as to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. He has nothing to lose, and death can be experienced but once.

For this reason we doubt if the newly organized trial at Riom will give Adolf Hitler as much satisfaction as he thinks it will. The first part of the trial, with Judge Pierre Caous presiding, was entirely unsatisfactory from the Fuehrer's point of view. He wanted Frenchmen to lay the guilt for war with Germany at the door of France; he wanted them to eat dirt and confess that they had been very wrong and very wicked in provoking Germany; he wanted the spirit of France (which is not to be confused with the spirit of the Third Republic) dragged in the mud, disgraced and reviled. When he did not get what he wanted he was angry. "The characteristic of this trial is that not a single word of guilt of those responsible for the war is mentioned and nothing but inferior preparation for war is being talked about," said the Fuehrer, pettishly. Now that Laval is in the saddle he doubtless expects revelations and grovellings more to his taste.

But as we have said, men who know that they have little chance to live are capable of a calm and an integrity impossible to those who must fawn upon a conqueror—impossible indeed to a conqueror himself. Blum and Daladier can have very little use for their former associates; politics rarely makes for great friendships. But they have shown a love for France, and a trust in the future of France which makes us doubt that they will give the answers that Hitler wants. They will continue to say uncomfortable things. They have shown themselves greater in adversity than they ever were in prosperity, and having but one life to lose they will certainly choose to lose it in the manner most satisfactory to themselves. They will see no reason why they should oblige Hitler at the expense of France. Men about to die can afford the ultimate in heroism.

Why So Many Insane?

In the course of a debate in the Legislature the Minister of Health, Mr. H. J. Kirby, gave information that mental hospitals in this Province were badly overcrowded; there is said to be a waiting list of 1,500 at the Orillia hospital and the conditions at Fort William are said to be "terrible." There are already 1,900 patients at Orillia. Details concerning other hospitals were not given.

The problem of overcrowding is one for which a solution must be found, but the revelations in the Legislature bring up an older problem and one which we feel to be pressing: Why are there so many mental patients in Ontario and in Canada generally? Our national incidence of insanity is very high and there seems to be no honest attempt made to find the cause for this and to remedy it. There must be a cause. People do not go crazy for nothing. Why has Canada, with plenty of space for everyone (except, apparently, in the insane asylums) and a standard of living which, with that of the U.S. and New Zealand, is accounted the highest in the world, so much insanity?

Our own feeling is that this country needs a carefully planned program of mental hygiene; such a program would take ten years or more to put in effect but its benefits would be lasting. In this country we tend to combine a high standard of living with a low standard of thinking; an observer of daily life in this country cannot but be impressed by the evidences of neurosis and obsessive fear which he sees everywhere in public and private life. The general atmosphere in all except the larger centres tends to be repressive, and there is widespread ignorance in matters of sex which does great harm to the mental life of the country as a whole. Anyone who doubts these things should look about him; particularly he should look at our crowded asylums. If we do not do something to check the appalling incidence of insanity in this country within the next twenty years, the problem will be past all checking. The only cure lies in education designed to broaden and cleanse our whole national pattern of thinking and it should be one of the very first problems to be considered after the war.

The Eastern Pharmacopoeia

The herbs and simples which generally and somewhat misleadingly go under the name of "drugs" are not used in modern medicine to anything like the extent that they were fifty or sixty years ago. Physicians no longer feel obliged to give every patient a bottle of medicine and a few pills, and the public has learned not to depend upon such aids, which were often of slight benefit. The belief in the curative powers of mixtures and nostrums and boluses of fairly harmless herbs dates from the time of the great physician Galen, and for a long time these mixtures were called "galenicals" after him. The belief in the efficacy of medicine of whatever kind during the nineteenth century is well illustrated by the story of Thomas Carlyle—an unusually enlightened man—who, when his friend Henry Taylor fell ill hastened to his house with a part of a bottle of medicine which had been prescribed some time before for Mrs. Carlyle; the philosopher did not know what was wrong with Taylor; he simply knew that his friends was ill and assumed that medicine—any medicine—would do him good!

The hundreds of drugs employed in the nineteenth century pharmacopoeia have been considerably reduced in number, and now comparatively few are used. But these, like the others which have been discarded come principally from the East, and supplies are now largely cut off. Quinine, for instance, came from the East Indies, and it is a very necessary drug, as is squills, which comes from the same source. Supplies of senna come from Egypt, and although this source is not wholly cut off it is difficult to count on supplies from there. Camphor and menthol, used in great quantities, come from Japan. Belladonna, useful in many ways, came from the East, but comes no more. Antimony, cantharides, wormwood, ginger, nux vomica and gum arabic will also be scarce, and they are needed in many ordinary remedies. Even castor oil will be hard to get after a time, though there are plenty of substitutes for it as a cathartic, though not for some of its other purposes. From now on drugs must be used with care. There is no reason for extreme alarm on this score, however. As has already been said, physicians do not depend on mixtures as much as they once did, and few people have died for lack of squills and menthol. If the shortage should continue for long it is not impossible that modern medicine may find itself independent of all but a few of the drugs once imported in large quantities from the East.

NOTE AND COMMENT

"White Paper Likely on Cripps' Mission" says a headline. To replace the crape?

We have no intention of casting our clout before May is out; we confess, however, to a strong disposition to open it a little at the neck.

Two armed robberies took place recently in Queen's Park, Toronto. Rumors that this is a new method of tax collection, however, are without foundation.

A report says that Dr. Josef Goebbels has declared May "politeness month" in Germany, when there will be competitions in politeness and good humor. No doubt the ever-courteous R.A.F. will leave cards during this happy season.

One of the peculiar things about Pierre Laval is that he invariably wears a washable white tie. There seems to be no reason for this unless perhaps he means it to be the outward and visible sign of an inward and completely invisible purity.

Paper in U.S. banknotes now contains nylon instead of silk. One of the most remarkable things about this war is the way in which substitutes have been discovered for commodities which have hitherto been regarded as necessities. And the really surprising thing is that many of the substitutes are better than the originals!

THE BLADE

Reflect upon the razor blade
And its effect on man and maid.

A man expects a pack of trouble
When wooing from behind a stubble.

The stubble rouses sales resistance,
And makes a lady keep her distance.

But even so, I think a beard
Is not to be unduly feared.

We'll take it on the chin and like it
Love conquers all—no war can spike it.

Farming News And Views For Ontario Farmer

By HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

KEEPING in mind that we need larger crops of feed in Canada this year we must plan them as far as possible so as not to deplete the fertility of our soil. If there is a field or two that has been cropped overmuch it is a good plan to seed it to barley if the land is at all suitable. Barley can be speeded up with commercial fertilizer better than almost any other crop. Don't stint the fertilizer, use plenty of seed to get a good stand, and seed it to a good mixture of clover and grasses. Barley is a good crop to seed to grass with, and it will then further improve the field to pasture it, as the cattle will drop a good deal of fertilizer over it. If it is inclined to be weedy, raise your mower bar on wheels, or castors, four or five inches and cut off these weeds before they go to seed. What you cut will lie on the field and made additional fertilizer and some humus as it rots down. In this way you will return to the soil some of the growth on it when you mow it. This means putting back some of the fertility which caused that growth. It is good farming practice to return to the land as much as you can of what it has produced, whether it be in the form of muck or green crop. Just now our business is to keep plant food in our soil to grow further crops. With present prices it will pay Ontario farmers well to improve the fertility of their farms. What is far more important than immediate profits, however, is for farmers at the end of the war to have their assets, which is their land, unimpaired to meet the agricultural demands of that time, which we can only speculate on now, but which would seem to be the requirements of a world, a good deal of which will be on the edge of starvation.

At the present time it looks like earlier seeding and earlier grass than was have had for two years at least. Last year I saw very few seed drills at work in Peel County on April 24th. Easter Sunday was on April 13 instead of April 5 this year. Last year we had a week of sunshine similar to this year but no day as warm as Easter Sunday of this year. I left on 13th last year for Chicago then on to Oklahoma but when I returned for the Shorthorn sale, at the farm of the late T. A. Russell, spring was not coming along very rapidly and the winds were cold. I drove up to Bruce on May 7 and there seemed to be a seed drill in every field.

In 1940 we had a good snow storm on April 11. I was in Wellington county on April 15 and there was no sign of getting on the land. Saw a plow on the land in Bruce, north of Chesley on 20th, but only one. I did my first seeding on May 19 and the grass was getting quite good.

The snow storm on the tenth made a splendid blanket over the wheat and grass and as the sun banished this wet snow the vivid green of the fields of grass and wheat was delightful.

I have a memo of 50 years ago, 1892 when I was teaching school and seeding began in Bruce county on April 6. There was some spring wheat grown in that county in those days. Easter was later that year being on April 17, but the length of the growing season has varied very little in fifty years.

At an auction sale of 300 work horses held in Stettler, Alberta, on March 21, one team, well broken, brought $315 being sold to [illegible] Peacock, an Ontario buyer. The highest price for a single animal $135 was paid by a Manitoba buyer. Most of the horses came East and bidding was quite keen.

BRITISH breeding livestock continues to bring top prices. Breed from the best and so improve your farm animals, has been the practice of the British farmer and has placed him in the very forefront of livestock improvers, and in this business the Scots farmer has excelled everyone. At a sale of pure bred pigs at the Whittingham Mental Hospital, in England a yearling gilt brought 230 guineas (about $1035), the purchaser being MacKnight Cowper of Gogar Mains, Edinburgh, Scotland. Two other gilts brought 80 guineas and 50 guineas each. These were large whites, Yorkshires in Canada. At another sale at the Wall, the farm of W. W. and W. J. Ryman, in Strafford-shire, a young boar brought 105 guineas and gilts sold for 90 guineas, 72 guineas, two at 65 guineas, 62 guineas, 60 guineas, three at 50 guineas and two at 48 guineas each, large whites. We should have some of these pigs coming to Canada. When the war is over the supply of bacon from both Canada and the United States will have reached amazing amounts, and the only way in which we will hold the British market, the world's best for bacon will be by supplying a quality product, and the quality of our bacon then will be determined by the class of breeding pigs we have in this country. It will be quality not quantity that will count.

The green harvest of broccoli and other vegetables was in full swing in the first days of March in the south of England. It is expected that 30,000 tons of broccoli alone will be grown in Cornwall this year. The acreage of flower bulbs has been reduced by 50 per cent to enable more vegetables to be grown.

The Minister of Agriculture in Britain is voicing genuine alarm over the food situation in Britain for the winter of 1942-43. The British farmers have to produce an increased volume of food this year with less labor than they had last year. It is almost making bricks without straw but the British farmers are not letting down and purpose making a record year.

British farms still bring good prices. Computing pounds to dollars at the rate of $4.40 a 60 acre farm in Shropshire sold for $17,160. An estate of 733 acres, partly on the Isle of Ely, brought $161,780 at public auction. This is fen land and very rich in its production of food. A farm near Rugby, England, 130 acres sold for $26,400. A small holding in Herefordshire, of 18 acres of pasture and orchard brought $17,400 probably with good buildings.

The cattle markets in Canada have been somewhat upset recently as a result of what appears to be a refusal of the Packers to pay prices which farmers feel they must have. Fortunately there is a market in the United States for some of our cattle and they are going there in considerable numbers. There seems to be a sort of implied threat that beef may become scarce if the Packers refuse to process the cattle. We are at least having a good example of what the Packers would likely do if we had no market across the line. Discussions on this question indicate that some people, doubtless on the outside, have suggested an embargo might be placed on Canadian cattle going to the U.S. It is rather difficult to imagine anyone wanting to embargo foodstuffs to prevent its going from one country where they have too much of it to another country where it is needed, and these two countries at the same time allies in a World War. Beef is much in demand for soldiers. We are producing 14 to 15 million dollars worth of beef each year more than we need and the United States stands ready to buy it, what a tragic mistake it would be to refuse to sell it to one of our allies.

The result of such a move would do what? It would [illegible] cattle on to the market here at sacrifice prices, the packers could then process the live cattle and sell the beef in the U.S. as there is much more than we need. I would not think there was any grave danger of this being done, but all interested in the cattle trade had better be on the alert.

Pigs come under another heading. Britain wants Canadian bacon, the United States is a pig country, the corn states are fairly abounding in pigs, and their bacon is going the same way as ours, when they have any to spare, and they are getting quite a surplus now. Fats are much needed in the war effort and record production of hogs are needed in Canada and the United States.

"SEA WAR CAN BE WON ON LAND"

—London Daily Mirror.

• Bombs May Alter Jap Plans

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 20 (AP)—The bombing of Tokyo, Yokohama and other Japanese cities raises a question as to whether the planes involved were carrier-based or struck from land bases on the northern tip of Luzon.

Until that question is answered in official statements from Washington the full meaning cannot be clear.

If four-engined bombers made up the attacking groups, that would indicate that they came from land bases, presumably in the Philippines. That is possible, but not probable. It is certain, however, that if bombers of such size were involved they came from land bases, not from airplane carriers.

Assuming that the planes were carrier-based, it would mean that a powerful naval task force had penetrated to within 600 miles or less of the Japanese coastline. Supporting ships such as cruisers and destroyers to protect the carrier or carriers would be essential in that case.

It would put a strong American naval and air unit perilously close to Japanese China Sea communication lines, the most vulnerable sector of the whole Japanese war front.

MAY REVISE STRATEGY

If that be the case Tokyo's war lords may have cause to reappraise their strategy in sending powerful Japanese fleet units from home waters to the Indian Ocean.

By the recent account of Prime Minister Churchill to Parliament, the Japanese have at least three battleships, five plane carriers and many light craft in the Bay of Bengal. That represents about half of her known carriers and perhaps a third of her battleship strength.

Aside from its boost to morale in the United Nations, the bombing attack might serve the strategic purpose of leading Tokyo to recall a part of that force nearer home, thus easing the threat to India.

There can be no doubt, in any event, that Japan is destined to feel the force of American air power increasingly from now on.

On Saturday Flying Fortresses taking off from India bases pounded Japanese-held Rangoon. A continuance of such aerial attacks on the Japanese-held cities in Burma and on the roads leading north to the Allied lines would do much to relieve pressure on the front there.

Behind that front are the few remaining oil wells which the retiring British forces have not yet wrecked.

6,000 WELLS BLASTED

Another great oil reservoir, the lush and high-test field in Western Burma, has been destroyed to keep it out of Japanese hands, and some 6,000 wells in the Minbu-Yenangyaung area on the upper Irrawaddy the heart of the Burma field, are officially reported blasted.

The Irrawaddy field probably had all but ceased to function for Allied supply purposes before it was put to the torch. Japanese planes from close-up bases made any substantial oil traffic virtually impossible even though the wells themselves have not been bombed.

It is to be hoped the British troops did an effective job of destroying the wells, even though lack of them may some day become a handicap reclaiming Burma from enemy hands. Netherlands spokesmen have given graphic accounts of the methods of oil destruction carried out in Sumatra and Borneo and elsewhere in the Netherlands East Indies. They estimated it would take the Japanese many months to tap oil anew in those regions, even if undisturbed by United Nations air forces.

Nevertheless, destruction of the main Burma oil wells is a heavy blow to the United Nations. Their loss supplements the loss of the Netherlands fields and the drain on tanker tonnage because of Axis submarine raiding in the Atlantic. And all this makes oil deliveries at the fighting fronts the current major problem of the Allies.

A Bit of Nonsense

Still Cross

A raw recruit had had a real good dressing down from the young lieutenant. Next day he passed the lieutenant without saluting. He was stopped.

"Why didn't you salute me?" demanded the officer. "W-well, sir," said the rookie, "I thought you were still cross with me."

Once bit, Twice....

A travelling showman with a portable projector made a tour of remote villages. His films were silent, and the main attraction was an interesting film called "Deer-Stalking."

At the first village he was packed out at the first performance, but on the second night the hall was empty. He stood outside and extolled the virtues of the show to a gasping crowd.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded at last, exasperated.

"You don't catch us a second time," said the village postman. "The deer never said a word!"

THE LEAFLET NUISANCE

At a conference of the Toronto district trades and labor council, attention was drawn to the considerable wastage of paper in this and probably in other communities, in the many circulars, leaflets, and other printed materials which are thrown into homes and which are found littering lawns and streets. Householders, too, are a party to this waste, as testified by the slowness of the salvage campaign.—Toronto Star.

Flags Dedicated at Knox To Men In Services

At a large C.G.I.T. rally at Knox United Church on Sunday evening two beautiful flags were dedicated in honor of those men who have enlisted in the active forces of the Dominion The choir loft was filled with the girls of the local organization while many visitors from other groups in the city sat in a body in the auditorium.

Two choral numbers were rendered by the special choir, an anthem "Let the Lower Lights be Burning," and a quartette composed of the Misses Marion Williamson, Helen Ward, Marjorie Lewis and Gertrude Lancashire, who sang, "Give Peace O God in our Time." The minister, the Rev. H. J. Mahoney was assisted in the service by the Misses Velma Stewart and Jean Darling.

At an impressive moment in the service the minister read the names on the Honour Roll, saluting the memory of one, Pilot Officer D. Ross Allen who gave his life in supreme sacrifice. Following a minute of silence the minister then said, "Dulce est gloria, pro patria mori," being interpreted, "It is a sweet and glorious thing to die for one's country." Standing at the salute the congregation then recited the following pledge, "We pledge allegiance to our flag, and pray Thy Kingdom come in our land and throughout the world, one brotherhood uniting all mankind in love and service."

In a stirring sermon based on Esther 4:14, "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the Kingdom for such a time as this," the minister challenged the girls to live courageously. Let each be seized with the importance of her task. You may think yourself small but no one else can fill your place. Why not believe like Queen Esther that you are raised up of God for a purpose. Do not be misled because you have not been assigned some special role in this struggle for freedom. 'This time we are all in the front line.' Do not think that your contribution may be too slight to be of value to so great a cause. Even an old rubber you may retrieve from the scrap heap is precious in the salvage so urgently needed by our government. Each must play her part in the world struggle for freedom, truth and honour. Quoting from Tennyson's "Passing of Arthur" the minister concluded his message with the story of Sir Bedevere who was one of King Arthur's most courageous knights, strong in battle, but when faced with a mighty conflict of the soul twice weakened, finally to conquer.

Jr. Supper Club Presents Fashion Parade

A nostalgic atmosphere of older and more gracious days hung over the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, when members of the Junior Supper Club modelled the gowns that might have been worn by their grandmothers and great-grandmothers, not to mention their mothers, in a period fashion parade and tea. The dresses ranged in period from 1870 to 1942, and were arranged in groups to show the contrasted styles of various periods.

The models were introduced by Jean MacTavish, president of the club, who also received the guests, wearing what must have been the height of elegance at the beginning of the Gay Nineties. Mrs. L. J. Pettit helped the girls arrange the show and gave valuable advice about coiffeurs. Music for the fashion parade was played by Miss Lenore Skitch, who was presented with a gift by the club in gratitude for her assistance.

Goodness knows what attics were invaded, what trunks ransacked to bring forth these relics of bygone days. There was a nightie, and night cap, of a fashion popular in the 1880's; the gown, a voluminous garment with long sleeves and an exquisitly embroidered yoke and the cap an engaging bonnet affair which must have been hard to keep on. These were contrasted with a modern miss ready for bed, complete with pink and blue cotton crepe pyjamas, curlers, and a chenille housecoat.

The dresses that probably aroused the most memories were two survivals of the late lamented "Roaring Twenties," those days when your dress was shaped like a rectangle and not like you. Almost all the spectators could remember wearing dresses like that, and the laughter was tinged with wonder that it could really have been.

Those taking part in the fashion parade were: Barbara Stewart, Eleanor Shirley, Lenore Edwards, Nancy Sootheran, Dorothy Hicks, Betty Lou Braund, Shirley Whittaker, Madelaine Russell, Evelyn Roberts, Vivian Sills, Barbara Cook, Helen Weddell, Mary Bolton, Lois Heffernan, Merrill Hartley-Wright, Helen Hall, Margaret McIlroy, Roma Williamson, Agnes Weddell, Margo Spicer, Dorothy Saunders, Nancy Eastwood.

Tea was poured by Mrs. L. J. Pettit and Mrs. D. A. MacTavish, and served by members of the Club.

The church was decorated with stocks, snapdragons and daffodils.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a grey tailored suit with matching hat and shoes and a veil of grey net, and carried a bouquet of gardenias and sweetpeas. She was attended by Mrs. William Ackerst of Toronto, who wore a turquoise blue suit with matching hat and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and sweetpeas. Mr. William Ackerst was best man, and the ushers were the bride's brothers, Charles and Leslie Cowling.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Charles Cowling, 15 Anne Avenue, where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of navy blue triple sheer with matching hat and a corsage of briarcliffe roses. How Much SUGAR Should Children Have?

Children need sugar. It helps provide energy for active little bodies. But too much sugar does more harm than good. Sweets between meals tend to dull children's appetite for the foods they need for growth.

Satisfy their sweet tooth with these, instead: Fresh fruits, fruit juices, dried fruits such as prunes, raisins, dates, figs, apricots. (50% to 75% of dried fruits are natural sugar.) They're much better for youngsters ... and they help save sugar for Canada and our allies.

The lawful allowance of sugar is ¾ pound per person per week. No one is allowed to have more than two weeks' supply on hand at any time, except in remote areas.

Retailers have the right to refuse to sell or to limit sales to any person they believe is attempting to disobey the law.

Penalties provided for breaking the sugar ration law are imprisonment for as long as two years and a fine up to $5,000.00.

Jack Adams Gives Hap Day Full Credit For Win

By HAL WALKER.

TORONTO, April 20. — "Hap did a great job."

In those words did Jack Adams laud Happy Day coach of Toronto's Stanley Cup-winning Leafs, immediately after the bell had sounded to end what may be the last big-time hockey show until after the war.

Adams, storm centre of one of the most bewildering and emotional world hockey championship series on record, was crestfallen. But he hid his disappointment well as he nervously paced the floor of the Red Wings' dressing-room. Leafs were winning 3-1 and only three minutes remained.

Suddenly the pudgy little man darted from the dressing-room and went directly to the Maple Leaf players' bench. He put one hand lightly on Happy Day's shoulder, grabbed the Toronto coach's hand, and quickly hurried away. He had conceded defeat to the Leafs with two minutes left to play. Day, absorbed in the scene on the ice, hardly seemed to notice his rival.

Gives Hap Full Credit.

Back in the dressing-room Adams continued his fretful pacing of the room. A radio blared, and through the loudspeaker came Foster Hewitt's voice detailing the fleeting seconds which remained. The Detroit leader, suspended for an attack on Referee Mel Harwood in Detroit last Sunday, turned from the radio to this writer and said:

"Hap did a great job."

This was in recognition of the daring of the Toronto coach in benching such players as Gord Drillon, Bucko McDonald and Hank Goldup and gambling with virtually untried youths like Ernie Dickens, Don Metz, and Gaye Stewart. "They deserved to win, I guess," Adams added.

Ebbie Goodfellow, who took over the coaching of the Wings when Adams was banned by President Calder, was one of the first of the Detroit camp to get to the dressing-room.

"Leafs deserved to win," he echoed, "but I think they were a little bit lucky." As an afterthought he added: "However, any team that can come back and win four straight deserves a lot of credit.'

Adams had a good word for all his players as they trooped wearily into the room. Don Grosso was first one to get to his locker. He came in slowly shaking his head, and Adams went up to him and put an arm around him, yelling: "Never mind, Count, you had a hell of a good year."

Too Good For Us—Abel.

Generally speaking, the Detroit players had praise for the Leafs. Syd Abel said they were "simply too good for us." Carl Liscombe said: 'We just missed our goals. They got theirs."

Johnny Mowers was the most melancholy of the crowd. The Detroit goaltender, tears in his eyes, sat down slowly on a chair and hung his head. He didn't speak to any one for a few minutes. Teammates tried to cheer him up, but he responded slowly. Almost savagely he stripped off his hockey gear, throwing it to one side for Trainer Honey Walker to bundle up.

Out in the corridor as the hands of the clock moved, oh so slowly, it seemed, an amusing pantomime was going on. Trainer Tim Daly, his portly figure framing the Leaf dressing-room door, stole away four times in a minute to sneak a glimpse at the clock. Three minutes was left but each time Timid Tim came back mutteringly: "Only thirty seconds left, only thirty seconds." Joe Primeau, Busher Jackson, and Baldy Cotton, members of the 1932 Stanley Cup champion Leafs, were nervous as prospective bridegrooms as they watched the clock ticking away the final seconds. "Look at Daly," Primeau chortled to Cotton. "he's ready to cry." And Daly looked like it, too.

Daly, incidentally in his doubling in brass as trainer of the hockey and baseball Leafs, revealed that this was the first year since 1908 that he had missed the opening ball game of the Fleet Street athletes.

As soon as the game ended there was a mad rush for the Leaf dressing-room door. Daly wouldn't allow any one in before the game ended. "Might 'jinx' us," he said. Joe Primeau beat his way past him to be the first to enter the room. He was quickly followed by Busher Jackson, Baldy Cotton, Hank Goldup, Nick Knott, Frankie Eddolls, Gus Marker and Jack Church.

Lou Scholes First Canadian To Win Diamond Sculls, Is Dead

TORONTO, April 20—Lou Scholes, the first Canadian to bring the coveted Diamond Sculls to Canada, died here yesterday after a lingering illness. Toronto-born, Lou was in his sixty-third year.

Only two other Canadians have won the Sculls, Joe Wright Jr., in 1928 and Jack Guest, in 1930.

Lou first sought the Sculls in 1902, but it wasn't until 1904 that he succeeded in taking down the honors. He came through four torrid heats to win, giving his backwash in one heat to Kelly, an Australian, then an Oxford student and at that time regarded as one of the fastest scullers ever to compete at Henley.

Eddie Durnan, the famous Islander, was Lou's coach in his hour of victory.

Lou tried for Olympic honors in 1906 at Henley, but was beaten in his first heat.

Previous to taking to the singles shell he coupled with Frank Smith to win the United States Nationals at Lake Worcester. That was in 1903.

Although he was strictly a "water" man, Lou did step out of his role occasionally. At one time he held the Dominion heavyweight title.

During the first Great War he achieved a captaincy with the Sportsmen's Battalion. Later he transferred to the Siberian Expeditionary Force.

The deceased has two sons now serving with the fighting forces, Pilot Officer John F. Scholes with the R.A.F. in England and Sergeant Lewis Scholes, air-gunner with the R.C.A.F.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Toronto Maple Leafs made hockey history in a couple of ways Saturday night. For the first time in the long history of Stanley Cup hockey a team that lost the first two games of the final series came on to take the title. And the decisive game was played before the largest crowd that ever saw a hockey fixture in Canada. The final Toronto triumph was not a surprise. The feat of the Leafs in roaring back from virtual elimination to tie up the series at three games each was the handwriting on the wall and most folk could scent a Toronto victory coming. The only surprise feature was the fact that the Detroit Red Wings staged a real battle before yielding the hoary old cup to the Leafs. In fact Jack Adams' men gave Toronto fans a bad scare until the middle of the last period by scoring the first goal early in the second session and protecting it successfully until well on into the last period. It was not until a penalty to Orlando that gave the Leafs a chance to stage a successful ganging play with Schriner doing the shooting that the shadow of defeat was lifted off the Toronto banners.

Sweeney Schriner was the Toronto hero in the final battle. It was Schriner who fired the tieing goal past Mowers nearly half way through the final session and again it was Schriner who tossed in Toronto's third goal and cinched the verdict just at a time when the Red Wings, fighting desperately were storming in time after time in a last effort to pull the game out of the fire. Mister Schriner also had a lion's share of the glory in the sixth game for it was he who set up perfect scoring plays for Goldham and Taylor to give Toronto a safe lead in that fixture. A decidedly useful hockey player is the former New Yorker and deserving of more credit than he sometimes gets. As for Detroit there does not seem to be doubt as to the Red Wing star. The veteran Sid Howe, always dependable and always dangerous, and a player who goes both ways equally well scored the only Detroit goal and gave a great exhibition of all-round hockey. Howe, it will be remembered figured in all three Detroit goals on Thursday night, so that he had a hand in the last four counters scored by his team to climax a fine playoff performance.

Nobody seems to know whether the series just played was the last Stanley Cup competition until after the war or not. A lot can and probably will happen before next winter but at the present writing there does not see many insurmountable obstacle to prevent the National Hockey League from functioning. Many of the star players may be lost to the armed forces before the next campaign, it is true, but it should be possible to fill the gaps with veterans or rookies and put up a good front. The hockey might not be quite so stream-lined but at least it should be interesting and continue to serve as an antidote for war nerves.

Boston Out In Front

If those Boston Red Sox continue to get the pitching they have uncorked since the season opened the experts may have to revise their predictions. Over the week-end the Croninites took two games from the New York Yanks and climbd into first place in the league standing. And in both encounters the Red Sox pitching had the world's champs pretty well hogtied. In fact in the three games of the series the Yanks were able to put together only four runs and the one game they managed to win was a 1 to 0 affair. Boston won the Saturday game 5 to 1 with Yank Terry, last season with San Diego holding the McCarthyites to three hits while the Sox collected nine off Atley Donald. On Sunday Heber Newsome annexed his second win of the young season as Boston won 5 to 2. Newsome allowed eight hits but kept them well scattered while the Yanks did not help their cause much by coming up with three errors. The double loss sent the New Yorkers down to third place as St. Louis Browns who were also beaten Saturday 4 to 0 by the White Sox broke even with the same club in a Sunday double-header.

* * * * * *

Incidentally that Sunday twin-bill was responsible for two of the best pitching duels of the campaign. St. Louis won the first game 2 to 1 with Eldon Auker opposed by Rube Benton. Auker permitted only five hits and Rube Benton on the mound for Detroit yielded one less but one of the four was a homer by Chet Laabs with a runner on the sacks and that was enough to do the trick. In the second game Fuchs, last season with Buffalo shut the Browns out with only four hits and the Tigers won by the smallest possible margin 1 to 0, with Harris also a Bison last year driving in the winning run. Phil Marchildon, the Penetang boy with the A's picked himself up a win yesterday at the expense of Washington, winning 5 to 1 and allowing the Senators only six hits.

* * * * * *

There were some nice pitching performances in the National loop over the week-end, too. Melton of the Phillies held the Brooklyn Dodgers to four hits Saturday and the Philadelphia team defeated the Bums 2 to 1 on the strength of homers by Etten and Northey. Heintzelman of the Pirates tossed five-hit ball to shut out the St. Louis Cards 3 to 0. White for the Cardinals only allowed six hits but his teammates bobbed up with five errors. Rookie Beasley pitching for the Cards Sunday allowed only four hits in an impressive debut, St. Louis winning 4 to 2. Beasely did not yield a run until the final frame when the Pirates broke through for a pair of counters.

Quakers Are Champs

Quakers won the championship of the City Basketball League on Saturday night by taking the second game of the final series from Dominions by 66 to 48. The uncanny marksmanship of Jimmy Thorburn and Joe Jakafby for the Quakers was entirely too much for the Dominions who had a lot of the play but could not find a scoring touch to equal the shooting feats of the Quaker pair. Thorburn looped in 15 field baskets and two free throws for a total of 32 points and Jakafby added 22 to the total. Burns with 14 points and Craig with 13 were the high-scorers for the losers. The Quakers in winning the championship went through the entire season with only one defeat, losing a close game to the Dominions early in the campaign. With five stars of the Outboard Marines on their lineup the porridge men have been too strong for their competition all season and the chief interest in the loop has been the battle for second place.

Phil Marchildon Whips Senators

BOSTON, April 20 — (CP). — Phil Marchildon, the Penetanguishene boy who has earned a regular place on the Philadelphia Athletics mound staff, turned in a star performance Sunday to beat Washington Senators 5-1 in the first game of a double-header. The A's lost the second 5-4.

Marchildon went the distance, yielding only six hits and did not allow any earned runs. Behind him the Athletics garnered 12 blows off Sid Hudson and Walter Masterson, climbing into a 2-1 lead in the third and increasing it from there on.

Lawn Bowling

Now that the hockey season is over, and the baseball season has begun, we might as well go all around the clock and do a little for lawn bowling.

When we made the remark the other day in this column that the lawn bowling season had been officially declared open, we did not mean that the boys were actually tossing the bowls up and down the grass; we were referring mostly to the organization of our club.

In lawn bowling, the same as any other sport, the organization plays an important part and on this organization depends the success or failure of the season's activities.

Our club is divided into two sections, the ladies and the gents. Our members are acting as membership committees and it is their duty to sell lawn bowling to the public.

We have, without a doubt, the finest layout for lawn bowling in the Province of Ontario and we would like to see more of our citizens avail themselvees of its opportunities.

It has always been the aim of our club to have our schedule books released on May 24th. And we hope this year will be no exception, but before this can be accomplished there is a lot of work to be done. Just now the important part is that of preparing the rinks and this job falls to George Gimblett, chairman of the membership committee. Just at the moment we are not prepared to say how far advanced this committee is, but we will say that if all the appointed skips will please contact the Fire Chief at the Fire Hall it will help the cause greatly, and if these skips will do some missionary work as well, it would also be a great help.

Every year about this time we hold a get together meeting in our club house, and Thursday, April 23rd, has been set aside for this. Come on out and bring a friend. You will hear all about lawn bowling and you are at liberty to take part in all of the discussions.

C.A.H.A. Plans To Save $8,000

TORONTO, April 20—A program of stringent wartime economies that will effect a saving of some $8,000 annually as adopted by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association as it continued its annual sessions Saturday.

The recommendations, submitted by President George Dudley, Midland, as chairman of the finance committee involve reduction in players' travelling allowances, elimination of the $500 grant to the International Ice Hockey Association and placing of a maximum upon the extent of financial assistance to injured players.

Eliminate Unprofitable Series

It was also recommended that the officers be empowered with the necessary authority to eliminate series which it is definitely known will prove to be unprofitable.

Previously the clubs, both senior and junior, were allowed $100 a day when travelling and $130 when staying at hotels. The allowance was to cover fifteen persons.

Senior clubs now will be allowed $90 a day when travelling and $120 while registered at hotels. Junior teams will be granted $80 a day while travelling and $100 while stationed at one place.

E. Vic Johnson, Winnipeg Manitoba delegate moved a motion to place the junior teams on the same allowance basis as the seniors, but the meeting voted it down.

Mr. Dudley said the economics in this respect are expected to net a saving of $2,000.

Fix Medical Fees

The amount to be spent on medical fees and hospitalization for injured players was set at $1,000 annually. It was decided the $1,000 should be charged against the Allan Cup and Memorial Cup playdowns and this sum set aside annually to provide for such items.

The finance committee's recommendation, which was adopted, provides that the following amounts be paid for medical accounts and time lost from work through injury: Alex Pringle, Lethbridge, $100; Mike Shabaga, Saskatoon, $75; Stan Robertson, Hamilton, $100.

Assistance to minors will be limited to $9,000, slightly lower than what was granted last year.

Mr. Dudley's suggestion that subsequent meetings, whether semi-annual or annual, be held at points between Montreal and Winnipeg, was approved. This action precluded acceptance of A. W. McDonald's invitation to hold the next annual gathering at Vancouver, Mr. McDonald, president of the British Columbia branch, is from Trail.

Cut Publications

Another saving will be effected in reducing the number of rule books and copies of the constitution to be printed. Last year 12,000 rule books and 5,000 copies of the constitution were published. Mr. Dudley said in view of the fact the registration was down 50 per cent it would be quite in order to reduce the number of books printed by one-half, which would result in a saving of $300.

In conclusion, after tabling his report and recommendations, the president urged the delegates to exercise restrain in the use of telegraph and long-distance telephone facilities.

"The branch officers have been asked not to put through calls unless the urgency warrants it," Mr. Dudley added.

Porridge Makers Have Big Edge On 2-Game Series

With Jimmy Thorburn and Joe Jakafby hitting the target repeatedly in one of the best sniping exhibitions of the year, Quakers won the championship of the City League Saturday night by defeating the second-place Dominions in a free-scoring affair 66 to 48. It was the second game of the final series. Quakers also won the first feature a week ago and took the round by a margin of 118 to 74.

In Saturday night's game they were always in front and at the half way mark had a lead of 34 to 22. Dominions kept on battling and in the last half when the scoring tempo stepped up they managed to make it considerably closer than in the opening period but at that were outscored six points, Quakers scoring 32 and Dominion 26 after the half time rest. The losers had a lot of the play but they blew far more chances than the Quakers, whose marksmanship was on on the beam all the way through the fixture. Thorburn hit the hoop for 15 field baskets and two free throws, while Jakafby, who was on the target from all angles, tossed in 10 baskets and also cashed in on two foul shots. The two snipers were responsible for 54 points.

Dominions might have closed the gap considerably had their shooting been more accurate. Gordie Burns led the losers' attack with 14 points and Craig was next in line with 13.

Quakers converted four of seven free throws into points while Dominions sank six out of 11 tries.

Quakers have been good value for their win. They went through the regular schedule with a loss of only one game, a close decision early in the season to the Dominions and their wins were usually decisive. In the playoffs they swept through the Dominions in two straight games to take the City League honors.

Quakers — Thorburn 32, Jakafby 22, McArthur 8, McPherson, McIntyre, K. Gillespie 2.

Dominions—Burns 14, C. Gillespie 8, Craig 16, Grose 2, Johnston, Rogow 7.

Referee—Nels. Stanger.

MAPLE LEAFS STANLEY CUP CHAMPIONS WIN SEVENTH GAME 3-1

Dave Schriner Scores Two Goals In Thrilling Toronto Drive After Red Wings Took Early Lead

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 20 — (CP).—A little man who once did a great job managing the Maple Leafs and now does a greater job in Canada's active army wasn't taking any bows today but the players he once led to battle will tell you he had a lot to do in bringing Toronto its first Stanley Cup in 10 years.

Scored Two Goals

Dave Schriner, who spent five seasons with the struggling New York Americans before he joined the Maple Leafs, sparked the Toronto team to their first Stanley Cup in ten years when he scored two of the Toronto goals in the seventh game on Saturday night.

The Leafs were trailing Detroit Red Wings here Saturday night when Major Conn Smythe stalked into their dressing room after the second period and talked to them quietly. What he said is still a secret but the Leafs came out fighting mad to score three goals and win hockey's world title.

After the 3-1 victory, Captain Syl Apps refused to accept the cup at centre ice until Maj. Smythe joined him. The Major obliged but he also moved an amendment to the plans and before the trophy was finally handed over, Coach Happy Day joined the select group.

Jimmy Orlando, husky Detroit defenceman who was the badman of the playoffs with 43 minutes in penalties, elected himself as "goat" of the deciding game of the best-of-seven series. Jimmy felt pretty blue about it all but cracked a big smile as he told his mates he planned to join the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"I don't think I should have got that penalty for riding off Apps," said Orlando. "I was reaching for the puck and he fell. While I was off the Leafs really turned it on and as I stepped on the ice Schriner scored the goal that tied it up."

16,218 Saw Game

The largest crowd ever to witness a hockey game in Canada—16,218 fans—saw the Wings take the lead early in the second period and hang on desperately until the eighth minute of the closing period.

Dave Schriner, who spent five seasons with the struggling New York Americans before he joined the Leafs in 1939, was elated at finally being on a Stanley Cup club. He had reason for rejoicing for the big left winger sparked the Leafs all night and fired two of their three goals.

Syd Howe scored on a backhander on a perfect passing play with Syd Abel and Orlando to put the Wings in front. The Wings seemed to have the Leafs stopped when Schriner drifted a slow shot across the Detroit goal line just as Orlando completed his penalty.

The payoff goal by Pete Langelle two minutes later was somewhat of a freak. Goalie Johnny Mowers moved out of his net to check Johnny McCreedy and the puck sailed high into the air. The puck came down to rest on Langelle's stick and all he had to do was push it home.

Jack Stewart, Detroit defenceman, went into the net as Mowers moved out but he was unable to reach the high puck because his stick was attached to his wrist by a rubber band. Stewart was playing with an injured wrist and didn't have enough strength to lift both his stick and his arm to bat at the puck.

The Leafs had nothing but praise for the game stand of the Wings who won the opening three games only to drop four in a row. In the Detroit dressing room coach Ebbie Goodfellow said: "They had a little better club but it could have gone the other way with a few breaks."

Pitching Duels Feature Games

By The Associated Press

It is customary in the spring to explain the wild slugfests that pass for games in organized baseball with the phrase "the hitters are far ahead of the pitchers." But that wasn't the case in the International League Sunday.

The hurlers had the swatsmiths breaking their backs in virtually every contest and pitching duels were common.

Syracuse and Rochester swapped well-pitched victories, the Chiefs taking the first 5-0 behind Tom Delacruze's mound mastery and the Red Wings annexing the nightcap 9-2 with Ira Hutchinson giving up only four blows.

Jersey City had a pair of moundsmen in top condition and took two games from Toronto to set up a deadlock with Rochester for first place in the standings.

The Little Giants grabbed the first battle, 6-2, with Warren Pickell limiting the Leafs to four hits and came back to take the second 1-0 with Rube Fischer getting the decision over the veteran Bill Brandt. Jersey City got only two hits in the second game but a two-base error by Catcher Bill Jackson brought the Giants the deciding run in the final frame.

Slugging Bee.

Newark's tussle with Montreal was an old fashioned slugging bee with the Royals fashioning a run in the 10th inning to win 8-7 but the second encounter was all Joe Hatten.

Even before Hatten threw a single pitch he was out in front by seven runs and the Canadians went on from there to win 13-0 behind his six hit curve ball magic. George Washburn, the Bear starter, walked five players and got another on base by an error before Charlie Gelbert swatted a homer with all traffic stations jammed in the first.

Some of the best pitching was on display at Baltimore where the home club took both sections of the bargain bill from Buffalo 4-2 and 6-1.

The first game was decided in the ninth inning by Bob Lemon's home run with a mate on the paths. Bob Boken's two errors at second allowed five unearned Oriole runs to trickle over the counting station in the second affair.

In Saturday's games, Rochester scored three runs in the ninth inning to defeat Baltimore 8-6. Montreal scored a 5-3 victory over Jersey City and Newark walloped Buffalo 10-3. Toronto at Syracuse was postponed on account of the weather.

Overtime Goal Gives Fliers 8 to 7 Verdict

OTTAWA, April 20 — (CP).—An overtime goal by Buddy (Little Poison) Hellyer gave Air Force Fliers an 8-7 victory Saturday over Port Arthur's courageous Bearcats and advanced Fliers to the theshold of senior hockey's throne-room.

The 23-year-old left-wing broke up a brilliantly waged struggle at 2.24 of the extra time with a flip shot from close range to send Fliers two games up in the best-of-five Allan Cup final series, which resumes in Montreal tomorrow.

Hellyer's goal took all the starch out of the staunchly fighting Port Arthur team, which had won the hearts of 6,843 spectators by its gallant display against long odds.

Fliers needed all their wizardry to win. After a slow start, Coach Bill Touhey's City League entry picked up momentum in the closing minutes of the first period to take a 2-1 lead. Halfway through the second, they stretched the margin to 5-1 in a three-minute display of pulverizing power, and it appeared the Airmen would simply coast to their nineteenth straight conquest in senior competition.

Cats Strike Back

But Bearcats were far from through. Led by the flying Edgar Laprade, Waikko Koivista and Norm Wright, the Western champions stormed from behind for three goals in less than two minutes to enter the third period on the short end of a 5-4 score.

In the final twenty minutes of regulation time, the Bearcats tied up the count 5-5 and then had to come from behind twice more to send the game into overtime. The strain was too great and after Hellyer's goal gave them the lead for the fourth time in the game, Fliers were content to withdraw into a defensive shell the Bearcats could not pierce again.

Port Arthur's performance sapped the last ounce of energy from a team which operated under difficulties throughout. Bert Laprade, their starry defenseman, again was unable to play, and in the second period Bill Maki, the rugged Finnish rearguard, was forced to retire when George Snell's stick struck the bridge of his nose and drew blood.

Boston Red Sox Stop Yankees

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sport Writer

Patriots' Day in Boston took on added significance today, with the Red Sox and the Braves setting a pace in the major league baseball races that would have made Paul Revere's dash through Middlesex County look like a trot.

As the Red Sox returned home from a successful invasion of Yankee Stadium to open against Washington in a Patriots' Day doubleheader, they were in supreme command of the American League lead.

The Red Sox took over sole possession of first place Sunday by stopping New York Yankees 5-2, their second victory over the world champions in two days. St. Louis Browns, who had been deadlocked with the Red Sox and Yanks, slipped into second place ahead of the New Yorkers as they divided a doubleheader with Detroit.

Braves, Pirates Beaten

The Braves and Pirates formed a cozy little twosome at the top of the National loop until both lost yesterday, allowing Brooklyn Dodgers to muscle in on their party by brushing aside Philadelphia Phils.

From a spectators' standpoint, the first Sunday of the 1942 season was a shining success, although the action was confined to seven fronts when the weather forced postponement of the Cleveland game between the Indians and White Sox.

51,522 Saw Game

Despite postponement, the American League with its two doubleheaders drew 80,798 of the day's total of 134,247 customers, and 51,522 of them were present at Yankee Stadium to see Heber (Dick) Newsome of the Red Sox chalk up his second pitching victory of the season.

Marv Breuer of the Yanks gave up only five hits, but he had a shaky fourth inning when the Red Sox turned three safeties and a pair of walks into four runs.

At St. Louis, the fans were treated to a brace of pitching duels, both games were won on home runs. Chet Laabs smashed a two-run homer in the opener to give the Browns a 2-1 decision over the Tigers, although the winners managed only four hits off Al Benton, one less than Eldon Auker yielded in gaining the verdict.

Rookie Charley Fuchs also tossed a four-hitter at the Brownies in the nightcap, but Ned Harris came through with a ninth-inning homer that produced a 1-0 victory for Detroit, squaring accounts for the day and spoiling a six-hit pitching job by Long John Niggeling.

Buck Newsom pitched Washington Senators to a 5-4 triumph over the Athletics in the second game of a twin bill at Philadelphia after the A's had grabbed the opener, 5-1, behind the six-hit elbowing of Phil Marchildon, of Penetanguishene, Ont.

Game Went 14 Innings

Prize game of the National League was a 14-inning affairs between Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs at Chicago. Claude Passeau went all the way for the Cubs and gave up seven hits, but the Reds won the game 2-1 after committing eight errors and going hitless for the first seven frames.

At Brooklyn, the Dodgers captured the rubber game of their series with the Phils, 6-2, as Dixie Walker drove in four runs and Curt Davis racked up his second pitching victory with a five-hit job.

John Beazley's four-hitter gave St. Louis Cardinals a 3-2 decision over the Pirates at Pittsburg, although he had to have help from Harry Gumbert in the ninth when the Bucs scored both their runs.

At Boston, the Braves suffered their second straight setback at the hands of New York Giants who cashed in on a five-hitter by Cliff Melton for a 5-2 triumph.

New York scored an 8-5 victory over the Braves Saturday when, with the scored tied in the ninth inning, Hank Leiber blasted a home run with two aboard. In other games, the Pirates shut out the Cardinals 3-0 and the Phils, after losing their first four games, squeezed out a 2-1 decision over the Dodgers. Cincinnati at Chicago was postponed.

In the American League, Cleveland gained a 1-0 truimph over the White Sox when Rookie Fabian Gaffke, coming up as a pinchhitter with two out in the ninth inning, singled across the run. Oshawa Generals Score 8 to 4 Win In Third Game Over Terriers

By MARSHALL BATEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WINNIPEG, April 20 — (CP).—Coach Charlie Conacher, pleased with the 8-4 trimming his Oshawa Generals handed the speedy Portage La Prairie Terriers in the third Memorial Cup game on Saturday, will send his players through a 30-minute workout to-day so that they "can bear down twice as hard" in the fourth encounter on Tuesday. Terriers lead the best-of-five series 2-1.

"Were not going to be satisfied till we get the cup," he said. And the possibility the series would go the five-game limit was heard in many Winnipeg circles when Generals emerged on Saturday as the first junior team to outskate Terriers in 23 games this season. The coach of the Eastern champions meanwhile claimed his team had "just played its natural game."

Losers in the first two games by 5-1 and 8-7 counts the Generals came up with a sound performance following a chalk talk on Friday on how to clear, back-check, poke check and how to correct their passing that generally lacked timing earlier last week.

Oshawa Early Took Lead.

The Terriers fought the Generals on even terms for only 20 minutes and from there in the Oshawa forwards were breaking up plays before they got started or tying up the puck-carrier at the Oshawa blueline. Terrier wingmen frequently moved offside in the close-checking and when they did get through they found Goalkeeper "Rube" Waddell generally in the way.

Capt. Bill Mortimer, reported have been below his usual form the first two games, broke away twice and moved in on Goalkeeper Gordon Bell unmolested to score two of prettiest goals of the game. Then he snared Ken McNaught passout in the final minutes of play and backhanded a high screened shot that went by Bell before he could move.

Floyd Curry on passing plays with Tilson and Ken Smith, pushed home two Oshawa counters while "Bep" Guidolin, a hard-working defenceman, Ron Wilson and Smith got the others.

Joe Bell, returning to Terriers lineup after receiving treatment for a bladder infection, was the only Manitoba winger allowed to roam. He shot the disc by Waddell twice and helped Bob Love on another goal, while the other Portage goal went to Wally Stefaniw.

Scots Upset English Eleven

LONDON, April 20.—(CP Cable.)—Scotland, which had fared not too well in wartime soccer internationals, edged out England 5-4 at Glasgow Saturday in an upset avenging two Wembley defeats by England.

The tremendous pace left the crowd of 75,000, the maximum allowed, limp. The last three goals were scored within five minutes.

Cup ties were the main attraction in England and drew big crowds. In the London Cup four group winners were declared, and in the semi-finals Portsmouth and Charlton meet Saturday, while Arsenal will play Brentford in the other bracket May 2.

Brentford finished first in its group, beating Aldershot 3-1,(while Arsenal whipped Brighton 5-1 before more than 8,000. Portsmouth played a scoreless draw with Chelsea, but finished first in its group through a better goal average than second-place Fulham, which edged out Crystal Palace 4-3. In the remaining group Charlton beat its closest rival, Tottendham Hotspurs 4-0.

Most Football League War Cup ties were close as the second round of the home and home series was complete. A crowd of 35,000 saw Liverpool beat Everton 1-0, but lose the round through Everton's 2-0 victory in the first game of the total-goal series.

Farm Problems Special Topic At Coldsprings

COLDSPRINGS, April 20—(ENS) —A meeting of the Northumberland Federation of Agriculture was held on Wednesday evening in St. Paul's Church. Major Earle Drope was chairman and on the platform with him were Rev. T. Wesley, Miss Ethel Chapman, special speaker, Reeve Charles Burrison, V. S. Milburn, and Ian MacLeod, agricultural representative in Northumberland.

A splendid program of songs, piano solos and duets was given in between speakers. Miss Agnes Macphail was to have addressed the gathering, which filled this large church. Owing to a mixup in speaking engagements whereby Miss Macphail had two arranged for the same night, she was unable to be present. Miss Ethel Chapman, who ably took her place, spoke on the Federation of Agriculture as it affected the home and activities of rural people.

V. S. Milburn, who was born in Peterborough County and is secretary for the Dairy Farmers of Canada besides many other rural affiliations, gave a most interesting survey of the activities of the Federation of Agriculture.

which he formally conveyed to MacArthur from Canberra yesterday.

Mr. Curtin said MacArthur had been instructed specifically to prepare to assume the offensive, and declared that he had come to Australia "to lead a crusade, the result of which means everything to the future of the world and mankind."

As though to emphasize Mr. Curtins statement, it was announced that Allied planes had carried out another heavy raid yesterday on the Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, damaging at least one ship in the harbor and returning safely despite sharp fighter opposition.

(The London radio last night quoted the Australian Broadcasting Commission's correspondent with the Allied forces as saying "It is believed in Australia that the Allied air offensive may soon force the enemy to abandon his air bases at Lae and Salamaua in New Guinea.")

the Berlin radio yesterday, "has provided funds for the rebuilding of the factories and dwelling houses and one cinema which were burned down in the Tokyo area."

This, from one of Japan's own Axis partners, was the first acknowledgement of any industrial damage in the heart of the enemy's war effort—Tokyo, the capital; Yokohama and Kobe, two chief ports, and Nagoya, big centre of aircraft production.

Nevertheless, despite official Japanese assertiong that the attack failed and left Japan's war plants intact, Tokyo's own broadcasts hinted at extensive damage.

Plotting The "Cover-Up"

Domei, official Japanese news and propaganda agency, broadcast a report from Tokyo that a meeting of vice ministers discussed the raid damage today along with measures to control "baseless rumors" concerning the air attack.

Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo was disclosed to have seen Emperor Hirohito Saturday night after an inspection tour north of Tokyo and to have conferred with Home Minister Michio Yusawa and Railways Minister Yoshiaki Natta, departments which would deal with any housing or communications problems.

A broadcast by the Japanese-controlled Saigon radio, heard in the United States by CBS, said most of the missiles were 12-pound incendiary bombs.

Contrasted to Japan's shock to discover that despite the long distances over the Pacific she is not immune to air assault, the Saturday raids caused sudden jubilation among the United Nations.

In Chungking, jubilant Chinese predicted Japan would be compelled to tie up much of her air power for home defence at the expense of her far-stretched fighting fronts.

In London, editorial writers tied up the air attack on Japan with the R.A.F.'s resurgent offensive against Germany as a fore-runner of terrific aerial punishment for the Axis.

Now, said the London Times, the Japanese know "the kind of destruction their war lords have wantonly inflicted on other nations....the remarkable fact is that Japan has been bombed at all."

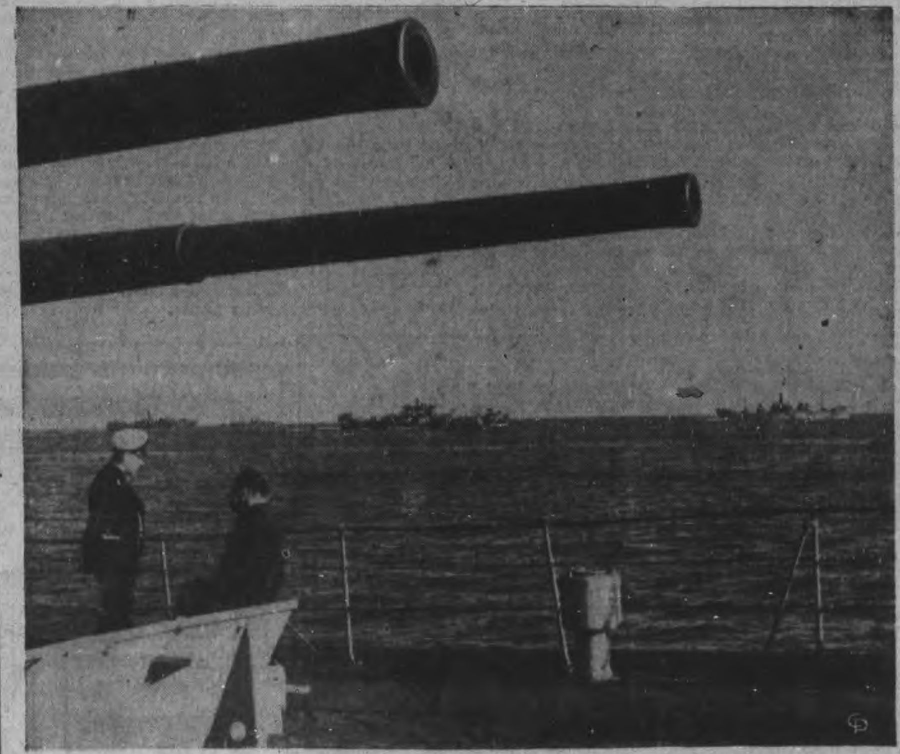
Cruisers' Guns Guard Mediterranean Convoy



Under the guns of escorting cruisers, camouflaged ships of a British supply convoy are shown plowing through the waters of the Mediterranean toward Malta, the Suez Canal or British-held ports in North Africa. The Mediterranean fleet has scored brilliant successes in its defence of convoys as well as wreaking havoc with enemy convoys trying to get supplies to the Axis North African armies. Recently light British units under Rear-Admiral P. S. Vian, D.S.O., fought off a three-day attack by Italian naval vessels including a battleship, and Italian and German bombers, to bring a big convoy into Malta with loss of only one or two vessels.

Captive Raiders Not So Cocky On Their Arrival

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, April 20.—(CP).— German underseas raiders who have launched their sneak-attacks against helpless merchant shipping; merchant sailors who have sailed theeir last voyage under the Swastika and a few of Goering's fliers, theier wings clipped for the duration, are now safe behind the walls of a Canadian internment camp.

These prioners were landed here on a boisterous spring day and marched from their grey prison ship through the lines of soldiers, armad with glistening bayonets and snub-nosed tommy guns, to a heavily guarded train. Tossing close to their ship was a trim naval launch, her Lewis guns stripped for instant action.

Dressed in the patched prison garb given them, the Germans had none of the cockiness characterizing some of the earlier arrivals. For the most part they marched with their heads down, apparently wishing only to get into the warm train, where they would be shielded from biting winter winds.

However, one was a little troublesome. A naval man, he lagged behind his fellow prisoners, protesting about having to carry his luggage. But the Canadian guard moved him along, ignored his mean looks, and landed him in the train with the others.

Waves in Appreciation.

Another, a bearded fellow, saved a Canadian soldier from a reprimand. Looking out the train winow, the Nazi noticed an officer approaching a soldier who was smoking on duty. Rapping on the window, he warned the guard who doused his fag in time to bring up a snappy salute. He then waved to the prisoner.

According to the guards, the Germans had been similarly well behaved on the trip, a quiet one for this season of the year. No incidents were reported, although a captain in the provost corps who searched the men as they arrived here saiad the group had succeeded in making the usual number of escape tools while en route

"It's amazing what those chaps can make out of nothing at all," he marvelled, telling how on every prison boat they find the Germans have made jimmies, screw drivers and daggers out of flattened nails, spoons or plates

Fler Overplayed Luck

According to one of the guards there was among the prisoners a flier who would still be safe in Germany if he hadn't played his luck too far His story was that the airman had made 109 trips over England, finally winning an instructor's post in the Reich

However, he wanted to bring his number of forays up to the 110 mark, so on the night he was supposed to be on his leave wangled permission to take one last trip across the Channel But this time lady luck deserted him and an Allied fighter brought him down.

Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen on duty when the prisoners were landed flocked from theeir posts to watch the spectacle. They looked on in silence, refraining from booing or other demonstrations because, "It's not sporting to razz a chap when he's down."

Senator Sharpe Uxbridge Boy, Passes

OTTAWA, April 20—(CP).—Senator W. H. Sharpe, a Manitoba general merchant who raised a battalion in the first Great War and took it to the United Kingdom, died in Ottawa today on his seventy-fourth birthday.

He was summoned to the Senate in 1916, the year in which he raised the 184th Battalion and took it overseas. Although he had lived in Ottawa most of the past two years, Senator Sharpe's home address was Manitou, Man., where he was engaged in business more than forty years ago. He held the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Lieuteant-Colonel William Henry Sharpe described himself as the only Senator who had driven ox teams on the farms, but he was a noted soldier as well as a farmer. His political career was highly successful since Lisgar constituency in Manitoba first sent him to the House of Commons in 1908.

The achievement in which he took most pride was mobilization of the 184th Battalion in 1916 — in just forty-four days. Colonel Sharpe's accomplishment astonished military officials and was all the more noteworthy because voluntary enlistment at that time was at its lowest ebb. His brother, Sam Sharpe, M.P., was commanding officer of the 114th Battalion, Uxbridge, Ont.

As a youth of 21, he turned westward from the Eppsburg, Ont., home where he was born April 19, 1868, son of George and Mary Ann Sharpe. He was educated in the public schools and Bellevue Business College at Uxbridge, a few miles from his home. But farm life appealed to him and only a short time after his graduation he arrived at Douglas, twenty-two miles west of Brandon, Man., here he took up a homestead.

Senator Sharpe's death left fifteen vacancies in the ninety-six-seat Upper House, which now has forty-three Liberal and thirty-eight Conservative members.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER.

Quite a number of young men who took the War Emergency classes at the Collegiate, and who were paid a subsistence allowance while learning a valuable trade, are not staying on the job in local factories. It is reliably reported that several of them have quit their jobs, because it became a little monotonous, not because they were not satisfied with their pay. These men were paid to get a training that they could not buy in peace time.

HEELS BLISTERED

Some of the men of the local reserve artillery unit were nursing sore heels last night after a tactical outing Sunday to the district around Lily Lake. More than fifty men spent the day from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the country, bringing their own lunches.

The Medical Board later passed him, and he is now wearing the uniform of the Rangers. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Devlin, 21 Cricket Place, and was formerly employed as a truck driver.

UPSETTING APPLECART.

In recent years heads of industries have built up young organizations, putting smart young fellows on key jobs, as supervisors, instructors, or executives. Now just when their personnel problems seem at an end, the draft is upsetting all the well laid plans. Men up to 30 in many industries, who are in responsible positions, are getting the call.

To Store Wool In C.P.R. Round House

Part of the C.P.R. round-house at Havelock has been rented for temporary storage of wool, W. H. J. Tisdale of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers said here on Saturday.

Farmers are urged to keep every good ewe this year for breeding purposes, and as further advice they are asked to take the best possible care of the season's clip that is now under way.

"Canada is growing 19.000,000 pounds of wool, but our needs are around 100,000,000 pounds," Mr. Tisdale said. "The Government has set the price, according to grades, and is buying every pound of domestic wool."

Purchases are being made chiefly through registered grading stations, of which there are two or three in this city.

Forty per cent of the wool is be-allocated for civilian needs.

The Canadian Wool Board Limited will cause no disruption of the recognized channels of trade, and will continue to absorb the entire Canadian clip for the duration of the war and for one year thereafter as a means of encouraging home production and guaranteeing a stable market and fixed prices.

Truck Driver Is Charged With Drunken Driving

Two taxi drivers swore in police court this morning that A. E. Pammett, charged with drunken driving, had refused to get into their taxi cab when they answered a call, that he was drunk and that he got into his own truck and had driven off.

Pammett, who pleaded not guilty to the charge, was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair.

Hoard Gould and Phillip Rochetta were the taxi drivers called by the Crown.

Gould said they had received a call from a house on Monaghan road and when they arrived two men dragged Pammett out of the house to the taxi. Witness said that the accused was abusive, refused to get into the taxi, saying that he had not ordered one and would not pay for it and that he had "taken a swing" at Rochetta, missing him.

Then Pammett, according to the witness, had gone down Monaghan road to his truck half a block away, got in and drove south toward Lansdowne street.

Rochetta corroborated the story, adding that he had disconnected the wires on Pammett's truck when he saw that the accused was going to drive off. The wiring had been fixed and the accused then drove south, Rochetta said.

"The truck was going from one side of the road to the other," the witness said.

Constables Gordon K. Hardy and Gordon Trennum swore that Pammett was very drunk when they arrested him on the verandah of his home on Armour road a short time after. They said that he was staggering, abusive and smelled strongly of liquor.

Pte. Gerald Monaghan, called as a witness by the defence, said that Pammett had been at his house and had gone to telephone for a taxi for witness and his wife. Monaghan said he saw the taxi men trying to pull Pammett into the taxi and saw the accused break away and start for his truck. Witness saw one of the taxi men disconnect the wires of the machine and had told Pammett who fixed them.

The witness said that Pammett and the truck were still there when the taxi men drove away. He had gone into the house then himself and did not see the truck driven off.

"How was Pammett's condition?"

"He was just as he is now," said the witness.

In cross-examination Monaghan said there was a bottle of whiskey at his place and Pammett might have had one drink out of that.

Wm. Hattwick, a nephew of the previous witness swore that Pammett was still there when the taxi drivers left. The witness said that both Pammett and Monaghan had fixed the wires of the truck, then said it was Monaghan who did it and finally that it was Pammett who had done so.

At this point the court adjourned for luncheon.

City Carpetball

Once more the carpet ball season draws near its close. The coco mats will soon be put away in moth balls like the old red underwear. Only five league games remain unplayed and apparently the teams interested do not think it worth while as it would not help them in the league standing.

The Hope Cup was won by the Legion team No. 5 under Skip Tom Ferguson.

The Bleasidell Shield will be presented to St. George's team of which Clarence Crouter is skip.

The Fire Hall team No. 8 and Sons of England No. 2 are tied in third place with 52 points but Albert Mason's team got third with a rolling average of 5340 against Fred Parson's 5051.

George Gimlett, Jr. and his Fire Hall Crew No. 7 will receive the Elsie Bennett Trophy as team with the highest average outside the prize winners.

In the President's Cup we regret to report that a delay has occurred and the dates of final games not yet determined.

During the past week the Mad Masons eliminated the Pork Packers by 9-6, 11-14, 7-6, but arrangements could not be made for their match with the Auto Tops.

It had been decided to play the first game on Monday, April 27, but the Auto Tops cannot get their team together for that night.

As President Leether is out of town we cannot get his ruling on the matter.

The L.O.L. team lost out to the Westclox team by the scores of 4-10, 9-2, and 2-9. Eyewitnesses tell us that if all the members of the Orange team played as well as their lead man the score would have been reversed.

The Legion will meet the winners of 8 vs 12 to decide who will take the President's Cup.

The team holding trophies are requested to turn them in to the Elsie Bennett Gift Shop at once.

First Bananas In One Month

The first car of bananas to reach Peterborough in a month is expected at National Grocers about the middle of the week, G. W. Duncan, manager of the fruit department, told the Examiner to-day.

The stores have been bare of bananas for weeks, one of the effects of the submarine war along the Atlantic and Caribbean routes.

"Shortage of boats," was Mr. Duncan's explanation . "You might call it a boat rationing and we just have to put up with it. Canadian imports from British territory have to be brought into the country through Canadian ports. This car of bananas we are getting this week, probably Tuesday or Wednesday, is coming to Peterborough directly from Halifax."

Mr. Duncan's information will be good news for Collegians and the rest of the banana-split addicts at the refreshment bars.

Farmer Is Guilty On Trapping Count

CAMPBELLFORD, April 20 (ENS) —A case which attracted considerable attention here on Friday afternoon came before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in the local police court and concerned the right of a farmer to trap without a licence on the river immediately fronting his land. The accused, Harry Dunford, 25, of Seymour Township, was charged by Game and Fish Inspector A. Minaker with trapping without a license but his counsel, W. B. Gordon of Peterborough argued that his client was a bona fide farmer and entitled (as provided by the exception in the Act) to trap "two or three feet" off his land in the river. However, the Crown produced evidence to show that Dunford had his traps placed on floating logs moored several hundred feet from shore and Magistrte Langley ruled, that despite the fact this was not in the channel of the river, it constituted a navigable portion of the stream and therefor held the accused was liable for a licence. He was found guilty and assessed $10.00 and $11.85 costs. A charge of theft of traps also laid against Dunford was dismissed when the Crown submitted no evidence.

Rev. Dr. Sisco Visits Pt. Hope Church

PORT HOPE, April 20—(ENNS)—One of the most outstanding services of the year took place at the United Church on Sunday, April 19, when the church celebrated its 66th Anniversary with the distinguished minister in the person of Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, D.D., at both services.

Dr Sisco, who was pastor of the Port Hope United church from 1929 to 1933 is now an international figure in all affairs of the Christian church and General Secretary of the United Church of Canada. Dr. Sisco has just returned from an International Conference of the Protestant churches of North America at Delaware, Ohio, where the whole world situation in relation to the Christian church was considered and where Dr. Sisco was one of the principal speakers.

The high esteem in which Dr. Sisco is held in Port Hope was shown by the very large congregation which attended both morning and evening services on Sunday.

The church service in the evening at both the Baptist and Presbyterian churches were cancelled so that the ministers as well as their congregations from these churches might enjoy the privilege of hearing Dr. Sisco's message.

At the morning service the prelude played by the organist, Mr. T. W. Stanley, as "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach. Rev. J. W. Gordon took the invocation, after which the congregation sang "O God Our Help in Ages Past." The choir numbers were: an anthem, "I Will Arise", by Woods and a solo by Mrs. Gordon Garnett, "Bless This House," from Brahae. Mr. Stanley's organ number was from Wolstenholme, "Romanza," and his postlude, "Silver Trumpets" from Rimbault.

Dr. Sisco in his opening remarks of his sermon stressed that our religion came out of tragedy and that proofs of this are to be found in many places in both the old and the new testaments and how at the present time we are in such a world tragedy.

At the evening service three congregations listened with interest to an outstanding oration. Mr. Stanley's organ numbers were the Prelude, "Largo" from Dorrah and the postlude "Festal March" from Leilman, while the full choir gave the anthem "O Worship the Lord" from Hollins.

The evening solo was given by Mr. Jack Rowland, "The Earth is the Lord's" by Hynes. A quartette, "Singing Glory", was beautifully rendered by Messrs. Cole, Gillard Darling, Alfred Fulford and Lewis Roberts.

Dog Crashes Car Damages Fender

When a car hits a dog that is not news but when a Saint Bernard dog, weighing over 200 pounds, crashes into a police cruiser and dents the front fender that probably comes under the heading of news. The big canine, the property of Lieut.-Col. Keeler of the Military Training Centre, charged out from the sidewalk on George street Saturday as a police car driven by Officer Archie Menzies was passing and collided with the left front fender. The dog's hip was injured in the crash.

Local Chapter Donates $25 To War Victims

The Meriam Florence Chapter is a group of local Hebrew ladies, who form part of an International group, whose present work is all directed towards giving assistance to worthy war charities and objectives, among which might be mentioned Red Cross work, and contributing towards the equipment for hospitals in England.

Some time ago, they gave a nice contribution to the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund, and this is now followed up by a second contribution for $25 per Miss Hannah Florence and Miss Betty Florence, secretary and treasurer respectively for the local group, displaying a continued interest in the welfare of those in Britain who suffer from air raids, a very necessary thing to uphold their morale and courage until the day of victory arrives.

Mrs. F. C. Marshall is once again listed with a contribution through the sale of little mitts, made and sold by herself at 15 cents a pair, constituting the sixth time that help has come from this source.

One other personal donation is listed, from Mrs. A. T. Hunter of Lakefield, and returns from two boxes are noted, that a Northam's Bakery bringing its first returns from a quite recent placing of the box in that store. The open season for outdoor bazaars has arrived and to a group headed by Dorothy Carr, of 201 Rubidge street, goes the honor of being the first to renew this form of activity on behalf of the Fund.

Next Saturday they will have their stand at the corner of Rubidge and Dalhousie streets, with a variety of goods for sale, and in this Joyce Hanes, Catherine Craig, June Moore, Margaret Johnston and Joyce Campbell will be seeking your support.

Big Transport Forces Automobile Off Road

COBOURG, April 20.—(ENS). — Mr. and Mrs. Claude Taylor of Colborne escaped with minor cuts and bruises when their car upset on the highway a few miles east of here and caught fire. According to Provincial Constable G. E. Broughton of Port Hope, who investigated, the Taylor car was stopped for a train on the highway at the Kingston crossing with two transports behind him. After the train had passed, Taylor decided to let the two trucks pass him. When the second transport nosed in ahead of Taylor's car, the latter car was forced over in the ditch. After Mr. and Mrs. Taylor got out, the car burst into flames and was completely demolished.

Rev. Dr. Harold Young Addresses Graduates

TORONTO, April 20 — Although spoken before more than 200 members of the graduating classes at the baccalaureate service of Victoria College and Emmanuel College in Victoria College chapel yesterday morning, the words of Rev. W. Harold Young, M.A., D.D., minister of St. Paul's-Avenue Road United Church, held particular interest for one of the graduates.

Wearing the blue of his Majesty's naval forces with the wavy gold stripe of an officer of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve was William Edwin Gilpin Young, only son of the speaker.

Ready to leave soon for an Eastern Canadian port for further training, the 22-year-old sub-lieutenant heard his father speak before the graduating class and their relatives and friends on the courage of millions of men now fighting for the survival of the democratic way of life. Four New Trucks Arrive For PW Rangers

Six men of the Prince of Wales Rangers, under Sgt. Ivan Fletcher left the city on the early morning train Saturday for Kingston to bring back four army trucks.

On arrival at Kingston they were hustled to the R.C.O.C. workshop at Barriefield where they were given driver tests, and taken through the workshops on a tour of inspection. Each of the six was passed as a grade 3 qualified driver, and they cannot step up their rating until they have driven army trucks for quite some period.

The trucks are to be used for training purposes, and two of them have right hand drives, according to Sgt. Fletcher, driving a truck with a right hand drive, is like watching a man writing with his left hand. On the way home they kept the regulation distance apart which is not less than ten yards nor more than 40 yards. The trucks are one 8 cwt., 2-15 cwt., and 1-30 cwt. The latter has two tanks for gasoline.

The detail consisted of Sgt. Ivan Fletcher, Corp. Frank Shine, Corp Dawson, L. Corp Harold Webb, L. Corp Caravaggie, and Pte. Cliff Cruikshank.

Eventually this unit will have a great many more trucks and will also have several motorcycles.

YOUNG HUSBANDS FIND WIVES INCLINED TO EXCLUDE THEIR OLD FRIENDS

Girls Make Mistake and Have Themselves to Blame When Hubby Stays Out Nights.

Among my friends is a splendid woman who has run a boarding house for many years that she has made a real home for innumerable boys who have come to the city to seek their fortunes. Recently I was paying her a visit when one of these young men, who was going to be married that evening, came in to say good-bye to her.

"I can never thank you enough for all you have done for me," he said to her, his voice breaking with emotion. "I can never forget how you mothered me when I was a lonely, frightened, homesick, country boy who had just come from his mother's funeral; or how you held me to my job when I was so discouraged I was ready to throw up my hands and quit, and gave me the courage and strength to fight on and make something of myself; or how you steered me away from bad company without my realizing it; or how your nursed me when I was sick and took care of me during those awful months when I was out of work and would have been a bum on the streets except for you. You have been more than a mother to me, and I love you as much as any son could.

"I have told Sally again and again about all you have done for me, and that I owe all I am to you, and she is going to love you as I do, and there is always going to be a room in our house that is just especially for you."

The boy kissed her good-bye with a tenderness that filled my own eyes with tears, and when he had gone my friend turned to me with a smile that was both ironic and sad. "So many boys have said these same things to me. They did love me. And they know so little of women that they really believed that their wives would feel about me as they did, and that I would be a familiar figure in their homes. But I know better.

"I knew that if I ever crashed Tom's, or Dick's or Harry's door, his bride would give me a welcome so frigid it would freeze the marrow in my bones, and I further knew she would twit him with knowing such PECULIAR people, and that every time he came to see me she would make such scenes that he would finally give up coming at all.

"In my business you learn a lot about human nature, and one of thing is that a man's marriage raises an impassable barrier between him and his old friends."

Strange Peculiarity of Marriage Relationship

And it is true. And it is one of the strangest peculiarities of the marriage relationship that men almost universally accept their wives' friends cordially and make them welcome in their homes, while ninety-nine wives out of a hundred refuse to have anything to do with their husbands' old friends, either male or female. And if friends have the hardihood to accept a husband's invitation to the house that a wife considers exclusively her property, they are fed such an amount of cold shoulder that they never come again.

In deed, the first act of nearly every bride's married life is to begin to separate her husband from his old cronies, and so successful is she in her efforts that by the time the average married couple are middle-aged the husband's old pals have been completely eliminated, and they are surrounded by his wife's old school mates and club members and bridge partners. Many a man has to be introduced to the guests at his own table.

The wife does not ostracize her husband's old friends because they are boors, or uncouth, or dull and tiresome, or dissipated, or deadbeats, or socially unacceptable. It is just the same if they are brilliant and fascinating, writers, artists, musicians, travellers who have had thrilling adventures, or just the simple, honest faithful people who are so dear because they are so true and loyal. The wife is allergic to them all.

Why young wives should have this instinctive aversion to their husbands' former friends and why they should suspicion that every woman, even though she is old enough to be their grandmother, has designs upon them, no one knows, unless it can be explained upon the theory that women are monopolists by nature and cannot bear to think that their husbands have ever had any life in which they were not a part, or had any interest in anyone but themselves. It is part of the jealousy that makes so many wives resent their husband's love for the mothers who bore them, and do everything in their power to separate them from their mothers.

A Sad State of Affairs

Needless to say that the wife who shuts the door in the faces of all her husband's old friends makes a crucial mistake, for while he may give in to her petty tryanny to keep peace between them and to save his friends from the mortification of being snubbed, he neither forgives nor forgets her offence against him, and when she drives them away she drives him away from her also. Many a wife who wonders why her husband never wants to stay at home of an evening could find the answer in the fact that she does not permit him to have his old friends in his own house.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, April 21

An exceptionally lively and eventful day is forecast from the predominant planetary configurations. Under the acute stimulus of the intellectual faculties as well as commercial insight and ingenuity all affairs should be due to move along as a very high tempo and with gratifying success. All pertaining to travel, change, communications, writing, publicity, advertising and promotional enterprises. The interest and cooperation of those in influential positions, as well as in public office, may be counted upon.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of liveliness, progress and productivity with things moving under unusual stimuli of the mind and nerve forces, inciting to travel, change, new ventures, especially where writing, publicity and promotional enterprise figure. Young people should be particularly brilliant, witty and ambitious to engineer large projects, and have support from elders, superiors and those in high places.

A child born on this day should be versatile, adaptable and resourceful with excellent mentality as well as commercial acumen. It could make a brilliant success in literary, professional, legal or commercial life.

Sofa Revived by a New Slip Cover

Made By Quick Pin-on Method

A glossily dark, brightly printed new slip cover does wonders for your old sofa's morale! It picks up the spirits of beholders and sitters, too!

You can make it easily the pin-on way. You just pin pieces of fabric directly to the sofa, snip off the excess material and sew piece to piece.

To start, remove cushions and pin fabric to top-back with big pins. Pin it down over the inside-back and seat of one section, allowing 4 inches for tuck-in between. Then trim around all the pins, leaving 1½ inches for seams.

Now, working in the very same way, pin and trim other pieces of fabric to fit other back-and-seat sections — and do likewise for front arms, sides, back and cushions. Pin piece to piece, remove to baste, then try on.

Finish with a deep, gathered flounce—or a smart stiff one with corner kick-pleats.

Our 32-page booklet diagrams each step in making and trimming slip covers for chairs, sofas, auto seats. Has directions for barrel and channel-back chairs; includes frilly and tailored cover styles. Suggests colors, fabrics.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "How to Make Slip Covers" to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

STRIP SIDE SUITS FIRST

FULL effectiveness of some card combinations cannot be assured unless you get the opponents to lead that suit. This is so when you have the ace and king opposite each other in your hand and dummy, with the queen and jack missing, but also possess the cards immediately below them. Then a single lead of the suit by the opponents assures you three top tricks in it. Likewise, if they hold the queen, jack and ten, one of them having four cards, a single lead of the suit by them gives you three of the four tricks in the suit.

North: ♠ A K 10 / ♥ Q 5 4 / ♦ A 9 7 3 / ♣ 9 7 3

West: ♠ 8 7 6 4 3 2 / ♥ A / ♦ 6 / ♣ K Q J 6 2

East: ♠ Q J 9 / ♥ 8 3 2 / ♦ Q J 10 4 / ♣ 8 5 4

South: ♠ 5 / ♥ K J 10 9 7 6 / ♦ K 8 5 2 / ♣ A 10

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1♥	1♠	Dbl	Pass
1 NT	2♣	Pass	2♠
3♥	Pass	5♥

North's slam invitation of 5-Hearts was made at two duplicate tables on this deal, and refused by South, who had to do his work right in order to make the contract. At each table West launched the defense with the club K to the A and then South tossed his remaining club on two top spades. Then the play differed, one declarer making the contract and the other being set.

The unsuccessful South next sent a heart to the A, ruffed the returned club, took two more hearts, then broke the diamonds. He led the 2 to the 9, taken by the 10. East returned the spade Q for a heart ruff, and the diamond 5 was led to the A. The 7 was covered by the J and K, but then the 8 lost the setting trick to the Q.

The winning declarer did what was necessary by eliminating both spades and clubs before breaking the diamonds, so that East would have nothing to return but a diamond at the end. To the fourth trick he led the spade 10 and trumped, then the heart 6 to the A. After ruffing the club J, he sent another heart to the Q and ruffed the club 9. The heart K drew East's last trump, leaving him only diamonds. Now the diamond 2 to the 9 was won by the 10. No matter what East returned now, the declarer would get the rest of the tricks. East selected the Q, which was won by the A, leaving a tenace of the K-8 over the Q-4, so that the finesse was a winner.

South: ♠ 9 8 7 3 / ♥ A K 4 3 / ♦ A K 2 / ♣ A J

If East leads the spade K, A and 2 against North's 4-Spades on this deal, how should declarer play to take an extra trick?

Ontario Ready To Advise On Soya Beans

TORONTO, April 20. — Farmers interested in soya bean production—and the number of inquiries about planting, harvesting, and use at the Department of Agriculture, at Queen's Park, indicates a widespread interest—are advised by agricultural officers to write to the Agricultural Supply Board, Ottawa, for the special soya bean pamphlet in the wartime production series.

The vital question of seed has been given study by the Provincial Department and within a matter of days every county agricultural representative in the soya bean areas will be provided with a list of growers who have seed for sale.

An even more exhaustive pamphlet upon soya beans in Ontario has been prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The Federal one, listed as a "Special Pamphlet," is linked, however, to the wartime production program and gives all the essential information. Inasmuch as seeding time is about the time that corn is seeded, or a little before, there is still plenty of opportunity for farmers to get what seed supplies as are available.

While there are many varieties grown, the Ottawa publication lists seven which have been developed for climatic conditions in Canada.

Cultivation and harvesting may be performed with ordinary farm implements, according to instructions given by the two departments. It is stated that for seed production rows spaced 28 to 30 inches apart give the best results and from 30 to 40 pounds per acre are required. For hay the beans are sown in drills six to seven inches apart at about one and one-half to two bushels to the acre. The seeds are sown about the same depth as corn and the ordinary grain drill is used.

Harvesting, for seed, is done normally with the grain binder and threshing may be done satisfactorily with the ordinary grain separator, on condition that the speed of the cylinder is reduced and that blank concaves or pea grates are used.

Trent Bowlers Plan Program

HASTINGS, April 20.—(ENS). — Club officials expect that the gasoline rationing will have a beneficial rather than an adverse effect on the activities of lawn bowling in Hastings. People will be staying at home rather than tearing around the countryq, commented C. A. Putnam at a meeting of the executive Wednesday night.

Because of the existing gas conditions it was decided to await the action of the other clubs before joining the Trent Valley Bowling League, as has been the custom of previous years. Clubs in this circuit last year were: Brighton, Campbellford, Warkworth, Norwood, Havelock and Hastings.

An effort will be made to revive the ladies' section of the local club, which has been nearly dormant for the past two years.

The secretary, H. G. Fairman, was instructed to interview the ladies with regard to their membership and prospective plans for the season. At a later date a joint meeting of both executives will be held.

H. G. Fairman also reported that $35 remains to be paid on the local club house and to take care of this, it was decided to hold a euchre party in the near future.

Committees appointed were; Games, H. Fairman, D. Scriver, T. A. Coughlan, S Stevenson; Greens, Dr. W. N Campbell, L. E. Kelley, H. Edwards; Tournament, W. Wellman, Arthur Fleming, W. H. Kumpf, C. A. Putnam, R. Burnham.

With a larger membership than ever anticipated, Stanley Stevenson, the president, reported that more local and 'jitney' tournaments will be staged this year to keep the members at home, thus saving gasoline.

At this juncture the meeting adjourned, with all the members anxious to see how Toronto was faring in their championship N.H.L. contest with Detroit.

Plan Conference On Stewardship

A Peterborough man in discussing the Interchurch Area Conference on Stewardship which is being held in George Street United Church on Tuesday, when Rev. J. E. Simpson of Chicago will be the speaker, had the following to say.

"The reason more people do not believe the saying 'It's more blessed to give than to receive' is because so few try it—that is try it consistently and in volume. Actually it is a fact. A man said to me recently that seven years ago he started in to tithe his givings and from that time on all his needs had been adequately met—and he never had been so prosperous. This is from the material standpoint only—but looking at it from the ethical or spiritual standpoint, those who try out considerable giving, get peace and satisfaction out of it, far and beyond any mere tangible reward.

"Nothing is more humiliating or distressing than to hear a minister pleading for money from a congregation, and nothing is more inconsistent than the fact that almost without exception the church is staggering under a debt which kills enthusiasm and makes membership anything but a joy.

"If you want to correctly estimate what you should give to your church, ask yourself 'what would I take and forever forego the benefits of Christianity'—then you will begin to give properly.

"If you have a nickle and dime preacher, then five and ten cent contributions are alright. But you haven't! I've been around over half a century and I have never yet seen a nickle and dime preacher. There isn't such a person. If your preacher stepped into the pulpit next Sunday and simply and sincerely repeated the 23rd Psalm, it would be worth a dollar of any man's money, to hear it."

Help For Burma

LONDON, April 20—(CP).—Britain has reinforced her troops in Burma with an armored brigade and an Indian infantry brigade since the opening of the campaign there and "there is no question of the British army withdrawing and handing the job to the Chinese," a military commentator said today.

Some sources said, however, that the Chinese, with greater opportunities for reinforcement than Britain, might temporarily relieve portions of the British forces when militarily convenient.

Big Run Made In Chickens On Farm Market

"If there's a shortage of roast beef, let's have roast chicken," some score of home folks must have said on Saturday, for they didn't leave a feather on the produce market, and most of the white meat was gone by 11 o'clock.

"I brought in thirty-nine," said one woman from Bailieboro way. "Twenty-seven of them were broilers and the rest were less than a year old, definitely roasters, and I've just got that one left. Take it, if you want it."

The reporter did not want it, but probably some one else came along presently and bought it, because there wasn't much left on the market by that time. That woman's prices were 32 cents for broilers, 30 for pullets and 27 cents for a third grade.

Another woman said: "I've sold twenty-six so far, and I got 35 cents a pound for the broilers, about three months old, and I have just those couple left."

And still another related: "A woman looked at the only pullet I had left, and said she'd look around. She was back in about five minutes but that last one was gone."

The price range for chickens was 27 cents to 35 cents a pound, and everything sold. Some of the year olds or thereabouts weighed from 5 to 6½ pounds.

Butter was 37 and 38 cents, and eggs were all the way from 26 cents to 40. The largest grades sold at 37 cents to 40 cents a dozen, but the bulk of the sales were 28 to 30 cents. Eggs seemed plentiful.

One woman had five or six bunches of hepaticas, first of the wild flowers of the 1942 blooming.

"I picked them yeterday evening after supper. My hands were chilled by the time I got back to the house."

You couldn't ask the price of such May flowers, as they are commonly named, not when they involve that kind of work. They do not fit into a commercial category, and you simply cannot equate their fragile beauty into some nominal price.

And then from hepaticas to 'spuds' and young porkers, such is the pattern of some farming, and in it perhaps the strands of pigs and potatoes are brightest, especially when taxes are due and fertilizer and new machinery and the other essentials have to be paid for.

Prices were generally unchanged outdors. Maple syrup was $2.75 a gallon. Young porkers $6 to $7 each. White Star potatoes $2; Rural New Yorkers likewise $2, or 40 cents a peck.

Certified Irish Cobblers for seed purposes were $2.25, also Katahdins at that price. New Brunswick Green Mountains for table use $2 a bag.

Norman Moncrief was still passing out Stark apples at 60 cents a peck. Arthur Stinson's vegetables of last year's crop were most parsnips at 25 cents a six-quart basket, Cobbler potatoes at $1.75, and turnips, 75 cents a bushel.

APSLEY

War Service Club Preparing Quilts

APSLEY, April 20—(ENS).—The Apsley War Service Club met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Don Newberry. The sewing committee reported all the quilt patches out and given out, with one quilt already sent to the bombed victims together with six other quilts and three layettes. Three woollen sets for babies were sent in ready for another shipment, also four pairs of socks and many other knitted garments. A salvage campaign was planned for next week and another for later on. A letter was drafted and will be sent to many householders outside of the village. Mrs. W. Lean and Mrs. Smith will put together a quilt top donated by Mrs. R. Scott. The meeting closed with prayer for the soldiers and a social time was enjoyed, during which the hostess served lunch.

Miss Iris Smith has returned after a week's holiday spent in Peterborough.

$100,000 Fire Sweeps Omemee Tannery

War Industry Falls Prey To Flames At Omemee Village

Three men narrowly escaped death, in a disastrous fire at the North American Leather Company, Omemee, on Monday night, when damage estimated at $100,000 was done to the big plant, throwing 96 men out of work. At TOP is a camera shot looking east through the ruins of the structure, with heaps of semi-processed hides in the foreground. At BOTTOM LEFT is a picture of the plant from highway 7 looking south. At BOTTOM RIGHT, Provincial Constable Lloyd McClure is chatting with Art Duggan, mechanic (Centre), who went back to rescue his fellow-worker Roland Clifford (Right) who was thought to have been trapped but who escaped from the smoke-filled third storey without assistance. (McGillen—Staff Photos.)

OMEMEE, April 21 (By Staff Reporter)—Fire raged through the plant of the North American Leather Company at Omemee on Monday night, doing damage in excess of $100,000, and threw 96 men out of employment, in the most spectacular blaze in the history of this village which nestles on the banks of the Pigeon River, 12 miles north-west of Peterborough.

Believed to have started from a welder's torch, the fire gained headway rapidly when the flames burst into three long tunnels used for drying hides, and through which air was being induced by a series of suction fans. The fire was first noticed on the second floor of the building, near the boiler room, and in a short time, the dry pine, wax and hides, all highly inflammable, had converted a portion of the building into an inferno.

Under pressure of wartime needs, the plant was operating on staggered shifts, and besides this, workmen were modernizing the building, placing concrete and steel pillars, throughout the building, and tearing the old frame structure away as they made progress. Thus they did not interfere with production, and more than half of the main building had thus been treated during the past two years.

"I think the fire started from a welder's torch, when he was welding a rod on an 'I' beam, at a spot where we were finishing off the flooring and the roof of a section left over from last year," Charles Shaw, general manager of the company, said.

Workmen Feared Trapped.

Fire started just at a quarter to six, and it travelled so rapidly that it was believed some of the workmen on the third floor had been trapped, but all got out safely, although many of them were almost overcome by smoke fighting the blaze. The employees did heroic work, and their efforts prevented the flames from spreading into rolling loft and shipping room, and also the eastern part of the main building.

The old portion of the plant at the extreme west of the property was the first to go, and the flames demolished the boiler house and the store room directly south of the boiler house where hides and tanning chemicals were stored. Then it raced along the ground floor, over huge vats filled with hides, through the second storey where the drying tunnels were, and also through the third floor where the wet leather was being hung. A portion of the beam house at the south end of the plant was saved.

Workmen gave Norman Ruttle, plant superintendent, credit for cutting the power in the plant, and shutting off the fans which were

Go For One Last Fling Protesting Food Roundup Upsets Port

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT April 21 — (CP). — Several hundred soldiers walked off their ship a few hours before she sailed when the latest Canadian contingent left this port for Britain and many of them later were rounded up by other Canadian troops.

According to their own stories and other accounts available here, the men apparently became dissatisfied with their food and quarters and went ashore without permission for one last "fling" before going overseas. The men said their only idea was to have a bit of fun and that they did not realize their action might have serious repercussions.

A number of men who were not rounded up until too late to catch the ship are still being held in custody here. But the great majority, most of whom returned to the dock voluntarily, were included in the contingent whose arrival in Britain was announced on Sunday.

The roundup was staged with military precision. Lorries rushed fully-equipped soldiers of a local detachment to various vantage spots.

Scores of soldiers were questioned in the streets and their credentials were examined. Traffic was halted at some intersections to allow detachments of armed soldiers to pass

Churchill Backs Combined Staff

LONDON, April 21.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill has approved a plan to organize a combined operations staff, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said today.

Agitation for such a general staff, which would integrate Britain's army, navy and air force as one huge combat team, developed in influential cricles with continued reverses in the Pacific war.

The London Times declared only last week:

"The conviction that something is fundamentally lacking in co-ordination of the three fighting services has steadily gained ground in the present war and was never more widely held than now."

The spokesman said today that the outline of an organization for joint war planning, or a chief of staffs committee, would be issued later today or tmorrow.

The announcement closely followed conferences of Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff, and Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's representative, with military and political leaders of Britain.

Nazi Leaders Worried Say Captives

Main German Army Reservists Over 30 Due To Russian Toll

By EDDIE GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

KUIBYSHEV, April 21.—(AP)—With the front a morass of mud and slush, the big armies on Russia's western front continued their occasionally fierce but essentially local operations today without any material change of positions.

Most significant factor in the general situation was the Russian-reported statement of a Nazi captive, a Major Bittner of the 900th transport group, who pointed out that a British threat is hanging over the German high command in the west and that hopes are not bright among German officers for a big Spring offensive.

This captives was said to have borne out previous Russian assertions that Hitler's projected Spring drive is now a projected Summer offensive. Thousands of encircled German troops have not been allowed to have a day of rest, he declared.

Eugene Varga, director of the International Institute of Economics and Politics, declared in Pravda that the main force of the German army no longer is youth but reservists over 30 with families, an assertion that is borne out by the prisoners which foreign correspondents have seen.

Only Cavalry Active

Cavalry activity and raiding parties from both sides were reported. On the front beyond Kalinin, north-west of Moscow, Red army mounted troops attacked a long road important to the Germans for serving their front line and captured two villages astride the highway.

Chinese, British Chase Japs From Oil Field

LONDON, April 21.—(CP).— Recapture of the Burmese oil centre of Yenangyaung by Chinese troops operating with British armored units was confirmed to-day by a British communique issued at New Delhi.

In Chungking, Chinese forces which recaptured the oil centre of Yenangyaung relieved 7,000 encircled British and Indian troops and 100 supply trucks, an army spokesman said to-day.

After relieving the British and Indian forces, the Chinese fought with their Allies under British command drove three miles south of Yenangyaung through the rubble of burned oil wells to which the torch had been appplied.

Severe fighting with the Japanese still is in progress, the spokesman said.

The Chinese moved into the British sector at the request of their Allies' commanders, the spokesman added. One Chinese battalion commander was killed leading his troops in the capture of Yenangyaung.

The fury of the Burma fighting continued unabated tloughout last week and fiercer battles are expected, the army spokesman said. The morale of the Chinese forces, who have fought for a month with little air support, is said to be high.

"Field dispatches assure us they are as determined as ever to check the enemy's advance," the spokesman saaid. "The British who have been hard pressed even longer, certainy deserve succor in the form of more adequate air support."

Midland Strike Waits On Ottawa

MIDLAND, Ont., April 21—(CP).—Spokesmen for strikers at the Midland shipyards today had received no reply from Bryce M. Stewart, Deputy Labor Minister, in reply to their telegram Sunday asking clarification of his order to return to work or become liable to prosecution under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

In Ottawa Dr. Bryce M. Stewart, Deputy Minister of Labor, said today he does not intend to reply to a telegram sent to him Sunday by strikers at the Midland (Ont.) shipyards, asking clarification of his order.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 21—(CP).—Number of employees reporting for work at the Kingston Shipbuilding Company yards here was listed today in a company statement at 63, compared with 83 yesterday and a total of 360 normally employed. The strike began yesterday.

The 297 employees on strike in sympathy with strikers at Midland Shipards held a meeting this morning and decided to continue the sympathy walkout until the Midland dispute is settled. Work at the yards is at a standstill.

4 Tough Allies India Assured

NEW DELHI, India, April 21 (CP)—Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell assured the people of India in a broadcast today that "you have on your side four of the toughest and most enduring races of the world—the British, the Chinese, the Russians and the Americans."

The commander in chief warned that India's immediate danger is from air attack, but added that he did not believe the Japanese would be able to bomb Indian cities "on anything approaching the scale of intensity or continuity of the German attacks on Great Britain or our air attacks on Germany."

Raid Mystery Works Havoc on Jap Nerves

Allied Silence Worries Tokyo Lest Blow Fall Again From Secret Base

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

The world-wide mystery which has developed out of the bombing of Japan by warplanes which the Nipponese identify as American, but haven't the foggiest notion where the machines came from, is the best possible illustration of why military information frequently has to be withheld from the general public.

You wouldn't believe it possible that a fleet of warplanes could bomb several of the principal cities of Japan in broad daylight without it becoming known almost immediately what bases the machines came from. Yet on this fourth day since the assault, the little men of Nippon still were squinting at the skies in all directions, and beating their foreheads before the images of the great Buddha, in an effort to solve this nerve-torturing puzzle which has kept them sounding air-raid warnings right up to today.

Even the Allied peoples have been dependent on Japan for such news as they have had on this sensational event. The Japs say the planes came from aircraft carriers, but they have contradicted themselves so many times that it's patent they've been lying like troopers in an effort to get Allied governments to talk and give away the show.

London newspapers have thought the planes might have come from the Aleutian Islands, laid their eggs over the Mikado's preserves, and then flown to China. An Italian paper guessed the machines came from bases in Soviet Russia, secretly ceded to the United States.

But nobody has known just what has happened—except the people responsbile for the raid. And it doesn't take great perspicacity to see how valuable all this mystery is to the raiders. It gave them a chance to reach their bases safely, and if those bases happened to be aircraft carriers, as the Japs seem to think, it has given the ships an opportunity to get out of danger.

More to the point, so long as the enemy doesn't learn how this coup was executed, the same plan can be used again. Then there is a further advantage of silence: It's a great breeder of war-nerves among the enemy. Indications are that a wide section of the Nipponese population is suffering from a new malady which it is hoped will become famous as Japanese Jitters.

From the military standpoint this raid is likely to have the effect of tieing up warplanes and warships for home protection at a crucial moment when the Japs need this equipment for their various offensives.

As to the possibility of using Alaska as a base for bombing Japan, it is certain right to say that Alaska is a base of growing importance. Planes and other equipment are there, and while it isn't permitted to discuss this in detail it is logical to assume that striking power in Alaska will be increased rapidly.

Delivery Breach Costs Licenses

TORONTO, April 21 — (CP). — Seizure of motor vehicle licence plates belonging to a large Toronto retail grocery firm was announced today by Services Administrator James Stewart of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in a statement which said the company "had persistently violated the ruling limiting deliveries to one a day."

Mr. Stewart said the board's action was the first taken in Canada under the recent order and was taken under the authority given the board under the War Measures Act. He did not name the company.

He said that several complaints were registered regarding this retailer making more than one delivery a day over the same route and the proprietor of the firm had been warned, "but he persisted in making as many deliveries as he saw fit, each day."

Mr. Stewart said the licence plates have been seized for an indefinite period and the firm also was prohibited using automotive equipment owned by other persons for delivery of his goods.

Just No Delivery

Toronto, April 21 (CP)

JAMES STEWART, services administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said today the board's order prohibiting deliveries of parcels and valued at less than $1 applies to all types of deliveries, whether by motorized vehicles, bicycles or on foot.

The ruling does not apply to fresh meat or fish, or when illness or disability confines the purchaser to his home. Deliveries of freight, express and parcel post also are not affected.

G.E. Is Planning Huge War Output

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., April 21—(AP).—General Electric Company expects to produce approximately $1,000,000,000 worth of highly diversified war materials this year, President Charles E. Wilson said today.

Wilson, in a statement at the annual stockholders' meeting, said last month's output was at an annual basis of $860,000,000 "without the benefit of new plants not yet in operation and without complete use of recently added facilities."

"Notwithstanding the magnitude of the tasks we so suddenly assumed," he said, "I am happy to report that in practically every important item production is meeting the victory program schedules set by the service departments of the government.

"In a number of outstanding items, production is considerably ahead of schedule requirements."

Elizabeth's Girlhood Over

16th Birthday In National Service As Guide

LONDON, April 21 (CP)—Princess Elizabeth's 16th birthday today marked the end of girlhood for the talented young lady who some day may be Britain's Queen.

Now, her parents have decided, the time has come for her to assume the responsibilities of royalty.

Even for the heiress-presumptive to the throne, the 16th birthday brings wartime responsibilities in embattled Britain and Elizabeth must register under the government youth service scheme the same as any other 16-year-old.

But Elizabeth, elder daughter of the King and Queen, will not be interviewed and advised on a training plan. She is a Girl Guide and thus already has been fitted into the government plan for national service.

Elizabeth's first public engagement was a birthday reception to 460 officers and men of the Grenadier Guards.

The tall, fair-haired Princess in whom many see a resemblance to her grandmother, Queen Mary, was appointed the regiment's honorary colonel in chief several weeks ago and one of her birthday gifts was a diamond brooch in the shape of the Grenadier's shield from the officers and men of the regiment.

Peary Bombed Everywhere

At Manila, Indies, By Aussies in Mistake off Darwin

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP)—John Raleigh, CBS correspondent in a broadcast from Australia, said today that the United States destroyer Peary, announced by the United States to have been sunk Feb. 19 at Darwin when the Japanese scored five direct bomb hits, previously had been bombed by the Australians by mistake.

As she was nearing Darwin after undergoing many bombs at Manila and in the Indies, Raleigh said, "Australian planes mistook the Peary for an enemy craft and bombed her."

"Her fire control and fore masts were carried away by direct hits," he said. "The ship though frantically signalling, did not fire back at the Allies, who honestly believed the vessel an enemy one.

"Finally, a bomb fell on the after deck, setting afire the ammunition stacked beside four-inch guns. A seaman rushed to the danger spot and hurled the shell cases, afire, overboard. For this he was awarded the Navy Cross."

The Peary finally reached Darwin, short-handed because mosquitoes nesting in green camouflage used in the islands had infected 25 men with malaria. A new fire control apparatus was on its way when the Japanese made their final attack successful, Raleigh said.

Back To Land Plan On For Veterans

Vocational Training Measure Also Before Commons

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, April 21—(CP).—The beginnings of a limited back-to-the-land movement for soldiers, sailors and airmen of the present war are before the House of Commons today.

A general outline of the proposed movement was given the House last night by Pensions Minister Mackenzie in moving for the introduction of the Veterans' Land Act, one of two far-reaching measures relating to both war and post-war problems with which the House dealt on the first day of the resumed session.

The other was Labor Minister Mitchell's bill to provide for vocational training projects which received first reading.

While the veterans' land measure is primarily to assist in re-establishing fighting men after the war the vocational training measure has the two-fold purpose of providing more skilled workers for war industry and equipping people for gainful employment in the post-war period.

The settlement of soldiers on land is to be limited because careful supervision is to be exercised over the choice of men who can be expected to succeed as farmers. They will be required to pay 10 per cent. of the cost of their land, buildings, machinery and livestock and may receive a grant of one-third of the remainder of the initial cost. The other two-thirds is to be repayable over a 25-year period with interest at 3½ per cent. per annum.

Outbursts Numerous.

The House started off after the Easter recess in a somewhat truculent frame of mind. Clashes between the Government and the Opposition were frequent. A full dress division was staged on a motion for production of communications between the Government and an aircraft manufacturing concern which Munitions Minister Howe declined to produce. The motion was defeated by 80 to 34.

Conservative Leader Hanson was called to order when Finance Minister Ilsley objected to his criticizing the price ceiling administration on the vocational training bill. Mr. Ilsley said Mr. Hanson wa[illegible] trying through on foot. Restaurants and hotels were visited and guards were placed at railway stations and highway exits. At the request of military authorities, liquor stores were closed while the search was in progress.

Convoy Doesn't Wait.

As they were found the men were taken to a central square and returned to the docks in trucks. Their ship had pulled out into the stream shortly after the walkoff, but those who got back in time were taken aboard before she sailed. However, the convoy could not wait for all to return and when the ship sailed quite a few were still ashore.

Whether any action has been taken or will be taken to punish the men has not been announced. According to all accounts available here, however, the affair started simply enough and the men had no intention of deserting. Many came here after long train rides from the West and said they were taken immediately aboard ship where, they said their quarters were cramped and dirty. They wanted better accommodations and they criticized the food.

For these reasons, one of the men said, they decided they would take things in their own hands and go ashore for "one good tuckout of Canadian grub and a little something to drink." So several hundred of the men walked down the gangplank, past the amazed and outnumbered dock guards, and marched in orderly fashion into the business section.

Several months ago a group of airmen were involved in a similar incident at this port.

Ship Below Standard.

OTTAWA, April 21.—(CP).—Defence Minister Ralston said to-day that "corrective action" is being taken and that he is confident there should be no excuse for a repetition of an "isolated incident" in which some 400 soldiers recently walked off the ship on which they were being embarked for England, in protest against the rations and quarters allotted them.

About 135 of those who walked off the vessel, the Minister said, did not get back to the dock in time to go aboard before the ship sailed, and "disciplinary action has been taken."

Col Ralston said conditions aboard the ship "no doubt were not up to the standard of troopships." The views of his department were being put very clearly before United Kingdom authorities "in order to prevent a recurrence of conditions so far as transports are concerned."

"At the same time," he said, "we are making certain changes in the embarkation and troop conducting system with particular reference to troops which are not in organized units."

The Princesses and the Queen wore suits of blue wool cut on wartime utility lines.

New Jap Landing On Panay Widens Fight

By CLARK LEE
Associated Press Staff Writer

U.S. Army Headquarters in Australia, April 21 (AP)—The Japanese have made a new landing on Panay at San Jose, west coast town 40 miles west of Iloilo, and hostilities continue on both Panay and Cebu, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today in his first communique for the southwest Pacific area.

Reports from Port Moresby, United Nations' base on New Guinea, said nine heavy Japanese planes escorted by six fighters made a raid there today but that their formations were broken up by anti-aircraft fire and Royal Australian Air Force fighters.

Allied airmen were said to have made ranging attacks from Australian bases against Kupang, Netherlands Timor, Rabaul, New Britain, and Salamaua, New Guinea, during the week-end.

"The enemy continued intermittent shelling and bombing of Corregidor with negligible effect; enemy artillery action is abating," said the communique of the Philippine's Manila Bay theatre.

"Harbor defences registered hits on enemy troop movements."

Aggressive action was said to have been taken by American-Filipino patrols on the southern island of Mindanao.

Two Japanese planes were shot down and at least two damaged incident to the week-end raids against Japanese shipping, wharves, airdromes and transport services.

"I can assure you with confidence of the qaulity of the troops who defend India. I can assure you without any hesitation that the ultimate victory against the brutality and aggression of the Axis powers is beyond doubt."

Sheep, 200; good to choice, 85 to 98 lbs, $13.00 to mostly $13.25.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 21 — (CP). — Cattle trade was active with prices steady to strong up to mid-session on the Livestock Market here today. Veal calves and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. No lambs were offered. Unsold from yesterday was 210 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle, 800; calves, 625; hogs, 975; sheep 15.

Weighty steers sold strong at mostly $10 to $11, with some tops $11.25; butcher steers and heifers, $9 to $10.50; fed calves, $10 to $11.50; butcher cows strong, $6 to $8; bulls, $8 to $9, and a few stockers, $8 to $9.50.

Choice veal calves sold at $14 to $15, with other grades selling downward to $8.

Sheep sold at $5 to $7.50.

Hogs closed previously at $15.05 to $15.15 dressedweight at yards or plants.

The heaviest cattle supply in two weeks, that cleared fairly well under the buying of local and outside packers, butchers and some Americans on the Toronto Livestock Market yesterday brightened the outlook of stopping any possible acute beef shortage in this city. It was the most active session for cattle trading in weeks, and prices were strong at last week's 25-cent advance.

Yesterday's cattle run was still below normal and did not assure liberal beef supplies for the local trade, but it was felt that if the improved trend of cattle receipts continues, there will be enough of this meat for everybody. Men connected with the livestock trade could not say whether this marked a turning point in the short beef supply, but pointed out that yesterday's buying activity at strong prices by packers might encourage another fairly good run for today" trading.

No reason could be found for the enlarged cattle shipments or for the revived demand from the packers. Although rumors of cattle control were heard, as yet the Government has taken no action to speed the flow of cattle to domestic markets.

Veal Calves Regain Loss

Veal calves regained a 50-cent loss of the morning trade, while lambs advanced 25 cents, and hogs and sheep held steady.

Minor local trades in oats and barley were noted in the coarse grain pit. Rye was inactive.

The company yesterday pleaded guilty to the charge in connection with the recent publication of an article by the Vancouver Sun dealing with Pacific coast defence. Five other similar charges were withdrawn by the Crown.

The charge to which a guilty plea was entered was laid under Section 16 of the Defence of Canada Regulations. It alleged that on March 13 the Sun Publishing Company "did in a manner likely to be prejudicial to the efficient prosecution of the war, publish a newspaper containing certain information purporting to be information with respect to armament, equipment and condition of certain of His Majesty's forces, to wit, forces defending the Pacific coast of Canada, contrary to the Defence of Canada Regulations."

F. R. Anderson, defence counsel, submitted that all statements contained in the article had been made public previously. He quoted statements regarding coast defence made by Howard Green, Conservative member of parliament for Vancouver-Point Grey in the House of Commons.

Defence counsel claimed that since publication of the article the defences of "this coast had been strengthened considerably," and he added: "If the defences were adequate at the time of publication of the article, then why the big increase?"

He said the article was "intended to convey inadequacy, to arouse the public and to urge a strengthening of the defence of this coast."

C. H. Locke, counsel for the prosecution, asked the maximum penalty of $500.

Obituary

MICHAEL O'NEILL

Michael O'Neill, aged 66, a life long resident of Emily township died very suddenly at his home at King's Wharf today. Mr. O'Neill had been up and had his breakfast and apparently returned to his bedroom when he was suddenly stricken and was found later by the family.

Mr. O'Neill was born on the farm where he died and he was a highly respected citizen of the district. For some time his health has been none too good but he was not thought to be critically ill.

He is survived by his wife formerly Clara Dorgan, five sons, Emmett and Stanley of Toronto, Elmer of Parry Sound and Oscar and Albert at home; two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Whibbs of Toronto and Mrs. Bernard O'Leary of Lindsay, one brother William O'Neill of Downeyville, and two sisters, Mrs. Edward O'Houlihan of Downeyville and Mrs. Patrick Milloy of Lindsay.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from his farm residence to St. Luke's Church with interment in St. Luke's cemetery.

Talk On China Delights Big Audience

PORT HOPE, April 21—(ENS).—The Easter thankoffering meeting of the Evening Auxiliary W.M.S. of the United Church took place on Monday night at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Gordon with some forty members present. A number of the afternoon Women's Missionary Society members were present also. Mrs. George Ward, the president, was in the chair.

In the absence of Mrs. Currie, the recording secretary's report was read by Miss Bown, who also read the financial report of a balance in the bank of $66.68, while the Easter thank offering envelopes at this meeting contained $15.75.

A lovely layette was displayed, the work of the Auxiliary ladies, and Mrs. Trott in her report gave the allocation which had been given this group for the bale: 1 complete layette, good used clothing for men, girls' coats and serveral articles such as would do for Christmas cheer.

The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. Chas. Stephenson. She said it is the duty of the women of the church to influence the youth from the cradle up through the years till they are trained to carry Christ's work to their juniors. Mrs. Shaw followed with a prayer.

Miss Vivian Jennings sang "God's Garden" by Frank Lambert, very sweetly. She was accompanied by Mrs. Gordon Garnett at the piano.

Mrs. R. B. Baxter's group had charge of this meeting and at this time Mrs. Baxter introduced Mrs. J. W. Foote as guest speaker. Mrs. Foote's subject was "China."

Mrs. Foote opened her address with the remarks that it is of the greatest importance for women to find time in these busy days to read and study and one of the ways to keep up mental activity is in missionary work.

An intelligent conception of Missionary work gives many angles of study including the country, its people, its traditions, background, pioneer days, people's characteristics and many others.

Mrs. Foote dated her address back to 1911, the date of the revolution when Sun Yat Sen introduced a new government. Up till this time education had been only for a few and the people had no share in the government. She said pioneering along this line was very slow as the Chinese are slow to change and that one of their strong characteristics is endurance which is clearly shown since Japan attacked China in 1930.

Also told was how at first the foreign Missionaries were very opposed, then tolerated and finally how Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his wife visited the missionaries in the different mission fields and asked their co-operation for the general welfare of China. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, who is now one of the outstanding officials of China.

Mrs. Foote also gave a detailed history of the outstanding Soong family and especially the three sisters who are outstanding at the present time.

Mrs. Shay expressed the appreciation of the Auxiliary members to Mrs. Foote for a most interesting address and to Miss Jennings for her delightful solo.

Two Detroiters Held In Aiding Nazi To Escape

DETROIT, April 21 — (AP). — Federal agents, warm on the trail of a Nazi flier who escaped from a war prisoners camp at Bowmanville, Ont., held a German-born cafe proprietor and a woman today as alleged accessories while pursuing their hunt for the fugitive.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation seized Max Stephan, 49-year-old naturalized American, and a woman of German descent, accusing both of unlawfully concealing and harboring Peter Krug, 21-year-old lieutenant in the German air force who escaped from the camp April 16 with a companion, Erich Boehle, 28, also a Lieutenant who was recaptured the following day at Niagara Falls, N.Y.

John S. Bugas, chief of the Detroit office of the F.B.I., said the two had assisted Krug after he reached here. Bugas did not announce the woman's identity but said she was the wife of a war plan worker.

Wined and dined at a party in Stephan's restaurant Saturday night, Krug was sent on his way with money and directions from the cafe operator Sunday morning, Bugas said. The F.B.I. believes he is trying to reach Mexico and thence make his way back to Germany.

Upon arraignment yesterday, Stephan stood silent and a plea of not guilty was entered for him. Unable to furnish bond of $25,000, he was locked up for examination April 27. Bugas said he would ask internment of the woman as a dangerous enemy alien.

The F.B.I. said that Stephan told in detail a story of giving Krug food and money and arranging his transportation out of Detroit as well as taking him on a sight-seeing trip

"MOTHER USED MUSTARD BATHS TO HELP STOP DAD'S COLDS... AND THE DOCTOR PUT MUSTARD ON MY CHEST WHEN I WAS ILL," SAYS "BUDDY" McMURCHY

EVER since "Buddy", Mrs. W. McMurchy's young son, was seriously ill with a bronchial congestion, Mrs. McMurchy has realized the grave danger that can lurk in a neglected cold. She has realized, too, how helpful mustard is as a means of overcoming colds and certain chest complaints. Mrs. McMurchy gives all the credit for "Buddy's" recovery to her doctor and the mustard treatment he used. The McMurchy family live in Regina, Sask., where winters are long, cold and windy. And Mrs. McMurchy sees to it that they take no chances with colds. When either of her two boys or her husband show symptoms of a cold, she insists that the one afflicted takes a mustard foot bath. For years, the time-tested remedy, mustard, has been a guardian of health in this home.

Another Alberta Woman Praises Mustard Baths

After a long period of treatment . . . a few years ago . . . Mrs. M. Harvey of Red Deer, Alberta, recovered from a threatening chest condition. Today she is a healthy, busy woman, but still has to be careful not to let a cold or congestion affect her chest. "If I feel any tightness whatever in my chest," she said, "I take a full mustard bath just before retiring. I take two heaping tablespoons of mustard, mix to a paste with cold water and then place it in the bath. As soon as I am ready for bed, I have a mustard poultice placed on my chest, leaving it on for not more than 20 minutes. This treatment is most helpful. It aids in dispersing the tightness—helps my breathing to become normal and there has never been any return of the old chest trouble."

The strongest proof that mustard is reliable, lies in the fact that thousands use it year after year. Let mustard help to relieve you when you have a cold or feel chilly and depressed with grippe or some other winter infection. Use it to help relieve pains of neuralgia, rheumatism, neuritis and other ailments which commonly affect you. If symptoms are serious be sure to consult your doctor.

Be sure to keep a tin of mustard handy and always have the best. Keen's Mustard is known the world around for its high quality.

Twenty Cheese Factories In Operation

CAMPBELLFORD, April 21 (ENS) —Some interesting bits of information for the farmer are picked up by District Dairy Instructor J. A. Murray in his cicuit which takes him to widely scattered parts of Northumberland County on routine business for the industry. His observations, particularly concerning the dairy farmer, and given to the Examiner on Monday, are as follows:

Twenty of the 21 factories in the Campbellford district are operating this week, which is a much earlier start than usual for most of them. He suggests that Cheese companies intending to put in a platform for the convenience of patrons washing their cans at the factory, should visit Kimberly Factory, where the cement work was done by H. Spencer and Son.

Worked In Winter

The patrons of Hoards Cheese Co. are well pleased with the winter's operations. This plant operated continuously throughout the winter and their cheese maker, Douglas Rowe, was able to bring them through with but one vat of undergrade cheese and a very high percentage of premium cheese.

Crow Bay Cheese and Butter Co. (whose president, Hector Arnold, was last week named to head the Campbellford Cheese Board) has carried out the instructions left with the executive at the annual meeting. They have the cellar and foundation in ready for the erection of new living quarters for their cheese maker.

The cheese makers of the Campbellford district are not in favour of taking over the testing of composite samples. They find it hard to secure experienced help and that being the case, the cheese maker's time is very fully taken up. In their opinion the present scheme of engaging a man to do the testing throughout the county is just as economical.

Federal Cheese Grader James L. Irwin has announced that he will grade in Lindsay and Peterborough on Thursday morning and during the afternoon he will be in Campbellford.

Saving Gasoline

It was observed following the inaugural meeting of the Cheese Board last Thursday that all buyers from southerly directions were leaving in the same car and in conversation with one buyer, it was learned, that they intend by this cooperation, to reduce car driving to a minimum. One buyer suggested that the salesmen should try to work out a similar system so that there could be a weekly sale. Peterborough district salesmen have already worked out an alternate system of driving which seems to work well. However, the Campbellford salesmen have an additional advantage since in the case of 15 factories either the salesman or some other patron is connected with Campbellford telephone exchange while one Percy Township factory has both Warkworth and Campbellford connections. Proof of the need for weekly shipping is seen by the fact that curing rooms last year were crowded beyond capacity even with weekly shipping.

Farm producers ho have been casting envious eyes at the price being maintained in the United States for dairy products, will be consoled by an item appearing in the Dairy News of April 11th. "On the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange paying prices for cheddars and twins continued to hold on a basis of 20¼ cents." (Opening prices on the Campbellford Board last Thursday were from 20 to 20¼ cents.)

Feeding calves is not generally considered a hazardous risk, but one cheese patron in Huntingdon township had the misfortune of breaking his arm while engaged in that duty last week. It appears that bossy dropped her snout at an inopportune time for the farmer.

2 Miles Off Palace

San Francisco, April 21 (AP)

ONE Tokyo broadcast gave a possible indication of where some of the bombs fell Saturday. It said 10,000 students "including 3,500 from Waseda University, were most active in air raid precautions service; they lent their assistance in many places and in many ways and aided especially in keeping traffic going."

Waseda University, one of Japan's largest, is in Ushigome ward in the northwestern section of the old city, some two miles from the Imperial Palace enclosure. Half a mile to the east of the university is a big army arsenal and to the west an industrial section with extensive railway freight yards and warehouses. Most of the arsenal's plant, however, was removed some years ago to less congested areas.

N. Alex McColl Explains Reserve Army

CAMPBELLFORD, April 21 — (ENS).—The importance of Canada's Reserve Army was brought home to Rotarians in address by N. Alex MacColl, LLB., who on Monday did much to clarify in the minds of those present some of the plans currently being employed to bulwark the country's internal defenses.

No armchair flag waver, Rotarian Alex was himself a veteran of World War I, having enlisted as a private with the 149th at Petrolia in the spring of 1916. He was with the 1st Battalion in France in the spring of 1918 and would have given up his law practice to go over again if he could have slipped by the army's rigid medical staff. It was primarily with a view to stimulating enlistment in the local reserve unit of the Midlands for which he is presently second in command of B Company, that the speaker gave his address.

Emphasizing the importance of the reserve, which is comparable to the Home Guard in England, the speaker pointed out that the very existence of such a reserve had "played a powerful part in dissuading Hitler from an invasion ever since the fall of France." Though this could be taken with some limitations, he felt they played a considerable part in forcing Hitler to drive east instead of west.

"After all, an army of one and a half million men in a small area like Britain, and fighting for their homes and loved ones near at hand is indeed a powerful force."

"The Veterans of the last war felt that this was a powerful argument and persuaded the government to allow an organization of Veterans' Guards early in 1941. There were, of course, the Active Force of Guards who are on duty at the prisoner-of-war camps, the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa and one company of which at least, has gone overseas. It was felt that there was a much larger proportion of veterans who, while not sufficiently fit or were unable to get away from business and home responsibilities, were nevertheless anxious to take such part as they could in the defence of country and Empire. These men were organized into companies of about one hundred and fifty men, and one of these, the 32nd Infantry Reserve Co. V. G. of Canada, was located in Northumberland and Durham with headquarters and a platoon at Bowmanville and a platoon at Port Hope, Cobourg and Campbellford. In command of the company was Lieut.-Col. L. T McLaughlin, C.M.G. (who was in command of the first troops to enter Germany immediately after November 11, 1918), while Captain Joseph O'Neill, M.C., was second in command."

The speaker, who was in command of Number 2 Platoon observed that during the past two years, much good work in furnishing recruits and N.C.O.'s for active ranches of the force had been done.

The Government plan is to organize men in reasonably fit condition forming them into battalions where they will receive training so that they will know the value of military discipline and organization, the operation of rifles, light machine guns, bayonets and bombs of various kinds.

"The plan for establishing a civilian army called first for the amalgation of the Veterans' Guard into the Reserve Battalion. In these two counties (Northumberland and Durham) some of the V. G. Platoons went into headquarters company with Capt. O'Neill taking charge of the whole company."

The speaker pointed out the Reserve Battalions would serve the dual purpose of training young men before they enlist for Active Service and of maintaining a reserve army. He outlined regulations for enlistment which render the following eligible: 1—men between 17 and 19 in A to C category; 2—men from 19 to 50 in C category; 3—married men from 30 to 50; 4—single men 35 to 50.

Cobourg Cuts Salary $300 Of Town Clerk

COBOURG, April 21.—(ENS). — Cobourg town council Monday night passed a motion reducing the salary of A. W. Young, town clerk and treasurer from $2,400 to $2,100. A proposal that the salary be reduced to $1,800 did not carry. The salary of Miss Kay Shorey was increased $100 a year.

The council unanimously endorsed a resolution of Councillors Rollings and Glenn that the council urge the citizens of Cobourg to vote 'yes' on the plebiscite.

Letter from the Department of Highways relative to an application from a resident for a license to conduct a wrecking business was read and the matter referred back to the applicant.

Hospital Tag Day.

Permission was granted to the Cobourg Hospital Auxiliary to hold a tag day on the last Saturday in June. Permission was also granted to the Sisters of St. Joseph's Orphanage for a tag day to beheld at a date to be set.

A letter from D. H. Burn reminded the council that contrary to an agreement in 1936 the creek was not covered over with a concrete top where it passes under a building owned by Mr. Burns and occupied by the Lincoln shoe store.

In this connection council recalled that nobody could be found to do the work when tenders were called last year due to scarcity of labor. Council decided to advise Mr. Burn that the matter had been left in the hands of the Health and Sanitation committee with power to act, the intention of the council being to call for tenders as soon as possible.

Letter from Patrick McGlynn of Mimico, asked for a tax revision on his property here and was referred to the Court of Revision.

A communication from A. R. Willmott in reference to a tax sale was referred to the Finance Committee which has the matter under consideration.

Accounts Passed

Following accounts were passed: Highways and Streets Committee, $419.91; Public Building and Printing, $69.42; Police, $127.50; Fire, Water and Light, $521.61; Health and Sanitation, $12.00; Direct Relief, $120.65; Finance and Harbour, $377.02.

A by-law was passed making the intersections of Charles street at McGill and Division streets, both stop streets.

Motion of Reeve Dodge and Councillor Alan Field that the leases between the coal companies and the town of Cobourg at the harbour be signed as carried.

Councillors Westington and Field proposed to Councillor Delanty's motion of a previous meeting, the amendment proposing a reduction to $2100 in the clerk and treasurer's salary. The motion had asked for a reduction to $1,800. The amendment carried 6-2. The reduction is effective May 1st.

Another resolution boosted the assistant clerk's salary $100 a year, effective May 1st.

An Able Servant

Reeve Dodge, prior to the vote on the clerk's salary, lauded the clerk's work, saying that he was a very able servant of the town and a tower of strength to new councillors. He pointed out that due to increases in the number of reports to the government the clerk's work had increased materially.

Mayor Burnet and Reeve Dodge referred to the pending departure for another position of Ford Lindsay, editor of the Sentinel Star. Reeve Dodge declared that Mr. Lindsay's departure would be deeply regretted. Mayor Burnet stated that Mr. Lindsay had always fairly reported the Council meetings and was an asset to the town.

Mayor Burnet brought up the motion of $1,162 due to the town in the form of an accumulated rebate on street lighting. The Utilities Commission wanted a request from the Council for a transfer of the funds. Councillor Field declared that the town had no surplus like the utilities regardless of the fact that the town's estimates had been struck, the $1,162 could be used to reduce bank loans. A formal request will be made.

Collect Salvage

Frank Lopp, speaking on behalf of the newly formed Navy League of Cobourg, said that the Cobourg Branch of the Navy League desired to take on the salvage collection work, which had been relinquished by the Cobourg Business Men's Association. A phase of that collection would be magazines and newspapers, as well as other types of salvage. Mr. Basil Walker, chairman of the Magazine Committee of the Cobourg branch of the Navy League also spoke. The delegation accordingly asked the council to authorize the Navy League to take on this work. Permission was granted.

Salvage Campaign By Seymour Women

CAMPBELLFORD, April 21. — (ENS).—The busy Seymour branch of the Women's Institute has just completed a summary of their initial salvage campaign which ended on Friday last after being in progress throughout the entire week. A check up of the salvage, all of which was brought to the home of the president, Mrs. Jesse Locke for final checking and disposal, disclosed that 1,700 pounds paper and 600 pounds of rags were collected. Proceeds, which will be used to further the branch's war activities, amounted to $13.00, and so well satisfied were they at their first attempt at salvage collection that they have announced their intention of continuing throughout the summer with the Jesse Locke farm as headquarters on the 7th Line and George Airhart's the assembly point on the 6th. Though they are only accepting rags and waste paper, Mrs. Locke announced the Institute was "well pleased with the result of the collection" and she feels that with a number of ladies still not finished with house cleaning a large amount will come in during the succeeding weeks.

Two members of the Janie Canuck Girls' Club, sponsored by the Institute left on Tuesday, April 21st to attend the annual course at Kemptville, where they will receive much interesting information dealing with the work they have been doing in the club. The two girls, Misses Jean Murray and Doreen Pollock, will return on Saturday and present a complete report of their observations at the regular Institute meeting on May 12th. Their trip to Kemptville is sponsored by the Seymour East Branch of the Women's Institute as a part of its work on behalf of the Girls' Club.

Men's Club Pays $25 To Church

CAMPBELLFORD, April 21 (ENS) —Christ Church Men's Club made their initial contribution to the wardens of the church when they met for their regular meeting here on Monday evening. On motion which carried unanimously they voted to turn over $25 for the "use of the Parish Hall" during the past three months. Commented Warden Hilton Beatty, "This will pay the fuel bill for the winter." Treasurer Bill Burgess reported on the Easter Monday dance, from which they would clear approximately $34 and which would make a very substantial balance to the club's credit, he said. The discussion of the purchase of games for the club's entertainment was the subject of some lengthy discussion and following a report of Secretary Joseph Poulton it was decided to purchase a dart board and darts and also to give some further consideration to the matter of obtaining a ping pong table. He revealed that the table which had been under consideration was not available and that it might be feasible to make one from plywood. The question was left with the committee to bring in a report at the next meeting.

On motion of Mr. M. Sergeant the secretary was instructed to send a letter of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Atkinson on the death of their son, Flight-Sergeant Mac Atkinson, who was killed on active service in England. With reference to the dance which the club is planning to hold on April 24, it was decided to lower the admission price to 35 cents and serve a cafeteria lunch. Mr. Hilton Beatty made the suggestion that the club should combine with the Parish Guild in arranging a social evening in the near future at which Rev. A. C. Herbert of Hastings, who is currently taking the services at Christ Church, could meet members of the congregation. A motion was passed authorizing the entertainment committee to proceed with arrangements for a program and refreshments for the evening to which the entire congregation would be invited. Date for this affair was set tentatively for May 4.

Woman Gashed By 'Crazy' Bird

LINDSAY, April 21.—A large partridge smashed through the window at the home of Reeve W. E. Lyle of Lutterworth Township, with such force that it broke its neck and died when it struck the wall on the opposite side of the house. Miss Elaine McKay, who was sitting about twenty feet away from the window, received a severe gash on the forehead from flying glass.

It is a common thing for partridge to go "crazy" in the fall, but this is the first one in these parts that is known to have contracted spring fever.

Bullfrog Chorus Perfect Spring Symphony

GORE'S LANDING, April 21. — (ENS).—Several days of fine spring weather this past week brought out the bull frog's chorus which is located in the bay at Gore's Landing. Later, the deep bass solo of the grandfather of all Rice Lake bull frogs cut into the choral offering. All old residents of this area are familiar with this measured basso-profundo while his smaller grandsons' shrill obligato introduce the Rice Lake symphony.

The hills are turning green and the grounds in the various camps are looking fresh and clean. Activity is noticeable all along the lake shore and summer residents are getting cottages in shape for probably longer tenure this year, on account the shortage of gas. Roads are improving and village gardeners are busy raking, burning and getting everything ready for a bumper crop of garden vegetables. Seed potatoes appear to be scarce.

Personals.

Miss Nancy Janet Harris, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Harris, celebrated her third birthday on Friday afternoon by entertaining several small cousins, Lois, Judy and Lyle Jr. Ball were present; also Muriel and Lois Harris.

Miss Dorothy Harris, nurse-in-training at Lindsay Hospital, spent two days at home this week.

Mr William Wallace has been ill in Cobourg Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Adams and family, Pickering, spent the week-end at their home.

A real estate transaction took place this week with the sale of the home of Mr. Alexander West to Mr. Bolton of Cobourg. This home is on the southern edge of the village of Gore's Landing.

The home of Misses Agnes and Belle Smart is being renovated with modern facilities and the Misses Smart are expected to take possession about May 1.

Bert Cheyne, who moved here from Peterborough last January, has torn down part of his home and is building on a new addition.

Mr. Ames, who moved here from Plainville into the home of the late Robt. Brooks, is enclosing the upstairs porch with glass windows and making it into sleeping porch.

Settlement Made In Family Dispute

COBOURG, April 21.—(ENS). — Settlement was reached in the first case on the non-jury docket of Supreme Court which opened yesterday afternoon before Mr. Justice Hope when His Lordship, in view of the fact that the legal dispute was a family matter, suggested that the parties reach a settlement among themselves. The action was brought by Mrs. Gerta McMillan of Hope township against her father, James Beatty and his employe, Kenneth Trew, asking that a certain conveyance and mortgage between Beatty and Trew be declared null and void. She also asked judgment for sale of the premises in her father's name and an accounting of the monies received by them since the date of the conveyance and mortgage.

The divorce action brought by Ernest A. Allin of Bowmanville, against his wife, Margaret Allin, was heard yesterday but His Lordship reserved his decision.

The damage action for $1,163.34 being brought by Cunningham and Wells, Ltd., transport company, against Harvey Austin and Thomas Lingard of Port Hope, outcome of a collision between the plaintiff's truck and the truck owned by defendants, is the final action on the docket and started this morning.

CLEAR TELEPHONE LINES FOR

All-Out Production...

The two-pound armour-piercing shells of these anti-tank guns are poison to Panzer columns. Canada is now making them in quantity. But she needs thousands more, just as fast as they can be turned out.

Many of the 500 different parts that go into these guns come from sub-contractors. The materials for these parts, in turn, come from a dozen different sources. CHEMISTRY HELPS TO WIN THE WAR

What Kind of Gun is This?

IT'S a spray gun — used to apply paint, vital protection for all metal surfaces in today's war equipment. Everything, from steel helmets to mighty ships, must have its painted shield against rust, corrosion and decay.

Paint and the painter are playing an important role in Canada's production of war machines. There must be paint for ships, shells and planes; paint for torpedoes, tanks and transports ... and master workmen to apply them; camouflage paints, signal paints and other little-known developments of the paint chemist.

C-I-L plants at Montreal, Toronto and Regina are working unceasingly to prevent any interruption in the flow of protective finishes for the Navy, Army, Air Force, while maintaining, so far as is compatible with war needs, the supply of necessary paint products for civilian use.

Paints, lacquers and varnishes are only some of the many C-I-L products of Industrial Chemistry which are aiding Canada's war effort.

Canadian Press' New President

It is with the greatest pleasure that the Examiner extends its congratulations to Mr. Arthur Ford, of the London Free Press, who was last week elected to the office of President of The Canadian Press. Congratulations are also owing to that organization, for Mr. Ford is one of the most able journalists in this country and enjoys the confidence of everyone connected with newspaper production in Canada.

Mr. Ford has had an unusually wide experience of journalism. He has worked both in Eastern and Western Canada and he has been on newspapers both in Washington and New York. The Canadian Press is itself a development of the Western Associated Press, in the origin of which Mr. Ford bore a part. He has had opportunities to watch the growth of co-operative news-gathering in this country from its beginning and has thus an intimate knowledge which will be invaluable to him in the discharge of his new duties. In his time he has been a member of the Press Gallery both at Washington and at Ottawa, and in the Dominion capital he was both secretary and president of the Parliamentary correspondent's group.

For many years Mr. Ford has been editor of London's daily paper and has served his community and his country well in that capacity. He is a member of the Board of Governors of the University of Western Ontario and has done much valuable work as a member of the Ontario Cancer Commission.

The work which Mr. Ford undertakes as President of The Canadian Press is national wartime service of a very important kind. Now more than at any other time in the history of this country the gathering and dissemination of accurate information is of highest importance. The work of newspapers in this war is to keep morale high, to offer encouragement and criticism in every field of effort, and, above all, to see that the public is given the news as rapidly and in as well-authenticated a form as is possible. In guiding Canada's greatest news organization Mr. Ford will be a man of great influence in this work. This newspaper will do all that it can, as will papers throughout Canada; to be of service to him in the heavy duties which he has undertaken.

Eastern Ontario At War

Although the people of Canada have been told often enough that they are at war, and although this fact has been impressed upon them by various taxes and restrictions, few of them have any accurate idea of what their country is doing beyond the raising of troops. This lack of knowledge is in part owing to the inadvisability of spreading such information and thus making the work of the spy and the saboteur easier, and in part to the reluctance of the Government to undertake any policy of spreading information of a harmless kind which would none the less rouse us to enthusiasm and a sense of accomplishment.

For instance, the citizens of the Peterborough district would no doubt be greatly surprised if they knew how much work of an important character was in progress right in their midst. They know, of course, that many industries are now engaged in war work, and they may perhaps know details of some parts of this work, but they probably have no notion of the extent of the work as a whole. And this district is only a part (a very important part) of the greater district of Eastern Ontario, which is responsible for an enormous portion of Canada's whole war industry.

Fortunately we are able to give some details which have been made public regarding the production of aluminum in Canada; in this country we produce 43 per cent. of the aluminum used in the manufacture of airplanes by the U.S., and of this percentage the greater part comes from Kingston, in the heart of Eastern Ontario. The informant says also: "Notwithstanding the huge expansion in American extraction of light metals, we are told we will need more aluminum and more magnesium from the Dominion." This is interesting and flattering, coming as it does after Mayor La Guardia's statement to the Canadian-American Permanent Joint Defense Board that "Canada, a nation of twelve millions, is producing war materials as if she were a nation of a hundred million!"

The reference to the need for magnesium is interesting; at the rate of plane production anticipated by the U.S., there should be no limit to the amount of this commodity which could be used. It can be obtained by extraction from seawater, among other ways, and it is estimated that a bathtub full of seawater contains about seven pounds of magnesium. The trouble is to get it out, a complex and expensive operation.

Here is Eastern Ontario we are living in a district which is contributing vastly to the war effort of the United Nations. This is a matter for pride, but it has its attendant dangers. If the Axis should decide upon an air assault upon this country, certainly the Eastern Ontario district would be one of the most heavily bombed areas. We have not been bombed yet, however, and there appears to be no immediate danger; meanwhile we continue to do a very good best toward winning the war.

Long View In Russia

Save for two or three in whom we repose great faith, we avoid reading the works of news commentators. In taking this course we do not mean to reflect upon the scores of unread scribes; it is simply that life is too short for anyone to read all that is written each day about the war, and any attempt to do so would inevitably lead either to madness or a paralysing state of indecision.

Recently, however, we were much impressed by an analysis of the Russian situation written by Clyde A. Farnsworth, an analyst on the staff of The Associated Press, and we present a digest of his opinion here.

His main conclusion is that the Battle of Russia is far from nearing its end and has, indeed, only just begun. After ten months of violent and costly fighting, neither side is in a position to gain a decisive advantage over the other. Now, in his opinion, the Russian battle will settle down into a gigantic war of attrition, until one side is so reduced in strength that it can be decisively defeated. This puts a new complexion on the war, for most of us had assumed that this summer would see fighting end in Russia, and we hoped that it would end in German defeat.

This analyst thinks that the Germans might still be able to make a desperate and possibly successful assault upon the Caucasus, where essential oil is at stake. The Russians have not shown strength in the Caucasus as yet comparable to their achievements farther north. But Farnsworth thinks that these northern successes may enable the Russians to make a gigantic flank movement against a German drive in the Caucasus. The commentator also balances these two factors against each other; the Germans are still fighting upon ground chosen by themselves, but the Russians are fighting for their own country and have shown lion-like courage in defence of it. And there is no doubt that Russia has, in the long run, an enormous numerical superiority over Germany.

Thus Mr. Farnsworth. His analysis seems a sober and able one, and he bases it upon common sense, rather than upon any doubtful private information. He holds out no hopes of a quick decision, though he has confidence in Russia's eventual power to break the German might. But if the fighting is to be so long drawn out, it will eventually drag Germany into another Russian winter, and it is hard to believe that she could survive such a calamity. And of course the lesson is clear in this which sticks out in any consideration of the news from Europe: the whole Russian situation will be altered for the better if we can make a diversion or a genuine offensive in some other quarter. The signs that we may do so are still faint, but they are growing clearer.

Conference And Yet More Conference

In pursuit of what we have already said about the war of nerves which the United Nations are waging against the Axis it is interesting to notice the number of conferences which appear to be in progress in Britain now. General George C. Marshall, the U.S. Chief of Staff, has made a widely advertised progress to the island fortress, and he is in conference with everybody. The revelation that Lord Louis Mountbatten was in charge of the Commandos was very cleverly held back until General Marshall had arrived, and immediately after it was made we were informed that Lord Louis and the General were in the closest kind of conference several times in a single day. That is not the kind of news which the Axis can wave aside. General Marshall was not talking about trifles to the hero of St. Nazaire. On Sunday the B.B.C. told the world that the General had been closeted with Mr. Churchill and that their deliberations had lasted all one day and far into the night. Mr. Churchill does not give his days and nights in this prodigal manner unless something big is afoot. General Marshall has seen many other soldiers and airmen, and we have been apprised of the fact. Obviously this is a way of rattling the Axis, but it is surely something more.

The assurance that U.S. troops will continue to journey to the British Isles in ever increasing numbers seems more than encouraging in the light of this important round of conferences which General Marshall is having. We may wonder what is up, but our concern will be of a very different kind from that which doubtless troubles the bosom of Adolf Hitler.

Hitler is well aware that the coastline of Europe which he has to defend against possible attack by the United Nations is even longer than the battle front in Russia; he can do nothing on that coastline without being seen by the R.A.F., and if he defends one spot it is an easy matter to attack at another. He knows that he cannot spare enough troops to make the shores of Europe safe, even if he had so vast a number at his command. What he does not know is when the attack may come or if it is coming at all. Whenever the Commandos make a raid on the Nazi-held coast it may be the spearhead of an invasion, and the way in which the Commandos catch the Nazis off guard can hardly add to the soundness of the Fuehrer's slumbers. General Marshall's conferences will not be discounted in Germany; although his visit to Britain was the occasion of a great deal of show calculated to rattle the Axis we may be sure that he was not there for show alone.

Why Be Tall?

It is interesting to read that the U.S. Mail has forbidden the use of its services to a device called a Pandiculator, which was advertised as an infallible aid to growing tall. The Pandiculator was a sort of stretcher upon which the aspiring patient laid himself and then, by means of a wheel, hauled himself out to as great a length as he could bear. The things people do!

Why should anyone want to be tall, anyway? Being tall, we may tell you, is not all that it is cracked up to be by the manufacturers of the Pandiculator. For one thing the tall man has a lot more of himself to dress and keep clean, and a great deal more of himself to provide with accommodation in trains, theatres, and restaurants. Most places of entertainment and public resort provide chairs and space for people of medium size, and the tall man is always at a disadvantage. A tall man is always bumping his head in cellars, and he has to be especially careful when he gets in and out of cars. A tall man, in fact, has a hard life. Furthermore, psychologists tell us that tall men are apt to suffer from timidity, whereas it is well known that small men are great scrappers, and are apt to stand on their rights. A tall man will do almost anything to avoid trouble, seeking peace even at the cost of personal humiliation. A popular saying avers that the world owes much to small men; true, but it owes much of its peace to timid tall men. Tallness, we regret, is not all that it is cracked up to be.

Indeed, if any of our readers is of an inventive turn of mind, we recommend him to invent a machine to make tall men shorter. It would have to be a kind of press, or squeezer. Undoubtedly it would make his fortune, though we are not sure that he would be able to distribute it through the U.S. mails.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Yesterday was Hitler's birthday. As usual the festivities were marred by the Fuehrer's desire to have his cake and eat it too.

Hitler, we read, has sent his best army head to France. Is the Fuehrer losing his self-confidence? There was a time when such a statement would have meant that he had gone there himself.

BRITAIN LOOKS TO WEST

There is reprinted below a bit of a poem which Tennyson deleted before it got itself published under the title of 'Hands All Round.' Here are the suppressed lines which first appeared in the Weekly Examiner of February 7, 1852, with the pseudonym "Merlin" attached.

These lines were found by Mrs. D. G. H. Melton when looking through an old scrap book recently and they have a striking timeliness today especially in view of the plebiscite:

"Gigantic daughter of the West,
We drink to thee across the flood,
We know thee most, we love thee best
For art thou not of British blood?

"Should war's mad blast again be blown
Permit not thou the tryrant powers,
To fight thy mother here alone
But let thy broadsides roar with ours.

O rise our strong Atlantic sons,
When war against our freedom springs,
O speak to Europe through your guns,
They can be understood by kings."

John MacCormac Sums It Up

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

CANADA is a strange country. Although she seems to have little personality—little of the character of a mother-country—few of her sons are ever able to shake off her influence entirely. Many of them leave her and seek other lands where their talents command a higher price, or where there are more people of their own kind, but Canada sticks in the back of their minds, and every now and again they feel the urge to smarten the old girl up—to make her, as it were, more presentable. As a usual thing they find the task a harder one than they had bargained for; perhaps Canada is more stubborn than they think.

One of the latest of these native sons who has left Canada but who, from time to time, gives the country of his birth a little of his time and a share of his considerable talent is John MacCormac, one of the most brilliant members of the Washington bureau of the New York Times. He is an admirable journalist and, just before the first World War he was the youngest member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Ottawa. He served in the war with distinction (awarded the M.C.) continued his work as a journalist, and has achieved considerable distinction in that field, too. He has won a reputation as a shrewd and well-informed commentator on world affairs and he expresses himself with a moderation and a background of reference unusual even among the better sort of journalists.

BUT it seems that Mr. MacCormac has never thoroughly worked Canada out of his blood. He watches her and worries about her. He sees her as a British Dominion in the Western Hemisphere, obviously meant by nature to be one with the United States, yet stubbornly turning her head aside to gaze across the sea toward Britain. He sees her as a country with a great destiny which she does her best to avoid. He sees her as the interpreter between the Old World and the New, and yet stubbornly refusing to interpret. Out of his amazement and perplexity he wrote a book called "Canada: America's Problem" which sold very well in 1940. Now he has written a new book, and although it is called "America and World Mastery" there is much about Canada in it.

For some reason which I do not understand this book has caused quite a stir among Canadian reviewers. They have rushed to the defence of Canada, and have expressed pity and scorn for Mr. MacCormac while so doing. Although I have read the book with care I have found nothing in it to provoke excitement. True, it criticizes the present Government of this country severely, and accuses Mr Mackenzie King of trying to reduce Canada's war effort to a minimum. But what John MacCormac says is as nothing compared to what has appeared and continues to appear in Canadian newspapers. Canada, he thinks, has ceased to be a vital part of the British Empire and has become virtually an appendage of the U.S. It is possible to disagree with Mr. MacCormac without becoming either abusive or pitying toward him. Predicting the future is the most popular of all games, and past records reveal that any old woman with a teacup full of leaves stands as good a chance of being right as the best-informed and most alert journalist that ever lived.

APART from its strictures on Canada the book is interesting. The author's thesis is that America must rid herself of isolationism for good if she is to survive as a great power. After this war it will be necessary for Britain to fortify herself with a great ally, and if the U.S. chooses to be that ally she will be able to share the benefits of the British Empire and perhaps be the senior partner in the Anglo-American world power. If she does not choose to do so, Britain may choose Germany as her partner. Not, of course, the Germany of Hitler, or of William II, but a new Germany which she will help to make. An Anglo-German alliance, in Mr. MacCormac's opinion, would eventually prove a terrible enemy of America.

But for some reason this author does not choose to consider the possibility of strange alliances for the U.S. Why should she not ally herself with Russia, or China, or even Japan? These ideas are no more far-fetched than the notion of an Anglo-German alliance. As things are at present an Anglo-American alliance seems almost certain, though it would be many years before the average American, with his essentially continental and isolationist notions, became accustomed to it. However, Mr. MacCormac wishes to make the point that the U.S. must choose between becoming a world power or settling down to some very uncomfortable decades. The Pax Britamericana, as he calls it, seems to offer the best hopes to the countries concerned and to the world in general, and it is to further this idea in the States that the book is written.

MacCormac's book will surprise many Americans, and will certainly make some of them see red. It is full of small bombshells such as this quotation from A. V. Dicey, British historian: "Respectable Englishmen are beginning to consider whether the Constitution of the United States may not afford means by which, under new democratic forms, may be preserved the political conservatism dear and habitual to the governing class of England." And here is one for Canadians to ponder: "That her government should have begun to feel that Canada is a purely North American nation just when Americans have begun to feel that the United States is a great world power may prove to be one of history's ironies of mistiming." Very true. The book is written in an easy, though somewhat slovenly style, and it seems that neither the author nor his printers know how to spell 'by-election'; they also seem to think that 'holus bolus' is Latin, as they solemnly print it in italic type. This is a stimulating and provocative book, and Canadians who read it should not allow the author's strictures on his native land to blind them to his important central theme.

DUNKED!

—New York World-Telegram.

• No Jap Aid for Hitler ?

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 21 —(AP)— Coupled with the mystery of the origin of the American air bombers which Tokyo reported as having blasted Japanese cities is the significant Nipponese action in broadcasting the incident.

Those Tokyo broadcasts coincided with strong indications from Russia that Hitler had launched a widespread air offensive to soften up the Red Army resistance to his coming grand attack. They came also just when some Allied observers foresaw a Japanese thrust against Russia to match the German attack as the Axis' strategic design.

If Japan itself is as open on all sides to air attack as Tokyo reports now say has been demonstrated, however, it is a reasonable deduction that Japanese war lords have no present intention of breaking the flimsy truce with Russia to help Hitler. Had they been so minded, the bombing raids over Tokyo and other Japanese cities would have been credited to Russia, not the United States.

Russian air bases in Siberia are less than half as far from Tokyo as are any known American outposts in the Pacific from which land-based bombers could have taken off. Even air fields in the Philippines still in American-Filipino control are more distant than Vladivostok.

Tokyo, aside from setting up a creditable excuse for failing to go to Hitler's aid by attacking Russia, probably is fishing for information. It is highly essential that Japan learn without delay exactly how the blow was struck.

If it came from carriers, somewhere off Japan's east coast, it follows that a formidable American naval force has punctured the Japanese island screen undetected and stabbed deep into waters where the main strength of the Japanese Fleet is certainly disposed. The escort for the carriers almost certainly would include not only cruisers and destroyers, but battleships.

The operation could be another hit-and-run raid. It might also represent an attempt to lure the main Japanese fleet into action to take advantage of the fact that important Japanese units, including battleships and carriers, have been reported shifted to the Indian Ocean.

It seems indisputable, however, that Tokyo is anxious for some reason to demonstrate Japan's own jeopardy from long-distance American air raiding despite many victories. Pending more trustworthy accounts of what happened, it seems quite likely that it served to notify Berlin of Japanese determination to stay out of the Russo-Nazi conflict to avoid greatly increasing that peril.

A BOOSTER FOR MOTHER-IN-LAW

WHO steps into the breach and brings order out of chaos when the wife is sick, the maid has left, the husband has extra work to do at the office; little Mary has the sniffles and Johnny mashed his toe, there is nothing fit to eat in the house and three days' dishes stacked in the sink? Who can always dig down in her pocket and find a little money to help out with the bills when times are hard? Who teaches the children Bible stories and instills in their infant minds about all the introduction they ever get in old-fashioned moralities? Isn't it the mother-in-law? You said it. — Leamington Post and News.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.—Dan. vii, 27.

Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw....But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation....And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges.

But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.—Matt. xii, 22, 24, 25, 26-29.

A Bit of Nonsense

Unpaid

A little man was tearing down the street as fast as he could go, and behind him toiled the landlord of the local inn in pursuit. At the corner a policeman stood regarding the scene with a smile.

"Why don't you help me catch him!" bellowed the landlord, as he drew alongside the man in blue.

The policeman looked surprised.

"He told me that you were racing him for the price of a drink," he said.

"So I am," shout the landlord. "He hasn't paid it!"

BEER PARLORS

THERE is a rumor, widespread, that it will not be long before hours of sale in beverage rooms in Ontario are going to be severely restricted, something on the basis of two or three hours in the afternoon and two or three hours at night. It is said that a survey by the big breweries has been in progress for some time, and the brewery interests will project a new order of things as a long term protective policy for themselves. The rumor is hard to credit and it may well be only a rumor, and it is given as such. One thing is certain, however, there is public disapproval growing by leaps and bounds against the economic wastage in a country in dread war for life and death, as results from wide open conditions in the sale of beer. The comparison with what the budget means in the Old Land and Ontario should be enlightening.—St. Catharines Standard.

Baby Band Is To Forego Its Annual Tea

A pleasant meeting was held at the home of Mrs. H. E. Helson by the George Street United Church Baby Band on Monday. The meeting opened with a hymn, and a prayer led by the president, Mrs. D. O. Lavis. As the members worked they discussed all they had accomplished so far and made final arrangements for the completion of layettes for this year. The subject of the annual tea was brought up and it was decided to dispense with it this year and instead, to increase the members cash donation, thus heeding the government request to church groups not to serve tea, because of the sugar restrictions.

Mrs. W. Young read the scripture, after which a portion of the study book was read by Mrs. A. Hasty. Mrs. D. O. Lavis then spoke on "The Beauty Within" which comes from the knowledge of God.

After a final hymn the meeting was closed and refreshments were served.

All But Tin Cans Wanted By Salvage

It should be obvious to everyone that metal is one of the vital sinews of war. It always has been, from the time when every knight who went into battle was a walking tank, to the present day when battles are fought on land, on sea, and in the air, from tanks, ships and planes, all made of metal. Ever since the first savage sent the first tin or copper-tipped arrow winging its way to his enemy's heart the weapon's of war have been made of metal.

Today, more than ever before, metal takes its place as the foremost war material, and in order to keep up the supply of weapons, we must keep the smelters supplied with metal ores and scrap.

Except for tin cans, the Peterborough Salvage Committee wants all your old metal. They don't want tin cans because, before the small amount of tin in them can be salvaged, they must pass through the incinerator. Toronto has a very fine incinerator but you've...er...heard about ours.

All other metal, razor blades, old cars, old stoves, hot water tanks, cooking utensils, copper wire, light bulbs, batteries, old machinery, in fact, everything that is metal, except tin cans.

There are some things you should remember about metal salvage. Don't be careless with razor blades. Keep them separate from other salvage. Put them in glas jars with tight lids, or, if you use some other container, label it plainly, so that there can be no doubt of its contents. Razor blades are the most potentially dangerous of all salvage.

Only the brass bases on light bulbs are valuable so break the glass. It saves space and does away with danger from broken glass.

If the metal you have is very large and heavy, say so when you phone the depot, so that the committee can send men to collect it. Two, or even three women, cannot lift your old kitchen range into the truck, and you really shouldn't expect it.

DOROTHY DIX

DON'T FORCE BOY INTO MARRIAGE IF YOU WANT FUTURE HAPPINESS

There Is No Recompensation for Woman Who Indulges in Intimate Relationship With Lover.

Dear Dorothy Dix.—I am a girl of 20, engaged to a boy of the same age. We had almost set the date for an early marriage when, out of a clear sky, he tells me that he isn't very keen on marrying so young, but that if I insist upon it he will marry me. I do insist on an early marriage, but if I force him into one that he is loath to go through with I am afraid that he will feel that he has been hooked into it and that his family will hate me for doing it.

Shall I force him to marry me now, or wait for the inevitable day when he will want me as a wife without benefit of clergy, and I shall have to give in or stop seeing him, even though it will ruin both our lives, because I know we are made for each other and will never be happy apart. Is it better to insist on an early marriage and take the chance of his hating me for it, or is it better to lose him the other way? Please help me.—Girl in Love.

Answer.—If you force a boy to marry you against his will, you will lose out, because he will never forgive you for using strong-armed methods to drive him to the altar. Such a marriage is foredoomed to failure and will bring you nothing but misery, for your willing bridegroom does not love you, does not desire you, and he does not want to give up his playtime and assume burdens and responsibilities for which he realizes he is not yet fitted.

A boy husband, with no trade or profession by which he can support a family, crushed by debts and tied to a wife who has wished herself upon him, is one of the most pitiable creatures in the world. And you may be very sure that he would blame you for his failure in life and visit his resentment upon you. If you would think of the worst hell that a woman can devise for herself, it would be the kind of a marriage you are considering making.

The Woman Always Holds The Bag.

On the other hand, if you become this boy's mistress, you are also bound to lose out, because when he tell you that he does not want to marry you he serves notice on you that he is keeping himself free to leave you when he is tired of you. If he meant to be faithful to you, he would marry you, however unwise it was to do so at your age and in your circumstances, and take the consequences rather than put a stigma forever on your name and run the risk of bringing illegitimate children into the world. In every liaison it is always the woman who is left with the bag to hold.

So as between the choice of forcing the boy to marry you, or becoming his light-o'-love, or breaking with him, I strongly advise you to take the latter course. In any case you lose out. But if you refuse to accede to the boy's demands you keep your integrity, your self-respect and the respect of all who know you and believe me, that is a grand consolation.

You are young, and young hearts quickly recover from blows that they think at the time are fatal. The world is filled with fine, honorable men and among them you will find one who will love you, who will be eager and anxious to marry you. Wait for him.

Dear Dorothy Dix.—I have been married for eighteen years to a man whom I love very much and who has been an exceptionally devoted husband. A few months ago I went to the store of which he is manager and accidentally ran into him as he walked up quickly behind a girl clerk and stuck his hands under his arms, put his face beside hers and whispered to her. I just said: "Boo!" and asked if I could use the telephone, and he looked chagrined, but laughed as if it were a big joke.

In the clerk had been an ordinary girl, I doubt if I would have noticed it, but she is a man-chaser, especially of married men, and three homes with children (not ours) have been badly hurt on account of her attentions to the husbands and fathers.

I have made no issue about this girl with my husband, but he knows how I have been hurt and has redoubled his attentions to me. He tells me that he loves me and spends all of his evening at home with his family. I don't go to the store any more because I don't want my husband to feel that I am watching him, but something has gone out of our relationship that makes it strained instead of free as it used to be, and I don't know what to do about it.—Mrs. E. D. T.

Best To Keep on Saying "Boo"

Answer.—Well, I think you had just better continue to say "boo" to it, as you did in the first place, and let it go at that. It is better to laugh off an episode like that than it is to ask for an explanation, or an apology, or a promise not to let it happen again.

Of course, it is a shock to any ever-loving wife to find that her husband is zigzagging even an inch off the straight and narrow path, but probably there isn't one man in a million who doesn't succumb to a little flirtation now and then, and the wise wife is the one who shuts her eyes to what she does not want to see.

Go back to your husband's store just as you are in the habit of doing, and tease him about the girl and you can get back to normal. Don't take it seriously if you don't want him to.

The Family Car.

Dear Dorothy Dix.—How often do you think a wife is entitled to use the family car? I help save the money to buy ours and I am a good driver and would rather drive than eat, but my husband never lets me have the car, even to go to church on a Sunday morning. I loved him once, but he is so selfish and unreasonable that my love is slowly dying and I am very unhappy.—A Wife.

Answer.—I think a husband is very mean and stingy if he won't let his wife use the car whenever he can spare it from his business, but I know a lot of selfish brutes who don't. I know men who drive their cars down town every day and park them in order to keep their wives from using a little gasoline in going to market or taking a ride.

But there is no use in getting all hot and bothered about it now because few of us will be using automobile for the next few years.

For Wednesday, April 22

Although there may be moderate progress in a business way, according to the lunar aspects, yet there is probability of the energies and aspirations being centered on social, domestic, cultural and affectional activities, to the neglect of commonplace affairs, which, however, are under a combination of hazardous, perplexing and intriguing circumstances. There may be danger through fraud, deception or peculiar undermining as well as from an inclination to extravagance and unwarranted outlay. There is possibly a tendency to let the emotions run away with sound judgment and sense. Private associations should enjoy great happiness and satisfaction.

Those whose birthday it is should be assured a year of most gratifying, progressive and pleasurable relations in their domestic, social and artistic life, with personal magnetism, culture and good nature accenting the popularity and having good reactions on business and property affairs. While business may be moderately successful if attended to, yet there is a menace from intrigue, imposition, subtle undermining, as well as through personal proclivity to overspend, or be carried to extravagance by the emotional nature rather than sound economic integrity.

A child born on this day should be gracious, kind, good-natured, generous, with strong social, artistic and emotional urges which may impel it to let the heart run away with the head, thereby inviting imposition and inciting extravagance and lack of thrift.

Gordon Monkman was appointed president, with A. Radford secretary-treasurer. Frank Dyer, after a ballot, was appointed captain and J. Wild vice-captain. J. Hawthorne and G. Langhorne will be in charge of transportation, and F. Roberts will again look after look after entertianment.

The secretary reported that matches had been arranged with T.C.S., Port Hope (2), Grove School, Lakefield (4), R.A.F., Picton (3) and R.C.A.F., Trenton, and it was expected Oshawa would be included in the list. Transportation conditions will probably prevent any Toronto matches, but it was consistent that arrangements already made promised a successful, if limited, season.

Players are needed, and any newcomers to the city will be heartily welcomed and should communicate with the secretary, A. Radford, 414 Water Street. Simon Retiring Forced By Injuries

NEW YORK, April 21 — (AP).— As a possible belated sequel to the head pounding he took in his recent bout with Champion Joe Louis for the Army Emergency Relief Fund, ample Abe Simon was forced to retire from boxing yesterday because of constant headaches and pains in his back.

Simon, 28 yielded to the entreaties of his bride, and the advice of his physician for at least a temporary layoff, but James J. Johnston, his manager, immediately decided that the retirement should become permanent.

Johnston said that hte pains in Simon's back are so severe the boxer at times is unable to walk erect. His retirement made it necessary to cancel his bout with Harry Bobo of Pittsburg for next Monday in Pittsburg and "lost $50,000 in contemplated matches," according to Johnston.

Simon, originally managed by John Hay Whitney, first met Louis in March of 1941 and lasted thirteen rounds, although absorbing considerable punishment.

On March 21 of this year, he fought the champion again for the benefit of the Army Emergency Fund and was stopped in six rounds although still wanting to continue after the referee reached 10.

The second Louis-Simon bout drew 18,200 persons to Madison Square Garden and grossed $132,430 of which $64,980 was turned over to the Army Fund.

Louis and Promoter Mike Jacobs each turned over their full share while Simon returned a part of his pay.

Simon was married in February to Miss Rita Siebel also of New York, and it was the pleas of his bride that sent him to a doctor for consultation.

When Johnston was told of the doctor's verdict he said, "I have a contract with Simon that still has five years to run and he will not fight as long as I have anything to do with him. He's too nice a fellow and he wasn't made to be a fighter in the first place."

Simon stands six feet four inches tall and weighed 255¼ pounds for his second go with Louis.

Stagger System

NEW YORK, April 21 (AP). — Some 150,000 men and women office workers checked in either a little early or a little late to-day as the city began its wartime "stagger-system" of working hours in order to relieve subway congestion. The "stagger-system" was put forward by the City Commerce Commissioner, George A. Sloan, to cut down the peaks of morning and evening travel.

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

THE STORY.—Ferdy Lorton, an artist, and his aunt are awaiting week-end guests at Ferdy's country place near Montreal. The guests are Myra Mack, stenographer; her soldier brotrer, Michael; her young sister, Peggy, and Lieut. Nigel Monkhouse, who is bringing beautiful Fay Ransome, stockbroker's daughter.

CHAPTER V

Ferdy's aunt, contemplating the week-end ahead, let a twinkle play around her eyes, the laugh lines in their corners reflecting her perpetual good humor. "I don't know what you'll do when you get married," she teased. "It will have to be be a woman either of great generosity or no spirit whatever to tolerate one houseful of strange people after another."

Ferdy, stretched on the settee before the stone fireplace, contemplated his cuff links and yawned. "I shall marry a well-bred mole," he said. "A particularly myopic one. She will be content to burrow about under the lawn until I've a mind to feed her. . . "

"It isn't," his aunt continued unheedingly, "as though you mixed your guests judiciously."

". . . .or maybe even a genteel fish. One with a Vassar diploma and a cold disposition."

"You seem to me to do it deliberately."

Ferdy sat up. "Marry a fish? What do I do deliberately?"

"You know perfectly well what I'm talking about. Look at the people you've asked up here this week-end. Two sisters: Myra Mack and Peggy Mack. Sisters always mean trouble, especially when one is plain and a matchmaker and the other just 17. Then there's their brother, probably not very well off. A fine one to set against another young officer, quite well off, whom he has never met. Your fourth guest—beautiful, and a stranger to the others. So what do you have?"

Ferdy cradled his head in his hands and moaned in mock distress. "Disaster! Chaos"

"One impressionable young girl. One nice, young rich man. A charmer who will pocket him and the impecunious brother as well. Really Ferdy," she sighed, "sometimes I wonder which of us is crazy—you for inviting dynamite mixtures up here, or me for putting up with it."

Ferdy laughed out loud. "You love it," he said, mussing her ears. "Can't fool me. You're every bit as bad as I am. I want new faces to paint, new personalities to explore, and you like having young people around you, especially when their antics are unpredictable."

The rest of the party came in two sections, arriving on the afternoon of Friday. Second Lieutenant Michael Mack drove up with his two sisters in his father's somewhat battered jaloppy. The drive was uneventful except for the efforts of Myra and her brother to instill into Peggy the need for a certain restraint in her behavior during the week-end.

The trouble with you two," said Peggy darkly, "Is that you still think I am a kid in pitgail plaits. You older people get me down." She addressed her sister of 25 and her brother of 23 from across the vast, intolerant distance of six or seven years. "Why, Joan Baker was married this week and she's only a year older than I am!"

Michael Mack looked questioningly at Myra out of the corner of his eye.

"Shall we throw it out by the wayside?" he asked.

'Just try," said Peggy. There was a glint in her greenish blue eyes and a tight little line about her lips. But the next moment was forgotten. They were passing a roadstand.

"Hey!" she cried to her brother. "Let's stop and pick up some cones."

He stopped patiently while Peggy tumbled out and came back in a moment with an ice-cream cone and a bottle with a couple of straws sticking from its neck. "Don't you people want anything?" she asked.

Myra shook her head sadly.

Michael shook his and looked at his younger sister with an amused air.

"Trouble with you folks," said critical Peggy, her voice muffled with ice-cream, "You let your age

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

New York Yanks were idle yesterday but did some gaining in spite of that fact. Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Browns, the two clubs in front of the world champions in the standing both were bumped off and as a result the McCarthyites succeeded in climbing up to second place, half a game behind the Croninites while the Browns slipped down into the third slot as a result of a defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Indians. A Boston castoff Jack Wilson held his former teammates to five hits and Washington won 10 to 4 giving Joe Dobson and Mike Ryba a 15 hit lacing. Incidentally it was the first time in seven games that a Boston starting pitcher failed to go the route. Cleveland behind six-hit pitching by Al Smith and helped by Ken Keltner's second homer of the young season defeated the Browns 4 to 3, with Denny Galehouse, who won his opening game, allowing 10 hits. In the other American League battle of the day Chicago Johnny Rigney won a pitching duel from Dizzy Trout and Newhouser as the White Sox triumphed over the Tigers in a game in which each team made only six hits.

* * * * * *

That fanfare on the trumpets from the National League signalizes the arrival of the Brooklyn Dodgers into undisputed possession of first place in the senior loop. The Bums attained that lofty perch by an easy win over the Boston Braves who were beaten 9 to 2, with Kirby Higbe having too much on the ball for the losers. Early was the victim of the Brooklyn assault with Dolph Camilli crashing through for a home run. Hans Lobert's Phillies took the measure of the Giants 6 to 2, with Johnston the winning pitcher and McGee absorbing the loss. A homer with three on the bases by Glossop was the big blow of that tussle. Chicago Cubs, getting steady pitching from Jake Mooty won easily from the Pittsburg Pirates 8 to 2 despite a homer by Vince DiMaggio who is one up on brother Joe in the round-trip department.

Hockey Club To Play Softball

The Peterborough Hockey Club, after one of the most enjoyable seasons in its history is going to keep the comradeship of the past winter alive by entering a club in the Peterborough Softball League and by the same token the Petes have plenty of material to make it interesting for all and sundry. Eddie Starr is available to do the catching while for the infield Jim Ellis, Bun Kingdon, Art Heal and Don Crowe are in line. Joe Blewett, Les Burton and Bob Parnell can look after the outfield posts and in addition Bruce Bennett and Johnny Godfrey are willing to try their luck at the softball proposition. With Ned Vitarelli and Red Creighton added to that squad the hockey representation in the City Loop would be decidedly formidable, particularly if the puck-chasers snag on to the pitcher they hope to secure for mound work. The hockey club entry should be a popular one with the fans who have not forgotten the fine showing the Petes made this past season.

The annual school swimming meet for The Examiner trophy is billed for Friday night and promises to be the best contested and most interesting since the annual event was inaugurated. Thanks to Gord Minty and his squad of assistants interest in swimming among the youngsters is greater than ever and some of the kids have been doing great work in practice. In fact the performance of some of the entrants has been so good that it is expected that a number of records will go by the boards before Friday's program is completed. Gord Minty tells a story of how interested the youngsters of today are in swimming. In the pool the other night a bunch of 11-year-olds were lined up for a dash and given the order to "go." The tadpoles immediately dived into the pool but it was seen that one of them was in difficulties and some one dived in and pulled him out. Then it was learned that he had never learned to swim but he had been game enough to plunge in anyway when the command was given.

Bear Cats Come Through

The game Port Arthur Bear Cats after losing the first two games of the Allan Cup final series to the star-packed Ottawa Flyers fought their way back into the running last night when they defeated the R.C.A.F. outfit 3 goals to 1 in the third game, played at Montreal. We have an idea that the win of the team from the head of the lakes will be popular with fans all over the country. Not that they have anything against the R.C.A.F. club, except perhaps the feeling that the Flyers have been packed with stars to the detriment of other clubs without the advantages enjoyed by the Air Force crew. But the real reason for rejoicing over the win of the Bear Cats is that Canadians love a fighting team and sympathize with the underdogs. They knew that the Port Arthur team, facing a squad that hadn't been beaten for 20 games, were handicapped in the first two games by the fact that Bert Laprade, defence star had to miss action owing to injuries and they admired the manner in which the Bear Cats battled in spite of the handicaps. Now they have proved that the Flyers are not invincible the fourth game in the series, scheduled for tomorrow night should be one of the high-lights of the hockey season. Incidentally the famous Kraut line, with Bobby Bauer back with Schmidt and Dumart, was held off the score sheet, a tough job always for N.H.L. clubs to accomplish.

* * * * * *

The outlook for cricket here this summer, in the light of reports made at last night's meeting, is better than there was reason to hope that it might be. The Peterborough-Whitaker Club, which expected to have a decidedly lean season because of transportation difficulties now finds that between school and Air Force teams the schedule of fixtures is not so bad after all, and on the whole the season should be a good one. Several new players have turned up to add interest to the local activities. The season will get under way a week from Saturday and although there has been no practice as yet the club is hoping for warmer weather so that the spring training can get started.

Is Heading The Leafs

Peter G. Campbell, former Peterborough boy, who is the new president of the Toronto International League club writes the sports department of The Examiner to say "We expect to do better than we have done in the past." Pete, one of the greatest athletes Peterborough has turned out and undoubtedly one of the finest quarterbacks who ever played for Varsity, recalls that he always took a great interest in baseball when he lived in Peterborough. "I think I was the official scorer, around the age of eleven, of the Peterborough ball club when Fred Whitcroft was the manager," writes the Toronto prexy. "I wonder where Flaherty that good pitcher of ours and a few of the others are now; Chris Graham is the only one I can place." Incidentally Pete mentions the fact that his father, Peter Campbell, Sr., who is well remembered by older citizens as manager of the Bank of Toronto here for many years, is still keen on baseball, despite the fact that he is 91 years of age. "I hope he will be able to take in a few of the games this year," the letter says.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: A lot of new names are bobbing up in the big league box scores. There will be more as Uncle Sam continues to take big leaguers for the armed forces. . . .According to the Ottawa Journal no Canadian hockey player of military age will be allowed to report next season to any of the American clubs in professional leagues. . . .That sounds like the end of pro hockey until after the war. . . .Abe Simon has dropped out of the box-fighting game. He's still punch-drunk from his last bout with Joe Louis. . . .Amateur hockey in Canada has contributed $50,000 to the war effort this season. . . .Victoria Dominoes have taken the first game of the Western cage finals from Winnipeg St. Andrew's winning 49 to 43 . . . .President Dudley of the C.A.H.A. confirms the general impression that the hockey governing body is purely and simply a business organization. Sentiment cannot be allowed to interfere with business is the way Dudley puts it. . . .There used to be an idea that the C.A.H.A. had something to do with encouraging clean sport but that ideal vanished years ago.

Nominate Field Of 34 In 83rd Canadian Classic

TORONTO, April 21.—(CP)—A field of 34—14 geldings, 10 fillies and 10 colts—was nominated today for the 83rd renewal of the King's Plate, Canadian racing classic to be run at Woodbine Park here May 23.

The oldest race run continuously on the continent is restricted to three-year-old, property of a British subject resident in Ontario. The horses must have been foaled, raised and trained in the province, must never have run a race, other than one exclusively for two-year-olds.

R. S. McLaughlin's Parkwood Stables of Oshawa nominated the most entries, four, for the mile and a furlong dash that features the opening of Ontario's spring racing season. The MacDonald Stables of Toronto and J. E. Smallman's Medway Stables of London have three nominees each.

The light and dark blue silks of H. C. Hatch's Toronto Stable, carried to victory in the Plate last year by Budpath, will be represented by only one horse, Cossack Post, a brown gelding.

W. F. Morrissey of Toronto, whose Willie the Kid won in 1940, has nominated Ellen Hill, a bay filly.

The early favorite is Ten-to-Ace, sole entry of Harry Giddings of Oakville. This chestnut colt recently covered a half-mile in 49 2-5 seconds when just out of winter quarters.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Our Lawn Bowling Club, along with hundreds of other clubs throughout the Province of Ontario, has decided, for this year at least, to withdraw many of the open tournaments. It was felt that due to the lack of transportation facilities it would be unwise to attempt such undertakings. True, we intend to hold a couple of open tournaments, but that's all.

And now having this sudden turn of events thrust upon them, the committees in charge of our activities are busy working out a program that will take care of the dates usually set aside for open tournaments.

This means more home lawn bowling. It means that more time will be given to the education of new and younger members; it means that there will be more bowling for all members of our club—it means more and more bowling, and it may spread out so that we will have to create more local competitions.

But that is only some of the reason that we believe that we should have a big membership this year. Many people will be forced, by gas rationing and the tire situation, to curtail their travelling and they must have some place to go for a little amusement. So we are going to suggest this: Why not toss your lot in with the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club and enjoy a season of real, live sport, and at a very little cost?

Adams Mistakes Prove Stars In The Playoffs

By HAROLD McNAMARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 21 (CP)—For a man who made the same mistake twice, Jack Adams did all right during the 1941-42 National Hockey League season. Adams' Detroit Red Wings had Toronto Maple Leafs hanging on the ropes and were within a quarter of an hour or so of taking the Stanley Cup in four straight games before they folded in the stretch and lost out in a gruelling seven-game series.

It seems quite safe to say that if Jolly Jawn, as he is sometimes—but not very often, now—known, hadn't seen at least one of his errors in time the Wings wouldn't have made it that close.

The two "mistakes" in question involve Jimmy Orlando and Eddie Bush, the Detroit defencemen who ranked as two of the Wings' stars, especially during the three games that Adams' warriors won.

Three years ago, Adams gave up on Orlando and figured he just never would make a major league player out of the tough Montreal boy.

So he sold the big fellow down the river to Springfield Indians. But the Springfield club was a little short of folding money at the time and it decided Jimmy just wasn't worth the expense. So they shipped him back to Detroit.

That was one mistake that Adams didn't have to worry about; he had it corrected for him. But the other one, the one involving big Eddie Bush, was a different matter.

Bush was tabbed as a comer when he played with Guelph Juniors in the Ontario Hockey Association three years back.

Herbie Lewis Mistake.

Adams put young Bush's name on a contract in 1938 and shipped him off to Pittsburg Hornets, then the Detroit farm club, for experience. Bush went just so-so at Pittsburg and the next year he went to Indianapolis, which had meanwhile become the Detroit farm. Herbie Lewis, the former Detroit star who coaches Indianapolis, just couldn't see Bush. He sent him back to Adams with a "no good" tag and so Detroit turned him over to Providence Reds along with the veteran Cecil Dillon for Harold Jackson.

Big Eddie justified Adams' recognition of his own mistake by winning the third game in Detroit practically single-handed. He figured in all five goals as the Wings surged to a 5-2 triumph.

They tell quite a few stories of the 23-year-old Bush's brashness. The best of them all is about the time he stopped Adams himself in one of the Red Wing Chief's tempers.

Adams roared into the dressing-room after one tough loss and began to lay into his players. But he was left speechless when young Bush stepped up to him calmly and, in his best imitation of Phil Harris talking to Jack Benny, said:

"See here, Jackson, psychologically speaking, ain't you going about this thing the wrong way?"

BEAR CATS HAND FLYERS THEIR FIRST LACING IN 21 CONTESTS

Take 3rd Game Of Allan Cup Finals By 3-1

MONTREAL, April 21 — (CP).—A new confidence pervaded the Port Arthur Bearcats camp to-day as a result of their 3-1 victory over Ottawa Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers in the third game of the Allan Cup final—the first time that the Airmen had been stopped in 21 games.

The Cats stopped the Airmen before 11,260 fans here last night to throw cold water on the Service team's hopes of sweeping the best-of-five series in straight games. The Flyers won the first two contests 7-4 and 8-7. The fourth game will be played in Toronto on Wednesday night, with the fifth game, if necessary, also scheduled for Toronto.

The Bearcats spotted the Airmen a goal last night and still won. Al Campbell sent the Flyers into the lead in the second to last minute of the first period. But with only two seconds to go in the first session, Lindsay McDougall tied it up. Bill McKenzie scored in the second period and Steve Wochy marked up the clinching goal in the final session.

The game marked the return to action of right winger Bobby Bauer, who had been out for a month and a half with a shoulder injury. It also saw Defenceman Bert Laprade return to the Port Arthur lineup for the first time since the Cats were in the Western final against Kimberley Dynamiters.

Goalie Dertell the Hero.

Young Bud Poile, who played a top-notch game himself, struck the general sentiment when he declared in the dressing-room after the game that Goalie Russ Dertell of the Cats should get "all the credit.' Dertell was the star of the game, being particularly brilliant in holding the Krauts—Bauer, Milt Schmidt, and Woody Dumart—off the score sheet.

One of the things that delighted the big crowd was a bumping duel between Schmidt and Bill Maki, a burly, blond thumper on the Port Arthur defence. Maki handed out about a half-dozen rousing body-checks in the contest, and peculiarly enough four of them were aimed at Schmidt. Schmidt wasn't idle, however and sent Maki spinning to the ice on one occasion.

US Hockey Loops Bar Players Of Military Age

OTTAWA, April 21 — (CP).—The Ottawa Journal said yesterday that "no player of military age will be permitted to report next season to any of the American teams in professional hockey leagues."

"District draft boards, the Journal was informed this morning, will follow a set policy of refusing all applications of hockey professionals for permits to leave the country for the fall and winter months.

"Last season, no two draft boards followed the same policy . . .

"Lack of a general all-over policy among the draft boards resulted in what officials felt was some unfair discrimination. That will be eliminated entirely this year, with all draft boards refusing any permit applications.

"Hockey's governing bodies are being acquainted with the new situation: That the N.H.L. and other leagues will have to get along without Canadian players next season.

"Word of the no-permit policy last week was passed along to officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association."

Werber Advances To Second On Wild Throw

Ed Head, Brooklyn hurler, is pictured as he fell to the ground after fielding Billy Werber's ground ball. From a lying position Head threw to Camilli at first, but the throw was wild, thus letting Werber advance to second. The Dodgers moved ahead of the Giants in their traditional rivalry by taking the third game of the season by the score of 4 to 2. Werber, who advanced to second on this play, later scored on Manager Ott's single to right field.

CAHA Approves Grants To Minor Series

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 21—(CP).—Reduced registration, bringing with it almost certainly lower revenue, will not prevent the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association from continuing its financial assistance to the minor series.

Before closing out the four-day annual meeting yesterday the delegates approved a grant of $1,000 to each of the nine branches and an additional $1,000 to be divided among the three Prairie Provinces which have extra expenses to meet because of greater travelling distances.

However, in keeping with its avowed policy of war-time economy, stricter supervision will be exercised over the branches in their disbursements of the grant.

Each branch will be required to submit a detailed report as to the number of clubs helped and failure to do so will bring suspension of next year's grant until such time as the report is received.

In addition, a three-man sub committee comprised of W. B. George, Kemptville, Ont., Norman Dawe, Verdun, Que., and A. W. Pickard, Regina, will have power to investigate the disbursements during the season and make recommendations for the purpose of obtaining better results.

Before winding up its deliberations the meeting held election of officers and Frank Sargent, Port Arthur, was named to succeed George Dudley, Midland, Ont., as president. His executive will consist of first vice-president, A. W. Pickard, Regina; secretary, Fred Marples, Toronto; registrar-treasurer, W. A. Hewitt, Toonto and Mr. Dudley.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 21—(CP).—Men of the armed services have done so well as full-time figures in Canadian sport that few are the tears shed at the prospect these sportsmen in uniform soon will dominate all sport in the Dominion.

If this is a cloud, it is a cloud that's all lining and the lining is all silver. Soon a majority of the country's best athletes will be in uniform. Professional ranks will be decimated, if not eliminated.

Popular athletes of today will be even more popular at $1.30 a day instead of $50 a week (for good amateurs) or $5,000 a year (for good pros). Military authorities probably will leave sports government with existing organizations, but it is just as probable that with 12 months Canadian sports finals will be all-military finals.

Athletes' Forum

Milt Schmidt, Ottawa R.C.A.F. on the booing the Krauts take from amateur hockey fans: "I don't think it very strange that people would ride us . . . the only tough part about it is that Woody (Dumart) and I, and Bobby (Bauer) before he was hurt love to play hockey and we play as hard as we can every night. But booing players and teams is a hockey fan's privilege."

Biceps Boulevard

Jack Katan of Winnipeg is travelling with Frank Tunney's wrestling stable (or do wrestlers travel in schools, like seals?) on the western Ontario circuit. At St. Catharines a couple of weeks ago Katan and Vic Christie of Los Angeles took a fall each in the main bout, then by some obscure means managed to throw each other out of the ring and into unconsciousness. Ho hum.

Incidentally,

Those hardy customers who waited until Detroit had beaten Toronto three times before they bet on Leafs were paid off in more than cheques for short beers. Chief Carpenter, managing editor of the Montreal Gazette, picked off $150 for $10. A small Toronto operator clicked at $40 for $2.

Until Oshawa Generals beat Portage La Prairie Terriers in the third game of their Memorial Cup final in Winnipeg the other night, Terriers had won 24 straight and 28 of their 31 games this season. This club, although junior, has a touch of the military. Staff Sgt. Addie Bell (known to the boys as "Old Sarge") is the coach. Joe Bell, star winger, is one of his sons, and Tinkle Bell, 16-year-old goalie, is another.

The quiet luncheon given Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday in celebration of winning the Stanley Cup gives point to one of Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara's yarns the other day about when the Silver Seven won the famous old container about 40 years ago. The Silver Seven knew only one use for a cup, and champagne was the beverage. The celebration approached its climax when one player drop-kicked the cup into the Rideau Canal. The climax came the next day, when he remembered and retrieved it from the slush and mud of the canal bed. Time flies, and customs change.

Generals Plug Their Defence

WINNIPEG, April 21 — (CP). — Oshawa Generals were full of confidence today they would take the measure of Portage La Prairie Terriers in the fourth game of the best--of-five series to decide the Canadian junior hockey champions. The teams meet tonight in the game which Portage is just as confident will end the series with the Westerners the winner of the Memorial Cup.

Oshawa went through a skating and scrimmage drill early this morning. Coach Charlie Conacher concentrated upon his defence, which he figured could be tightened up a little. After the workout the players rested until they skate out later against Terriers.

Terriers arrived from Portage La Prairie, 56 miles west of Winnipeg, around noon and also went for a light skating session. Coach Staff-Sergeant Addie Bell reported all his charges in good shape, including his son Joe, who got into the series in the third game Saturday in which Generals won 8-4. Joe had been out for 10 days prior to Saturday with inflammation of the bladder.

Winnipeg fans are going for the series in a big way. Yesterday the first fan lined up in front of the Amphitheatre at 4 a.m. while the box office didn't open until 9 a.m. Another capacity crowd of more than 5,000 will be on hand.

Portage, with two wins, the first two games, by 5-1 and 8-7, according to all players and those connected with the club, promised to end the series tonight. A win for Oshawa will force a fifth and deciding game here Thursday night.

Rallying Leafs Edge Giants 2-1 In 1st Win

By The Associated Press.

While the schedule makers and the weather man combined to give all the other teams in the International League a vacation yesterday, Toronto Maple Leafs took the opportunity of winning their first game of the season.

The Leafs, rallying behind the Grade A pitching of their new left-hander, Joe Sullivan, downed Jersey City Giants 2-1. Sullivan, who joined the club Sunday, gave only three hits but the Giant tally was scored in the seventh without the benefit of a blow.

James Maynard walked, stole second and finished his journey on a pair of infied outs.

Toronto nicked Bobby Coombs for all its hits and both of its runs in the first eight innings. Jesse Dana, 18 year old New Orleans medical student who came to the New York Giant camp without a contract, made his initial appearance in organized baseball in the ninth and went unscathed.

The defeat dropped the charges of Pancho Snyder out of a first place tie with Rochester Red Wings.

All eight teams are slated for action to-day with the high flying Wings guests of Syracuse Chiefs who have been able to play only half their games; Buffalo at Baltimore, Toronto at Jersey City and Montreal at Newark.

WINNIPEG, April 21 — (CP).—Victoria Dominoes, despite their difficulty with the narrow Winnipeg basketball court, to-day hold a one-game lead in a best-of-three series for the Western Canada men's championship over Winnipeg St. Andrews who have fallen before British Columbia teams in the last four years.

They out-shot and outsmarted the Andies for a 43-39 victory here last night and will meet them again on Wednesday. If a third game is necessary to decide the quintette to oppose Montreal Oilers in the national final it will follow on Thursday night.

Timmins Singles Champion Slips

TORONTO, April 21 — Archie Johnstone Jr., the lanky Timmins printer who won the Canadian Bowling Association singles championship last year, knocked himself out of all chance to win the 1942 title last night when he turned in a three-game count of only 656 at the Olympia-Gerrard alleys, where the championships are in progress.

Johnstone's string had only one creditable entry a 266 in his second game. He started with 206 and slumped to 184 in his third trip to the foulline. Last season the erstwhile Toronto Major League bowler rolled better than 900 to annex the singles crown.

Partnered with L. Campbell of Timmins the 1941 singles titlist rolled 685 which, with the former's 724 contribution, made up a doubles tally of 1,409.

The C.B.A. tournament continues all this week, with the presentation of prizes taking place late Saturday night.

Dodgers Bounce Braves 9-2, Cubs Win 8 to 2

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Red Sox were all alone at th head of the major league pennant parades today, having earned their positions with the help of Chicago Cubs, Cleveland Indians, and some of that stuff the Weather Bureau says is not to be mentioned.

The Dodgers bounced Boston Braves out of a three-way partnership in the National League with a 9-2 assault, while the Cubs took care of Pittsburg Pirates, the third member of the triumvirate that shared first place before the start of yesterday's games, 8-2.

In the American League, the Red Sox dropped a 10-4 decision to the Washington Senators, but clung to the lead by half a game over New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns.

The Yanks missed their chance to pull even with the Red Sox when their scheduled tussle with the Athletics at Philadelphia was postponed by conditions which must remain a military secret. Similar conditions possibly saved the Red Sox from further embarrassment, since a second game with the Nats had to be called off.

ruined St. Louis Browns' chances of gaining the top spot by tripping the Brownies 4-3.

At Brooklyn, the Dodgers got a seven-hit pitching performance out of Kirby Higbe, who chalked up his first triumph of the year, and slammed three Boston pitchers for 11 blows.

Dolph Camill opened the assault with a two-run homer in the first inning. Three more runs in the third pinned the defeat of starter Tom Earley and the Brooks continued their blasting against his successors.

7-Inning Duel.

At Pittsburg, Max Butcher of the Pirates and Jake Mooty of the Cubs hooked up in a tight pitching duel for seven innings, but the Chicagoans exploded for half-a-dozen runs in the eighth, putting both Butcher and the game away. Lou Stringer routed Butcher with a triple after three successive singles had produced one run and the Cubs turned three singles off reliever Hank Gornicki into three more runs.

Philadelphia Phils depended entirely on home runs to generate all their scoring for the second time in three days and lambasted the New York Giants on their own field 6-3.

Al Glossop's homer with the bases loaded in the fourth followed a two-run four-master by Danny Litwhiler in the third and proved to be the game-winning blow as the Giants tallied three times in their half of the fourth.

Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals had an open date and rested for their series opener today.

At Boston, Jack Wilson returned to haunt his former Red Sox mates, as castoffs have a habit of doing, and pitched the Senators to victory with a five-hit job.

The Red Sox gave Joe Dobson a 4-1 lead through the fourth inning, but he weakened in the fifth, and left at the end of the following frame after dishing out 10 hits and six runs.

Ken Keltner and Oris Hockett led Cleveland's 10-hit attack on Denny Galehouse, but it was Jeff Heath who drove in the winning run with a single, giving the nod to Al Smith for a six-hitter against the Browns.

Johnny Rigney shaded Dizzy Trout as Chicago White Sox dumped Detroit Tigers 3-1 at Chicago. Each team collected six hits, but Rookie Harry Sketchley put the Sox ahead to stay in the first inning when he doubled behind singles by Wally Moses and Joe Kuhel to drive in two runs.

Task Of Democracy Is Outlined By Chancellor Gilmour Address To Chamber of Commerce

The task of democracy is to bring together and to keep together power and morality in as close a balance as it is possible for us to achieve in that survival for which we are fighting and for which we feel we have the right to survive, said Rev. Dr. George Peel Gilmour, Chancellor of McMaster University, Hamilton, in his address at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce at the Empress Hotel last night.

The great grandson of the founder of Gilmour Memorial Church on the Chemong Road and also of Murray Street Baptist Church, and the first shepherd of that flock in the days of the pioneers of this county, left a lively impression upon the large gathering of business and profesional men of Peterborough that he had inherited in a full measure those natural gifts of intellectuality and eloquence reputed of his forbears through the long years by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe in an interesting introduction briefly recalling some personal facets of the Gilmour family in its local setting of other times.

Speaking on the subject of the form and spirit of democracy Chancellor Gilmour invested that every day idea with the graces of scholarship and profound thought clearly presented in mildly flowing phrases that seemed to mute the brilliance of the entire discourse. He chose two analogies, one of the sea and the process of lightening the laboring ship, using the terms of casting overboard things permanently or temporarily dispensible, the three significant words, flotsam, jetsam and ligan.

Rev. Dr. Gilmour then digressed for further elaboration of his subject by analogy to terms coined in medieval times relating to the properties of a sacrament, form, matter and intent, and finally he joined the two analogies in a conclusion that we must return to the "ligan" from our laboring vessel of democracy, and pick them up again, moulding into them a new vision and understanding our of intention, that the spirit of God shall inform and motivate the power which the people of a democracy possess.

Power and morality are the only excuse for democracy continuing in our social order, Chancellor Gilmour said, virtually as his proposition, adding with appealing modesty "that talking about things helps us think about them. In his introduction he mentioned some of the views of the character of the present struggle. It was not a war for a single aim. In one aspect it was viewed as an economic struggle, and to preserve a standard of living, but we perhaps do not ask much about that standard or what it has led to. We shut our eyes to the waste of materials and energy and human effort. If United States and Brazil were both shipping cotton to Canada it would still be a hard economic question as to whose ships were being used.

In another sense it seemed to be a war of nihilism. Hitler and his satellites appear to be content, if they cannot achieve the order they desire, to cast down the pillars of the temple and bury humanity in the wreckage of a pagan god. We are not untouched because we have to face necessary nihilism as in Burma and Singapore, destroying in a few hours what took years to build up. Others say this is a war of demonism, that we are in the grip of spiritual forces beyond our control, that we are fighting against principalities and powers. Some hope for our direct intervention from on high, or stand passively by while demonism does its full work.

War Of The Spirit

Dr. Gilmour said that fundamentally it was a war of the spirit. What we are trying to do is spiritual or it is not worth trying at all. It was not just a struggle to maintain a standard of living without that hope worthy of the blood and tears of men.

"Democracy can afford to change its form provided it does not lose its spirit. Tyranny has only one form and is infallible. If it succeeds, it succeeds totally; likewise if it fails. Democracy never expects to succeed totally, and so it cannot fail totally. It may lose some of its forms, but it misses the danger of the passing of its spirit."

In his metaphor of the sea, Dr. Gilmour explained the three terms, flotsam, jetsam and ligan. The first word means the wreckage that floats about after a ship has gone down. Jetsam means the materials cast overboard to lighten a ship that is laboring. And ligan is wreckage that is marked by a float to which the owner can return and recover his goods from the bottom of the sea.

Things Jettisoned

Some of the flotsam of our demoracy we may never see again, Dr. Gilmour said, including the cheerful optimism of the last twenty years. Some of the jetsams we are giving up that our vessel of democracy may labor on its way. We are giving up civil liberties we never dreamed of parting with, vast sums of money that are being paid in taxes, we are enduring rationing and suspending rights which we feel we shall pick up again. In the Christian church there may be differences and prejudices and institutions we may throw overboard to lighten the laboring ship and make our way in safety.

Then there is the ligan, those things we prize and have marked with buoys and to which we intend with all our strength to return. On that float we have to put the word 'resurgam'—'I shall rise again.' Some of those things may be difficult to recover. And we are marking clearly the place where they went down, and will they be worth recovering when we want them again? We believe our institutions will not perish from the earth, but they will return to us better than the world has known them before; that the spirit of democracy is to survive and to remain, but it must be a better spirit.

In his complementary analogy, Dr. Gilmour discussed the forms, the materials and the spirit of democracy.

"We have paid far too much attention to the forms of democracy. We have talked about the sacredness of democracy, about liberty, equality and responsibility.

Those young men who a few years ago sought work and could not find it, who wore the boots off their feet walking the roads, those other young men whom we associated with 'jungles,' they are likely to have little respect for forms, for the words with which we soothed ourselves in the past. But, let the form have the material and the intent."

Mistaken As Ends

Among the materials of democracy Dr. Gilmour mentioned were our churches, schools, libraries, free press, possessions which we have sometimes regarded as ends in themselves, not as means to an end. We have built bigger schools, but we have not found for them bigger teachers. The press has been free but instead of maintaining a high standard it has in some instances appealed to the levels of the gutter. There is more to democracy than the institutions which have come out of it.

Our 'sacrament' of democracy becomes invalidated if there is lack of intention on our part. The root intention of democracy is its existence for the sake of men, and not men existing for its sake. The individual is not for the state, but the state for the individual. On the other hand our individuals must be worthy of the state. The intention of democracy must become the common property of men, with rigid honesty in our municipal councils and by men in places of leadership, more of the self-sacrificing spirit by our public men. The responsibility reaches out in all directions, not only to those in high places and it is only that we can make democracy worthy of perpetuation.

Linking the two analogies of intent on the one hand and the ligan or the things worth saving, on the other, Dr. Gilmour said democracy needed more of both, this morality and also power as nearly balanced as possible. Power of itself becomes tyranny. Morality of itself is only sentiment, sometimes mawkish. Of itself it has never been sufficient. If not connected with power, mortality may bring itself into disrepute. Those two are not close together in ordinary municipal affairs, or wherever men are only time-servers, who let things go because of it is less trouble that way.

"When by the goodness of God we shall have power, and by the goodness of God and men we shall have morality, too, we need have no fears for the form of our democracy, whether it be less liberal or not. These three, form and material and intention in the ultimate spirit of God will validate the sacrament of democracy by which we are to be blessed."

Alderman Dutton moved a vote of thanks to Chancellor Gilmour, which was extended to him by the chairman, George A. Maconald, president of the Chamber. With him and the evening's guest at the head table were: Mayor Hamilton, Senator Duffus, Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Rev. Dr. Smart, J. W. Geraghty, Alderman Dutton and J. J. Dorris.

Dinner music was played by three of the members of the Northrop ensemble, Harry and Stanley Northrop and Tom Smith; and John Gibson and Adam Hawley sang splendidly. Mr. Gibson's numbers were, "Where E're You Walk," and "There'll Be Bluebirds Over"; and Mr. Hawley sang "Sussex by the Sea," and "Three For Jack."

The memory and service of the late John J. Turner in the office of treasurer for 14 years was honored by the assembly standing in silence.

Prime Minister Lays A Brick

During a visit to an anti-aircraft battery the Prime Minister saw some soldiers bricklaying. He asked them if they had "their tickets" as bricklayers, and then said, "Here, let me lay one for you."

to destroy the ceiling policy and Mr. Hanson retorted that the policy would destroy itself if the Minister didn't watch out.

Labor Minister Mitchell said if Angus MacInnis (CCF-Vancouver East) had his way there would be no House of Commons, then withdrew the statement.

G. H. Castleden (CCF Yorkton) termed treatment of soldier settlers after the first Great War "dastardly" and provoked a spirited defence of administration of soldier settlement, from the point of view of humanity, from Resources Minister Crerar, who said the sole purpose of the government was to help the settlers.

Mr. Hanson attacked the government for following an indirect method of getting men into the army by closing certain industries to employment of men of military age. He called it "cowardly," withdrew the word when a protest was made and later called it a "shameful policy."

Mr. Mitchell's bill would place the federal government in vocational education on its own account as it authorizes the Minister of Labor to carry on vocational training projects. The previous Youth Training Act of 1939 which it replaces was limited to grants to projects operated by the provinces.

Grants for Training

The new bill also provides for grants to provincial youth training projects. Both types of projects are authorized to fit people for employment in war industry or in the army forces, to fit persons for gainful employment and to fit ex-servicemen for employment.

Unlike the Youth Training Act which was passed in 1939 the new measure is unlimited as to time and the amount of money to be spent. The former measure authorized an outlay of $4,500,000 over a three-year period which expired at the end of March.

10,000 Given Jobs

Mr. Mitchell saiad tens of thousands of people trained under the youth training act were now filling war jobs and enabling Canada to make its contribution to victory.

He said "if our neighbors to the south—I say this in the kindliest spirit—make a similar contribution to the material side of the war effort to that which this Dominion has been making for the last 2½ years, then the war is over. Make no mistake about that, providing our people measure up to their responsibilities because it is no use having material things if you are afraid to use them.

"I am convinced that the war is going to be won ultimately through the industrial structure, and we on this North American continent are the only people who have mastered the technique of mass production."

Mr. Mitchell said Canada had not "scratched the surface" of its available manpower and predicted that year from now women would be doing many jobs they would never have thought of doing in peacetime. Under youth training and the war emergency training program both women and older men are being trained to replace young men in industry.

At present 3,505 persons between 30 and 39 years of age are receiving training, 1,915 between 40 and 49, and 737 of 50 or older.

Mr. Mackenzie announced that in addition to the general vocational training program to be administered by the Labor Department his department is setting up a division for training which would look after training and placement in special categories of handicapped ex-servicemen, such as amputees and the blind.

The veterans land measure, Mr. Mackenzie explained, is the result of more than a year's study by one of the committees set up to work on demobilization and re-establishment. An effort had been made to avoid the mistakes made after the first Great War in the Soldier Settlement Act.

8,000 Still There

Under that measure more than 25,000 settlers were placed on the land and only some 8,000 were still there. Successive adjustments had to be made on indebtedness and out of an average investment in the soldiers' farms of $4,600 the government had lost $4,000.

The new measures provides for a lower interest charge to settlers, 3½ per cent against five per cent, and for a grant from the government to reduce their initial debt burden.

It contemplates, the minister said, not only settlement where the soldier will be a farmer and nothing else but settlement on land near industrial communities where the soldier may obtain part of his living from other employment.

The financial aid given soldiers who decide to take advantage of its provisions is comparable to that given those who go into other occupations through unemployment insurance benefits, provision for education and technical training.

"The state contribution, subject to specific performance by the settler, is a grant equal to one-third of the cost of the land and buildings (less the Veterans' 10 per cent payment) and a further grant of the entire cost of the stock and equipment furnished the veteran," said Mr. Mackenzie."

Payment of $144

"On a maximum basis the annual payment required from a settler is $144.

"This sum, in addition to his annul taxes, is believed to be such as the average veteran can successfully make, while providing a reasonable standard of living for himself and his family."

He said evidence that men in the forces are interested in farming as a post-war occupation has been obtained.

The evidence indicates men in the army are more inclined to farming than those in the air force or the navy.

A questionnaire circulated through the service, the results of which have not been completely compiled, showed that 33,000 men out of 200,000 or 16 per cent want to go on the land. The percentage for the army is 21 per cent, for the air force seven per cent and for the navy six per cent.

"It is a hopeful and encouraging sign that the desire to go on the land does not seem to have any of the romantic illusions which captured the imagination of the soldiers of a generation ago," said Mr. Mackenzie.

"The men who have expressed a desire to take up farming, in the present instance at least, seem to be actuated by sober, serious appreciation of what it involved."

driving the flames and smoke down through the tunnels. One grimy laborer who had battled the flames and smoke for more than three hours, said that Ruttle was not in the plant when the blaze started, but arrived in time to take a long stick, and throw the main fuse switch, just outside the building. Fred Faulkner was attempting to do the same thing, when Ruttle picked up a piece of scantling with a spike in it and was able to reach the box. Both men then rushed into the building and fought side by side with Charles Shaw and the other employees, trying to check the flames.

Mr. Shaw had tried in vain to shut off the fans a short time before the power was cut, when he attempted to tear off connections inside the plant, but was forced out by heavy billows of smoke.

Roland Clifford was working on the third floor hanging leather and his fellow-workers feared he had been trapped. Several of them worked their way back up the stairs to assist him, and one of the workers Arthur Duggan, a mechanic, had to crawl on his hands and knees to the head of the stairs, through the smoke, after he had satisfied himself that Clifford was safe.

Small Pump Inadequate.

The small pump of the Omemee Volunteer Brigade was inadequate, so calls for assistance were sent to Lindsay and Peterborough, and both towns sent along a pumper and crews. Hose was strung from Pigeon River to the factory, a distance of 1,700 feet, and soon both departments had streams of water playing on the flames. In the meantime villagers, men, women and children had formed a bucket brigade trying to check the rush of the fire, and while they did valuable work, the flames kept spreading.

Early in the evening, flames menaced the two-storey frame home of Robert Smith, on the south side of Highway 7, immediately west of the factory, so tannery employees took up posts on the roof, removed all the furniture, and kept the house from burning. The east wall, however, was badly scorched by the searing heat.

While the fire laid two-thirds of the plant in ruins, it would have done considerably more damage were it not for the valiant work of the employees, who rallied around their boss in a heart-warming manner, and fought the flames until they were exhausted. Many of the men will be feeling the effects of the smoke and effort to-day; none perhaps any more than Charles Shaw, who seemed to be everywhere directing the fight, and working himself.

Main Industry of Village.

"Every single thing that isn't burned means that much less to rebuild," one old-timer said as he pointed out that the tannery was the main industry in the village, and on top of that was engaged in war work.

"Is there any suspicion of sabotage?" a reporter asked.

"Not a particle," was the reply given.

Fire Chief George Gimblett of Peterborough took five men, a mechanic and himself along answering the call, and the pumper threw a stream of water like that from a city main, despite the fact that it was forcing the water through at least 1,700 feet of hose.

Fire Chief H. McCullum of Lindsay brought the town's pumper, and five men, Jack Kraham, Jack Simonete, J. Stevenson, George Allan, and Ross McArthur, and these men worked until near midnight.

No statement could be obtained on estimates of the loss, but it will run over $100,000, and the belief exists in the village that immediate steps will be taken to rebuild the plant.

Chief Gimblett had Virgil Carr, master mechanic of the local Fire Department, to look after the pumper, and Joe Astles, electrician, came out later in his own car bringing 500 feet of extra hose which was needed. The firemen from Peterborough included Ed. Wigg, John Masters, Jack Wilson, and Tom Nice.

Billie Nurse, a youngster from Omemee and former Examiner carrier boy, was the first person to inform the Omemee Fire Department and he had the small pumper out of the building and was starting down the road when the others arrived.

Bugas said that Krug, after crossing the Detroit River from Ontario in a stolen rowboat with boards for oars, had gone to the woman's home. He remembered her address from parcels she had sent to the prison camp.

The woman, Bugas said, notified Stephan, and the latter made the subsequent arrangements.

Stephan's cafe formerly was named the "German Restaurant." The word "German" has been painted out, residents of the neighborhood saying this was done about the time of the United States' declaration of war on Germany.

The German-American Bund held regular meetings at the cafe, Bugas said.

Chief Constable Said Too Old For A.R.P. Work

An intimation from Mayor James Hamilton that the local A.R.P. organization did not want Chief Constable Samuel Newhall in connection with the police services department of the Air Raid Precautions the Chief Constable when it was made at Monday's meeting of the work because they thought he was too old for the job drew fire from Police Commission.

The Mayor's statement came after he had asked Chief Newhall to suggest a member of his department to work with the A.R.P. in regard to the police services section of that organization.

"The man for that position is myself," declared Chief Newhall. "No, Chief," replied Mayor Hamilton, "the organization does not want you. They want a younger member of the department detailed for this work. They feel that you are too old."

"That is ridiculous," retorted Chief Constable Newhall. "I am not too old. I can work as long as any member of the department, and I have had the experience in such work."

Mayor Hamilton repeated that the A.R.P. organization did not want the Chief Constable.

Retains Police Control.

"We are not trying to take away any of your control over police matters," he said, "but it is felt that there should be a younger man to act as liaison officer between the department and the organization as far as the A.R.P. work is concerned."

Chief Newhall again declared that it was nonsense to say that he was too old. "I have the reputation of being one of the best police chiefs in the country," he remarked. "I taught General Draper what he knows about police work."

"After 47 years in police service," he added, "I resent being told I am too old."

"Sometimes we do not realize that we are getting old," remarked Mayor Hamilton.

"If you are not satisfied that I am doing my job and am too old," the Chief Constable began, when he was interrupted by Judge S. L. Smoke, chairman of the Commission.

"Better be careful, Chief," he said. "Remember I called your bluff on that once before."

Chief Newhall finally named Officer Archie Menzies as qualified for the position and the incident ended there. The appointment is in the hands of the City Council and not a matter for the Police Commission.

A Reasonable Idea

The brain is the source of life energy within the body. That energy is distributed to every tissue by the spinal cord and nerves. The spinal nerves leave the spinal column through openings between the vertebrae. If an opening is deceased in size because of improper position of a vertebrae some nerve fibres will be constricted and there will be an abnormal amount of energy reaching the tissues supplied by those constricted nerves.

IT IS LOGICAL

To conclude that correction of mechanical defects along the spinal column will greatly facilitate the distribution of nerve impulses to all body parts. This means improved health.

Our manipulative treatments apply mechanical principles to the framework of the human body.

School Children Give Aid To War Victims

Situated just outside the city limits at the south-end of the city, the boys and girls of Confederation School have collectively and individually or in small groups, given splendid help to the people of Britain who suffer from air raids, through the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund, on many occasions.

In this they have set a mark which many could follow, and in to-day's list of acknowledgments for the fund comes their latest contribution through the principal, Mrs. H. B. Jackson amounting to $10.35, which was mostly raised by gathering paper and selling it, and then augmenting the amount received in this manner by a penny collection in the school itself. These boys and girls deserve much credit.

The Catholic Women's League, St. Peter's sub-division, of which Mrs. Frank Lynch is president, is also included in to-day's list, with a donation of $10.00 Two personal donations are listed, one of which was given "In memory of Mike." and once again comes the reflection that to honor one's friends by doing some good to others, is perhaps the finest way they would wish it done, if they themselves could give direction in the matter.

St. George's Day.

Next Thursday is the patron saint's day of England, one which in these troublesome times should claim the attention of every true patriot, for the British Commonwealth of Nations to-day stands as a veritable St. George in defence of the weaker nations, and in so doing the good rich blood of many of its finest youth has already been shed in order that the dragon of oppression as exemplified by those who have already enslaved many of their neighbors, may be wiped out of existence.

Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, has always celebrated this day for a long number of years past, and on this occasion is holding a social evening in the lodge rooms at 8 o'clock to which they extend an invitation to their friends to attend, all proceeds from which will come to the fund, and the suggestion has been made that any citizen who would wish to be associated with this effort if they were unable to attend, they could send a contribution to W. G. Shiner, 311 Frederick Avenue, to be included in this or leave it with the secretary of the fund at the Examiner Office.

Driver Given Seven Days

A plea that the courts should not be constantly put in the position of having to decide between police evidence on the one hand and the evidence of citizens on the other, when evidence by citizens in support of the police testimony was available was made by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court Monday afternoon in giving judgment in a charge of drunken driving against A. E. Pammett, Armour Road.

"I have been put in that position four or five times recently," added the Magistrate, "and I think something should be done about it."

Pammett was found guilty on the charge and sentenced by Magistrate Langley to seven days in jail, after Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., had stated that he was not asking for more than the minimum sentence. The truck he was driving was not his own property, so no order was given for it to be impounded.

When the afternoon session opened W. J. Arthur Fair, defence counsel, did not call his client into the witness box, but Mrs. Sarah Hartrick was called as the final defence witness. Her testimony was important, chiefly because she stated that she had seen Pammett drive away in his truck on the night in question.

Crown Attorney McElderry called Leonard Smith, 66 Monaghan Road, to give evidence, but after a few questions Magistrate Langley refused to allow Smith's evidence to be given.

"This evidence should have been given before," he said. "This man should have been called in the first place and not by way of reply."

In giving judgment, Magistrate Langley again referred to the Smith incident, pointing out that his testimony might have been very important and that he should have been called as a man who had no interest in the case. It was at this point that His Worship objected to being so often placed in the position of having to decide between police and civilian evidence when other testimony to support the former evidence. However, he said that on the evidence before him he was convinced that Pammett had been intoxicated and that he had driven the truck while in that condition.

Police Asked To Reduce Car Mileage

Peterborough's Police Department is being asked in a resolution passed by the Board of Police Commissioners at the regular meeting on Monday to cut down on the mileage of the police cars. The resolution points out the necessity of conserving tires and gasoline in view of the present situation.

Mayor James Hamilton brought the matter up when it was reported that the Police Department had used 366 gallons of gasoline in March.

"I have been wondering if there is not some way of cutting down the use of the police cars. When these are gone perhaps we will not be able to replace them," said the Mayor.

"It might help to cut out some of the taxi work they do," said Judge Smoke, chairman of the Board, adding that there was no use merely sending a resolution suggesting curtailed use of police cars. "Unless it comes as a direction from this Board, it will not receive any attention," he said.

There was some discussion as to the desirability of including in the resolution direct orders that the police cars must not be used for the transportaiton of members of the force except when on duty, but finally the suggestion of Mayor Hamilton that a general motion asking the Department to cut down the mileage should be passed was adopted.

"If they don't act on that during the next month then we can make a direct order," His Worship said.

The contract for supplying summer uniforms for eleven constables, motor cycle officer, inspector, and three suits for the plainclothes officers was awarded to Ed. Riley, while Grafton & Company received the order for supplying summer shirts and ties.

Present at the meeting were Judge S. L. Smoke, chairman, James Hamilton, and Magistrate E. A. Gee.

Carriers Sell $456.00 In Stamps During The Week Ending April 18

Many fine individual contributions make up the grand total of sales of War Savings Stamps by Examiner Carriers for the week ending April 18. These boys and girls brought in $456 in cash for another splendid week's effort in their own campaign. First prize-winner is Nancy Leith of 617 Gilmour Street, whose sales amounted to $68.25, a fine addition to the financial support of Canada's war effort. This is Nancy's second large sale in two weeks. Last week she turned in some $57.00, and commendation cannot be too high for such individual enterprise. Next in the running is a boy of the north end who is gradually coming to prominence in these efforts of Examiner Carriers, Stewart Brown of 154 Benson Avenue. His contribution to this week's sales was $43.50. George Clark, another energetic boy with a central route, is here in the money with $38.75, following by his running mate of last month's contest for the Examiner Gold Cup, Keith Orde, whose sales were $28.00. Donald Pagett brings in $20.00, and three boys are tied with $16.00 each; Ray Douglas, youngest Examiner carrier, Bob Shadgett and Rudolph Pollock.

Weldon Fanning obliges again with a further $15.00, Elva Laing with $12.75, and Elmer Doran, $11.00. East City is here again with sales of $10.00 for the week, brought in by Jim McIlvena. Grant Finnie, a regular contributor though not always in the high brackets, sold $9.50; Cyril Robinson, $9.25, and Douglas Burrows, $9.00. Wilbert Edgar is next with $8.00 for the week; Gerry Field and James McDonald of the west section with $7.50 each. No less than six carriers brought in totals of $6.00 each, these being: Bertha Bradley, Dan McIsaac, Michael McIsaac, Don McGillen, Gerald Rose, Bob Sugden. Wallace Manbeck made a good return with $5.75, and Eleanor Whittaker with $5.50. The total of sales by these volunteers is fast approaching the $10,000.00 mark, an astonishing and gratifying contribution from a group of youngsters whose patriotic efforts receive little or no tangible reward. Without complaining they assume the extra work involved each week and bring in the results, large or small, with a conviction of a job worth doing being done well.

Noted Increase Is Evident In Recruiting

Recruiting really speeded up at the Armouries on Monday. Thirty men were interviewed and nineteen completed their medical examination. Of these, a large proportion passed and were added to the strength of the Prince of Wales Rangers. Most of them are Peterborough men, but one came from Belleville, one from Trenton, two from Bancroft and three from Bowmanville. Some of these had received their call for military service, but a good percentage of those presenting themselves were not in the age-groups liable for compulsory service. They felt, rather, that the national peril was so grave that their duty as citizens required them to offer their services at once where they would be most useful—in the armed services. The local unit, the Prince of Wales Rangers is glad that most of these men chose to serve in its ranks, and that only a few were "lost" to the Pay Corps or the Ordnance. On Tuesday morning the number of applicants continued high and promised a large and steady flow of men into the Rangers.

N.C.O.'S PROMOTED

Two promotions among the senior N.C.O.'s appeared in Part II orders issuing from the Rangers' orderly room Monday. CQMS W. A. Curtain received promotion to the rank of Company Sergeant Major and Sergeant H. D. White to the rank of Quarter Master Sergeant. Curly has seen continuous service with the local regiment since he joined the Peterborough Rangers in May 1929. Many will remember his years service as Bugle Band Drum Major. In early summer 1941, he was awarded the Efficiency Decoration for twelve years continuous service. Before enlisting, Curly worked with the Maintenance staff at the C.G.E. "Whitie" is very well-known in softball and hockey leagues both as a player and manager and will be a great help in regimental sports. His association with the Armouries goes back to the days of the old bugle band and includes service as Quarter Master Sergeant at the Rangers' summer camp last year. Before joining the Army, Whitie was a casting machine operator at the Westclox for nine years.

Gilmour Family Long Connected With Peterboro

The name Walkerfield designating a street and private property on the west side of the city derives from the family of Chancellor G. P. Gilmour who visited Peterborough last night as guest speaker at the fifty-third annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

This fact was disclosed by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe in introducing Rev. Dr. Gilmour. He said he had obtained the information from several sources. One of those who had helped visualize the pioneer Gilmours was Miss M. A. Nicholls.

"Gilmour roots go down deep into the soil of Peterborough life," Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe said. "More than one hundred years ago Rev. John Gilmour was sent by the New England Company to work among the Indians of the Chemong or Mud Lake district. Part of his mission was also to work among the destitute whites. He was a man of intellectual gifts and eloquence, according to the accounts of him which have come down to us. It was he who founded Baptist work in that district, organized and built Gilmour Memorial Church on Chemong Road and Murray Street Baptist Church of which I have the honor to be the minister. He married Jane Walker who like himself had come from Scotland."

Walkerfield therefore relates to the patronymic of the maternal great grandmother of the Chancellor of McMaster University. The name Walkerfield at one time was a designation of all the property of the Kawartha Golf Club and the former Webber farms.

John Walker Gilmour was the son of Rev. John Gilmour and Jane Walker. He went to Montreal on one occasion to be groomsman for a friend who was being married there. The bridesmaid was a Miss Lonsdale. A year later they, too, married. This member of the Gilmour family was a pharmacist, and Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe said the store of Gilmour and Ormond at George and Hunter streets occupied the land where the Ritz Grill now stands. The grandfather of the Chancellor died in his forties. One of his sons was Joseph L. Gilmour, born and raised in this city, the father of the McMaster theologian. He was brought up in religion in Murray Street Church, and married Georgina Burnham, daughter of Dr. George Burnham. They had known each other from childhood.

Joseph L. Gilmour was educated at the universities of Toronto and Edinburgh, and was minister of Olivet Church, Montreal, and James Street Baptist Church, Hamilton. For years he was a member of the staff of McMaster. It was in Hamilton that Chancellor Gilmour was born and eventually after occupying the chair of Church History, he succeeded Dr. H. P. Whidden as head of the university.

Five Charges Are All Withdrawn

Five charges that had been laid following an early Sunday morning fracas in North Monaghan petered out at Monday afternoon's session of the police court. Charges laid by Gerard Devlin, against Edward and Ray Johnston, of assault occasioning actual bodily harm, and by the Johnstons against Devlin of being drunk in charge of a car and of assaulting two of the Johnston brothers were all withdrawn and it was intimated that a settlement had been made between the parties. John A. Bradshaw appeared for the Johnstons and W. J. Arthur Fair for the other complainant.

Java Refugee Coming To Gore's Landing

GORE'S LANDING, April 21 — (ENS). — Mrs. Curtis Washburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Ames, received a long distance telephone call from her husband in San Francisco on Sunday evening about 6.30 o'clock. Mr. Washburn had apparently just landed from an uneventful voyage from Australia. He had escaped from Java to Australia a short time before the Japanese invasion of that island.

Mr. Washburn expects to arrive in Gore's Landing next Thursday, returning to Akron, Ohio, the following Sunday.

Czech Gets 10 Days On Vagrancy Count

After the services of Steve Csumrik, Sr., had been secured to interpret the proceedings, Frederick Rak, who declared that he was a Czech, pleaded guilty in police court Monday afternoon to a charge of vagrancy and was sentenced to ten days in jail.

It was stated that the police were making an investigation into Rak's case and Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., remarked that the jail sentence would allow them an opportunity to make inquiries.

Rak is the man who was arrested in a C.P.R. tool shed in Asphodel township by Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock and Constable W. Parcels of Norwood.

He put up a battle before the officers could put the handcuffs on him and in the struggle Constable Grayling had his hands bitten.

Rak told the court that he had lived in Toronto for some time and had been in the Canadian army.

Corvette Captain Lauds Junior Seamen

"The submarine menace in the North Atlantic convoy lanes is all but defeated," said Lt. George Downie, active service skipper of a Canadian Corvette, at the bi-monthly meeting of the Lions Club held at the Kawartha Club Monday. Skipper Downie unfolded many exciting experiences of convoy duty and explained the manner of shepherding large numbers of tankers and freighters to and from England.

"Life on a Corvette is not too comfortable," said the speaker, "and it gets very monotonous at times, but the service clubs and organizations of Canada are playing a noble part in supplying magazines, games, cigarettes, fruit boxes and other luxuries to comfort the sailors when on long trips at sea."

Lt. Downie praised the type of Canadian boys manning the Corvettes and said that although many, previous to joining the service, had never seen the sea, they had proven themselves efficient from every viewpoint in the battle of the Atlantic.

Bert Cowan, a past member of the Lions Club, introduced the speaker and the clubs thanks was voiced by Rev. Cecil Moore.

Chairman of the carnival committee, Vic Gallon, advised that it had been decided to have a car as the grand prize at the carnival to be held at Riverside Park, August 13-14-15, and that other prizes would include a bicycle and a ladies' fur neckpiece.

A raffle, a feature at each meeting of the Lions Club, this time donated by Tony Johnston, was won by Fred Cripps.

Guests at the luncheon included Gordon Shaw, Dave Price and Bert Crump of the Peterborough Broadcasting Co., Bert Cowan, Tom Colby, Bob Pierson of United Farmers Co-operative Co., J. H. McCauley, foreman, Peterborough Examiner and Byron Bond of Canadian Conners Ltd.

Bill Hamilton entertained with several trombone solos.

Vice president Stan Darling, who was chairman of the meeting, made a presentation of a key award to Jim Dutton for his membership work.

get you down. O.K. Sergeant—I mean Loot—let her go! Boy, is this ice-cream good!"

The general tenor of the drive up was that of an undersprung car with an oversprung freight. Myra was feeling the strain long before the end was in sight. Luckily her brother was the least valuable member of the family. He had the quiet, capable qualities of his mother and had missed the garrulous strain that stemmed from his father, Danny, through to Peggy.

He took his build, too, from his mother's side of the family. While his father was under five and a half feet, Michael was an inch or so over six feet, and with a physique that justified his height. His dark Irish handsomeness would have been too perfect a touch if it had not been tempered with a toughness of fibre underneath it in his relations with men and a hitherto insurable shyness in the company of women other than those of his own family.

Myra's frequent and good-humored complaint about her parents was that they had given her most of the brains of the family, but none of the good looks.

The other car that was speeding up to the Laurentians over the new highway presented a very different picture. Nigel Monkhouse had picked up Fay Ransom at Ferdy's request and was driving in a state of acute mental discomfort. He had in the meantime met Mr. Ransom, and had discovered that his own father had gone to school with him.

Nigel could not understand why in a place so comparatively small as Montreal, he had missed meeting a girl so strikingly attractive as Fay Ransom. He was unaware that she had spent very little of her life in that city, that after her father's divorce and until her mother's death she had spent most of her time in the States.

His second meeting with Fay Ransom had knocked him completely off his emotional balance. He had anticipated it for two days and had let his imagination play with that first vision he had seen on the small wooden station platform on the lake shore that Monday of the same week.

But he had found the reality more disturbing than the vision, and though normally he was quite at ease with girls, he set off on the drive to the hills feeling as awkward as a schoolboy smitten with first catfish love.

What made it worse was that Fay Ransom noticed it and a slow smile flickered on her lips. She had seen the same symptoms in other men and recognized them. Strangely enough, it did not flatter her. She felt a little sorry for Nigel Monkhouse. She had looked forward to a week-end free from emotional entanglements. They only complicated one's pleasure.

But she admitted to herself that at least he was quite attractive in several ways. First, he was not too handsome, and he was not aggressively confident—two of the main qualities that she had found admirable in any man.

She made an effort to enliven their conversation by asking him questions about the army, but it wasn't a great success. Something had happened to Nigel Monkhouse which had tied his tongue as well as his heart in knots.

Letters May Be Writter Quickly

Sample Letters Show You How

"How letters do pile up," worries Joyce, ready to put off writing again because she can't think how to begin, what to say.

A great pity to lose friends that way! Easy to write quickly, charmingly with hints from sample letters by good writers.

No hesitating then over that note of thanks to Margie for her gift. Trippingly you write, "Darling of you to send me that exquisite lamp—it's a bright spot in my room."

With correct forms before you, you quickly answer the tea invitation written on Mrs. Grey's visiting card. Using the third person, you begin, "Miss Joyce Jones accepts with pleasure . . ."

That letter of introduction is simple when you have a guide at hand. Tactfully you write, "An old friend, Alice Graham, is moving to Middleton. She's devoted to music—I'm sure you two will find much in common."

Where to get good sample letters? There are lots of them in our 32-page booklet! Has letters for business and social occasions, invitations; tips on bright interesting phrases, colorful words. Right beginnings, closings, correct stationery.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to Examiner, Home Service, Petergorough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOME SQUEEZES FANCY

MANY an attempt at a squeeze play fails because the squeezed opponent can discard after the declarer or dummy. That obstacle can be overcome in some cases, however, by building a more or less complex and fancy situation based on retaining the last trump to threaten the setting up of a small card in some side suit by ruffing. Advanced students of the game usually call such a play a "trump squeeze" or "ruffing squeeze."

North: ♠ Q J 10 6 5 4 ♥ 8 5 ♦ Q 10 3 ♣ 10 6

West: ♠ None ♥ Q J 6 2 ♦ 8 7 5 4 ♣ K Q 8 5 4

East: ♠ A K 2 ♥ 10 9 7 ♦ J 9 6 ♣ 9 7 3 2

South: ♠ 9 8 7 3 ♥ A K 4 3 ♦ A K 2 ♣ A J

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠

Where a club was led against this contract, in a stag duplicate at the Whist club in New York, it was held to 4-Spades, as a club trick was lost in addition to the spade tops. Two declarers, however, were favored by East leading the spade K, A and 2, and then tried to build a squeeze, but only one of them succeeded.

The unsuccessful declarer, after taking the third spade, cashed the heart tops, ruffed a heart, took three diamonds and two spades. When the last spade was led, North also had two clubs and the dummy hand held the heart 4 and the club A-J. West had the heart Q and the club K-Q. If West had been obliged to discard first on the spade, he would have been squeezed, but South had to, so West could follow his discard, which was the heart 4, West tossing the Q. The club J then had to lose the last trick to the K.

The other declarer, Charles H. Porter, former national champion from Cincinnati, built a different squeeze. After winning the third spade, he took three diamonds and a fourth spade, then led a fifth spade, discarding the club J. If West had now discarded one of his four hearts, Mr. Porter would have cashed the heart tops, and ruffed a heart, setting up the 4, to be cashed after using the club A for an entry. West, instead, discarded the club K, hoping thereby to lure a finesse, but Mr. Porter immediately led to the club A, dropping the Q, cashed the heart tops, ruffed a heart and took the final trick with the club 10, to make an extra trick and top on the deal.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ A 10 8 5 2 ♥ Q 9 6 ♦ A 8 6 ♣ A Q

West: ♠ J 7 4 ♥ A J 8 7 2 ♦ K 7 ♣ K J 8

East: ♠ 6 3 ♥ K 10 5 4 3 ♦ 9 4 3 2 ♣ 3 2

South: ♠ K Q 9 ♥ None ♦ Q J 10 5 ♣ 10 9 7 6 5 4

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

How should North play for maximum results on this deal after East leads the heart 4 against his 4-Spades?

Three Norwood Societies Meet

NORWOOD, April 21—(ENS). —The Willing Workers met at the home of Mrs. H. G. Carleton. Reports were given by the various officers, and a very interesting letter from Pte. John Hamblin, now in England, was read. A nice amount of work was handed in and a fresh supply given out. A program of songs, contests, and games were much enjoyed by all. Candy was served by the hostess at the close.

Mrs. Harry Morgan was hostess on Thursday evening for the Young Womens Auxiliary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in charge of Mrs. Harry Godin.

The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Rutn Wildman and a reading from the Glad Tidings, "What I owe to Christian Missions" was read by Miss Isobel McMillan. A circle of prayer was led by Mrs. Alfred Bongard and Mrs. Morgan gave the topic from the book "The Healing of the Nations." This deals with a missionary and his wife who paid a visit to the Dutch East Indies, and their impressions of this visit.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Morgan and Miss Lila Burgess.

The April meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Earl Hamblin. The opening exercises were conducted by Miss Pauline Weir. A reading on "Christian Citizenship' was read by Mrs. K. Edmunds. An Easter program was presented by Mrs. John McConnel and her group. Mrs. Armar Weir gave the Bible reading and led in prayer. Appropriate readings were given by Miss Maysie Buck, Mrs. Hamblin and Mrs. McConnell. At the close of the meeting lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed.

Bomber Misses

Vichy, April 21 (AP)

THE French popular party announced today that an attempt had been made last night to assassinate Jacques Doriot, its collaborationist leader, during a speaking engagement in the Municipal Theatre at Rennes, in Brittany.

A bomb hurled from the balcony of the theatre landed in front of the stage Doriot was finishing his speech. A woman picked it up and tossed it into the orchestra pit where it exploded without injuring anyone.

The party statement said the bomb - thrower had not been identified.

Had Bad Stomach, Dizzy Spells And Headaches; Praises Syntona

Now Eats Food That Used To Cause Gas Pains, Nausea and Heartburn — Sleeps Better and Feels Good All Day.

MR. M. F. WOLD, 162 King William Street, Hamilton, Ontario, is glad to pass his experience along to others, for he knows how much it has meant to him to find relief from gas, acid risings, and other stomach distress that kept him awake nights and also relief from constipation, backache, dizzy spells, and headaches.

"I had been suffering for some time with constipation and sour, upset stomach," said Mr. Wold. "Acid risings would come up in my throat after meals and spots came before my eyes, which made me feel very dizzy and nauseated. I had a bad taste in my mouth and I knew my breath was bad. Often I'd get headaches and an aching pain across my back so bad that I couldn't sleep nights. As a result I felt tired, listless and had no appetite.

"One day I read in the paper how Syntona was helping so many others, and decided to try it. Almost from the first my stomach felt better and I found it just perfect for my bowels. I enjoy every meal now without having attacks of acid risings and sourness. I haven't had a dizzy spell or headache since, the pain has left my back, and I sleep soundly at night. In the morning I feel rested and have much more energy than I had before. I am convinced Syntona is a great medicine and can recommend it highly to others."

Let this grand compound of Nature's Herbs and Roots help you, too. Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Petain's Power Fading In Vichy

This new picture to come via Vichy, France, shows Marshall Henri Petain, now a fading political figure, as he visited a country fair and patted a prize sheep. Ascendant in the political firmament at present is Pierre Laval who has for many months advocated even closer co-operation between Vichy and Hitler.

With The Boy Scouts

A good turn out was witnessed at St. Andrew's as the members of the Sacred Heart, All Saints, Murray St. and St. Andrew's got together to practice up their parts for the coming Scout Craft Displays in the market hall. We understand that Murray St. were not so strong on this matter and we trust that they will turn out in full numbers at the next meeting which will be held in the Sacred Heart headquarters on Wednesday of this week April 22 at 7.30 p.m. sharp. Boys in the above units as detailed for this display should make it their duty to be present.

Scouter Ingham is putting a lot of work to this display and it is up to every boy to give him their whole hearted support.

Church Parade

We understand that St. Andrew's are holding a joint church parade on Sunday May 3, one week from next Sunday at which every troop will be invited to attend.

It will be held at the evening service with Dr. Young as speaker. The Cubs, Scouts, Brownies and Girl Guides are attending. It would be nice to see as many as possible of all units attend this affair, an appropriate start for our Scout Week in Peterborough.

Mothers' Auxiliary

St. John's Mothers' Auxiliary are holding their regular monthly meeting in the Parish Hall at St. John's on Thursday next, April 23 at 3 p.m. All parents of Cubs and Scouts are cordially invited to attend.

All Saints

Last Friday the meeting was somewhat disrupted when a S.O.S. call was received from the salvage centre. One half of the Troop was sent over to help the ladies in their work, the remaining half taking up morse signalling. This section of our studies is advancing rapidly.

At a coming up ceremony held recently Murray Wight, Bobby LeBarr, and Gordon Long were welcomed into the Troop from the Pack by Scouter Art Rose. We wish these boys good Scouting along the trail.

St. John's

The Troop meeting took the form of practices for the coming Scout Craft Displays, boys from George St. and St. Luke's joined with us but we regret to report that Mark St. was absent. As there will be another practice on Friday of this week we would ask that all boys be on hand in good time. Attention please Mark St.: You are supposed to be with us in this show, why not do your part

We notice that Bob Crocker is now wearing His Majesties' uniform and is a sergeant in the Prince of Wales Rangers. Good luck, Bob.

Scout Craft Display

A word to the wise and a reminder to the delinquent. Do you all realize that it is only two short weeks until the Scout Craft Show opens. You know that this is being held in the Market Hall and it is up to each and every one to do their part in making this show a real success. This should mean that every Cub and Scout in the district will enter at least one article for show and that every unit will do its part in the active display work. It is also up to every unit to put on some side display in any way they wish. We have lots of room, you may have lots of ideas, why not put some of them into practice. Don't forget the dates of the show. Entries received on Monday, May 4th and up to Tuesday evening. It is expected that we will have a parade on Tuesday but final arrangements of this have not yet been drawn up.

GEORGE STREET

For the first time in its history the George Street Scout group held a going up ceremony for Ken Heard, Don Delahaye and Brownie Monaghan. It was a very impressive ceremony to all those ho participated and in the years that are to come these young fellows will be able to look back with pride upon the fact that they were the starting point of a closer unity between the Pack and the Troop.

Scouter Olmstead welcomed the new Scouts and we wish them happy hunting along the Scout trail.

Owing to the sickness of Akela, Baloo as in charge of the pack, ably assisted by Bagheera. Some 24 boys were present and a good collection of paper and magazines was realized. The boys were given a treat afterwards.

We are glad to here that Akela is getting better and will be looking for him among the Pack in the near future.

ST. LUKES

The Pack met in the jungle with the moonlight shining through the tree tops. Following the opening ceremonies, practice exercises were continued. The third den has been completed to add to the Jungle atmosphere. The last group practice was well attended. Miss Langley kindly gave her services at the piano to give help to the sing song.

The next group practice will be held tonight, April 21st, at Mark St. Church. The Cubs are requested to assemble at the Church at 6.45 on Tuesday and then proceed to Mark St. Church.

SACRED HEART

Tuesday night we found the Scouts outside on the lawn for the first part of their meeting, where all the games were held. Three cornered and straight tug-of-war, skin the snake and other outdoor games were on the line. Later, inside the hall, Scouter took the tenderfoot lads in their tests while the others were doing second class signalling. Camp fire was dispensed with for the evening.

Thursday night those who are taking up the special work in connection with the scout craft show, journeyed up to St. Andrew's to practice for this event together with the others. Next Wednesday night the Troop will play host to those Scouts from St. Andrew's, All Saints' and Murray St. Troops.

Friday night 10 new scouts-to-be were given special instructions in tenderfoot work in order to get them ready for investitures.

Saturday, we find the boys, or at least part of them, collecting rags for the troop funds. While only about half of the Troop turned up for this nevertheless almost a quarter of a ton of rags have been collected.

Preparations are almost completed for the Parents Banquet, which is to be held on Tuesday, April 28. This will be an event for both mothers and fathers and we hope that they will keep this date open and will be present for this occasion. We cordially invite all other leaders and would appreciate it if they would let us know if they are coming so that we may have reservations for them.

We would appreciate it if those boys who have been scouts before and who have parts of uniforms that they would like to sell to get in touch with Scouter Dominik, Phone 7756. Mostly hats, pants and belts are needed.

Millbrook's Junior St. Thomas' WA Honors Archdeacon, Mrs. Simpson

MILLBROOK, April 21.—A pleasing event of Thursday afternoon, following the regular business meeting of the Junior W.A. of St. Thomas' Anglican church, was the social gathering with the rector, and his wife, Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson and Mrs. Simpson, as guests of honor, their removal from Millbrook to their new parish, Blackstock, taking place by the end of this month.

Other guests for the occasion included Misses Jean and Helen Lough, of Ida, sisters of Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, president of the senior W.A., Miss Rose Macnamara, secretary, and Mr E. H. Barnes, superintendent of the Sunday School.

Anne Stinson, president of the junior organization, invited the guests of honor to seats on the platform, and read an appreciative address, after which Archdeacon Simpson was presented with initialed linen handkerchief and Mrs. Simpson with a covered crystal ordu dish, Anne Marie Charlebois and Francis Handley offering the gifts. The rector spoke briefly, expressing the gratitude felt by his wife and himself for the kindly thoughtfulness which had prompted the gifts, and also congratulating the girls and their superintendent, Miss Bela McCorry, on the efficient manner in which the meeting had been conducted, together with the educational value of such instruction, which is being given through the junior work.

Mr. Barnes also addressed the juniors and their guests, among other items on the program being duets sung by Francis and Barabara Handley and Jane and Anne Stinson. The young hostesses served lunch before the gathering dispersed.

Senator William Buchanan, of Lethbridge, Alberta, is the guest of his nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Payne, over the week-end.

The initial meeting for organization in connection with the Home Nursing Reserve classes was held in the waiting-room on Thursday at 8 p.m., with a large attendance of interested women from the village and countryside, and fifty-three enrolled to take the instruction. Mrs. J. L. Byam, Reg. N., formerly of the General Hospital staff, Toronto, is in charge, and for the next four weeks the classes will be on Friday at 8 p.m.

Following the first four lectures, the students will be divided into groups, under separate instructors, to allow for individual practical work. Miss Josie Sutton, R.N. the local doctors, and other local gradauate nurses, with outside helpers, will give the lectures, and assist with the smaller groups in imparting necessary instruction. The whole scheme is under the Red Cross organziation, and is intended to train thousands of women in first aid, making up for the shortage of trained nurses, and ready to give efficient help in case of an emergency, epidemic, or otherwise.

US Gas Ration To Allow 5 Gals. Week

Severe Cut In Supply, Plan To Use Coupons, In May

WASHINGTON, April 22 (AP)—Informed government officials said today a plan for rationing gasoline on the eastern seaboard would be announced soon, to become effective some time in May and allowing each motorist "around five gallons a week."

Details of the plan were withheld but a spokesman for the office of price administration predicted the cut in gasoline supplies would be "drastic."

The permitted amount for each motorist would be purchasable on presentation of some type of ration card but the ration books to be issued under the sugar distribution plan would not be used, it was understood.

A reduction of one-third in deliveries of gasoline to service stations was ordered only last week because of increasing shortage of tankers.

Affected by the rationing plan will be the 17 eastern seaboard states and the District of Columbia now included in the gasoline "curtailment area" extending from Maine to Florida.

Three separate rationing plans have been developed by the O.P.A. after weeks of study, officials said, with the ultimate choice depending upon the supply picture.

They Couldn't Sleep

GUELPH, Ont., April 22—(CP).—Reveille at the Canadian (Active) Army Basic Training Centre near here sounds now at 6 a.m. instead of 6.30 and the reason for the change is "something new in army life" for Lieut. M. F. Gladman, adjutant.

He said today that a group of Western Canada farmers training at the centre couldn't stay in bed until 6.30 a.m. after years of getting up at 5 a.m. to begin farm work. Each morning several of them would be up long before reveille, sitting on the edges of their beds, talking and waiting. So the change was made.

Separate Peace Claimed Afoot In Italy

LONDON, April 22—(CP).—Roundabout dispatches quoting sources in contact with Italy disclosed what may prove a new phase of an Axis peace offensive to-day.

The News Chronicle's Ankara correspondent said that according to a "Rome diplomatic message" secret negotiations were being undertaken in Italy for a separate peace.

The Lisbon correspondent of the same paper quoted a South American diplomat just arrived from Rome as saying. "If the country (Italy) were not occupied by the Germans a separate peace with the Allies would be the easiest thing that could happen."

Yesterday, the Tokyo radio quoted Toyohiko Kagawa, the Japanese Christian leader, as saying Japan's Christians were praying "for an early conclusion of the war."

The Ankara dispatch said the exchange of British and Italian prisoners recently, and the transfer of Italian residents to Italy from British-conquered East Africa "have encouraged the Italians to believe that Britain still does not hate the Italians in the manner in which the Nazis are loathed and despised."

"Italians feel that the coming of the summer months, when the Germans will be fully occupied on the Russian front may be the moment when Italians may safely launch their peace plans because the Germans will not be in a position to check the Italians by force.

"It's a fact that most Italians want peace at any price and Mussolini's prestige now is so low that if the royal family decided upon a peace offer neither the weakened Fascist Party nor the Germans could prevent the offer from being made."

Pick 3-Man Group For Salary Job

OTTAWA, April 22 (CP)—Revenue Minister Gibson today announced appointment of a three-man advisory committee to help administer the wartime salaries order passed with the intention of stabilizing managerial, executive and other salaries in wartime.

Members of the committee are:—

Mr. Justice J. D. Hyndman, administrator of rentals appeals for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board who will act as chairman;

Dr. Charles Camsell, Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources;

J. F. MacNeill, K.C., parliamentary counsel to the Senate.

"In order to assist in the determination of whether the bonus provisions of the wartime salaries order have been offended, whether a promotion is a bona fide promotion, or whether, in the case of munitions, an increase in salary should be granted, in the interests of the war effort, an advisory committee has been established by order-in-council," Mr. Gibbon's statement said.

Six Breadless Weeks Face France

Blame Black Marts; Ukraine Seeding Struggle For Nazis

By OVID MARTIN
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, April 22—(AP).—The United States Agriculture Department, in a summary of recent cables on European food developments, told today of increasing difficulties confronting Germany and Nazi-occupied countries in producing and supplying their people with food and fibre crops.

Unoccupied France is said to be facing six breadless weeks before the new wheat harvest because of diversion of grain by the black markets, illegal use of wheat for feeding livestock and poultry, counterfeit ration cards, and failure of farmers to deliver the quantities expected.

Recent restrictions in Germany upon the milling of wheat and rye indicate, the Department said, that German grain stocks have declined to a level where economies must be affected in order to ensure against a poor crop at home this year and the possibility of supplies from southeastern Europe falling below expectations.

Agricultural production in Denmark, less than half of normal in 1941, is said to be seriously threatened this year by the late spring, shortages of fertilizers seed and labor.

The department said Germany hoped to obtain the production of sufficient food in occupied Ukrainian Russia to meet the needs of the Nazi occupation forces and for the bare maintenance of the local population.

"Reports indicate," the department said, "that spring sowing in the Ukraine is no easy task owing to the shortage of machinery and horses taken or destroyed by the Russians. Despite repairs and resumed production of some farm implements spring work must be chiefly manual. It is impossible to till the land thoroughly owing to insufficient plows."

100-1 Chance Of Homes Lasting 1942 Intact From Nazi Bombs, London Assures Britons

LONDON, April 22—(CP).—The Government told the householders of this nation, many of whom are within range of German cannon and all of whom are within range of Nazi bombers, today that they have an even 100-to-1 chance of coming through the critical year from May 1, 1942, to May 1, 1943, with their private goods and chattels intact.

Under the War Damage Act, which provides for insurance of the homes and belongings of residents of Britain against bombs, shells and other enemy action, the rate for the coming year has been fixed at £1 for every £100 coverage taken.

The insurance is handled for the Government through a committee of Lloyd's.

Lost Brighton Flier Paid Credit For Crippling Blow At Augsburg

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 22—(CP Cable).—The navigation officer of the do-or-die R.A.F. squadron which smashed deep into Germany to batter the Augsburg motor works last Friday was a Canadian, who was among those who failed to return, it was revealed today.

He was FO. Donald S. R. Hepburn of Brighton, Ont.

Four other Canadians are known to have participated in this historic damaging raid which a high source described as "one of the most amazing air feats of the war."

One of the section leaders yesterday recounted for Prime Minister Churchill the manner in which the 12 Lancaster bombers started out. Five of them returned.

He told how they flew "wing tip to wing tip," for 600 miles, fighting off all opposition at 30 feet above the ground. To clear hills about Augsburg they hopped up to 60 feet. At the southern German city they scored direct hits with time bombs on the U-boat Diesel engine works.

Canadians who returned from Augsburg were PO. Ian Colquhoun, Edmonton, Sgt.-Gnr. John Ratcliffe, Welland, Ont., PO. Gilbert Hooey, Toronto, and Flt.-Sgt. William Henry Keane, Quebec. They were all lavish in their praise of Hepburn, now posted missing.

A nephew of the Canadian Army Protestant Chaplain, Lt.-Col. Hepburn, the youthful Canadian navigator worked out the course which took the bombers to Augsburg with a minimum of opposition difficulty.

"He was mainly responsible for the success of the show as far as this squadron is concerned," said an R.A.F. Wing Commander. "It was a masterly bit of work on his part, quite consistent with everything he had undertaken."

"No finer chap ever set foot in any mess," he added.

"He Got Us There Safely."

Colquhoun, captain of one of the giant bombers, said "Hepburn work-

French Roused On Labor Hostage

VICHY, April 22—(AP).—Lt.-Gen. Ernest Von Schaumburg, German commander in the greater Paris area, announced today that more than 15 persons have been shot in reprisal for recent alleged attacks on German occupation forces in the Nazi-occupied capital.

He warned that 36 more would be executed if the attackers were not found within a week at most.

In addition to 16 persons listed as executed for attacks on April 2 and April 20, Von Schaumburg's announcement stated that "a certain number" of others were sent before firing squads for the assassination of a German sentry April 2.

Simultaneously it was reported from Paris that efforts were being made to obtain the release of Jean Blanchard, an important leader who was among 20 hostages taken by the Germans after the British commando raid last month on St. Nazaire.

Blanchard was general secretary of the metal workers union and the news that he is being held created considerable stir in labor circles.

Francois Blancho, mayor of St. Nazaire, was released a few days ago after a period of detention.

(Foreign diplomatic circles in Switzerland heard the Vichy government was seeking a reprieve for all 20 hostages, who first had been sentenced to be shot but whose execution was not carried out pending negotiations.)

Push Through 6 Miles Into Reserves

Berlin Denies April Date For Offensive 'Fuehrer To Set It'

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer.

KUIBYSHEV, April 22—(AP).—Warfront dispatches reported today that the Red Army had wedged open a second hole through Finnish front lines in Karelia, north-east of Leningrad thrusting by night six miles deep into positions manned by reserves.

A Berlin broadcast heard in London to-day denied that any official German spokesman ever prophesied that the German offensive on the Russian front would start in April.

"This is merely propaganda," the Berlin announcer said. He declared that "the date of the offensive will be determined solely by the Fuehrer."

The Red army was declared, moreover, to have widened further the original gap driven in the Finnish defence line, pushing doggedly ahead in small but steady advances despite repeated Finnish counter attacks.

The Russian dispatches did not disclose the exact location of either penetration, but said both were in neighboring sectors. Fighting was described as violent, with the Finns massing troops in an attempt to check the Soviet onsurge.

The Red army was said to have hurled its own reserve units into the night battle in which the second

British Forced Back Anew On Burma Front

NEW DELHI, April 22—(CP).—British Headquarters announced to-day that British forces, bolstered by Chinese, had completed a fighting withdrawal across the Pinchaung River in Burma in the Yenangyaung region "but not without some losses of personnel and equipment."

Fighting continues in the eastern zone of the Irrawaddy River front "in and around Yenangyaung," the communique said. It said the Japanese had counter-attacked against Chinese forces which covered the Pinchaung withdrawal.

Japs Using Tanks.

LONDON, April 22—(CP).—Severely checked by the Chinese-British counter-attack at Yenangyaung to the north-west, the Japanese forces in Burma were reported to-day to be throwing tanks and heavy guns into a fierce thrust against the Chinese positions at Pyinmana.

The long-range objective of this assault was Mandalay, but informed London sources pointed out the more immediate enemy goal probably is to break through the Chinese lines into the plain south of Meiktilo. Meiktilo lies on the railway 75 miles north and slightly west of Pyinmana, and the same distance south and slightly west of Mandalay.

Success in this drive not only would ensure the Japanese railway communications with Rangoon, their chief reinforcement and supply port, but would flank the British position at Taundwingyi north-west of Pyinmana along a line running to Yenangyaung. It also would split the Allied forces now committed to defence of the triangular area based on Yenangyaung, Pyinmana, and Mandalay.

EXTRA!

OTTAWA.—(CP)—Four men were killed in an explosion at the MacDonald Chemical Works, Waterloo, Que., early this afternoon, the Munitions and Supply Department announced.

WASHINGTON.—(CP)—State Secretary Hull asked for comment on a reported statement by Spain's foreign minister that the Spanish Government planned to contribute 1,000,000 soldiers to Germany's war effort, if needed to crush Russia, today said he thought it only just to all concerned to await the actual facts of the situation before making any comment.

Swoop Amid Fort Area At Boulogne

Damage Two Trawlers Study Defences; Paratroops Aid

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, April 22—(AP).—British commandos knifed through the Nazi coastal defences near heavily fortified Boulogne this morning and drove German troops back before them in a brilliant scouting raid which struck once more at the foundations of the enemy's defence system in Western Europe.

British combined operations headquarters announced that the raiding force withdrew after two hours in which, for the third time since February 27, they shook German confidence that the western door to the continent had been nailed shut so that Hitler's army could hurl its force against Russia without fear of a possible second front.

The attack was delivered soon after Field Marshal Gerd von Runstedt took command of all German troops in Northern France, and on the heels of reports that Nazi coastal garrisons from North Cape to the Bay of Biscay had been reinforced heavily.

One report said these reinforcements included a division of parachute troops.

Probe Nazi Layout.

Observers said the official announcement that the raiders were ashore for two hours indicated that they had time for a valuable survey of the fortifications the Germans have been strengthening.

In the first combined operations raid since the attack on St. Nazaire, the commandos ranged throughout the French coastal region testing the German defences and collecting military information, the announcement said.

The naval force accompanying the commandos damaged one German trawler which attempted to intercept the British force. Another

19 Charges Laid In Two Strikes

MIDLAND, Ont., April 22.—(CP)—Fourteen members of a committee which represented about 400 Midland shipyards workers who returned to work today after a week-long strike have been served with summons to appear in court April 30 on charges of participating in an illegal strike.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 22.—(CP)—Five workers of the Kingston Ship Building Company appeared in police court today charged with illegally going on strike, contrary to provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

They were remanded a week. No evidence was taken.

In the meantime practically all the 300 men who had staged a walkout in sympathy with Midland Ship Yard workers, were back at their jobs this morning.

Red Snows Vanishing Fast

South Front Fit For Drive, But No Huns Move

By HENRY CASSIDY

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, April 22—(AP)—Soviet Russia's snowline is rolling steadily northward, laying bare a large part of the Soviet-German arena, but the Red Army stands ready for the next major clash of arms and the Nazis seem in no hurry to start it.

In a flight over the Caucasus and Volga regions back to Kuibyshev after a visit in Teheran, I have just had the rare opportunity of a bird's eye view of the terrain.

The land now is fit for a large-scale operations in the south, though the long-promised German spring offensive has failed to come off. The initiative in local jabs, which characterized the winter campaign, remains in the hands of the Russians.

It is only at Leningrad and along the northern front that winter still is holding sway and, strangely, it is there that much of the action now is taking place.

A review of dispatches indicates that the Red Army's winter counter attacks disrupted to some extent the Germans' plans for a spring offensive, forcing them to bring up reserves and delaying efforts to get a major push underway.

There have been indications the Germans now are moving more troops and planes to the front in several sectors but the Red Army itself has not been idle.

Jap Peace Prayers Perilous For Allies

Any Halt In Hostilities Now Seen As Boon To Axis Out To Consolidate Gains

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

Word that Japanese Christians are praying for peace has been broadcast to the world by the Tokyo news agency, Domei, thereby probably inviting us to draw the conclusion that the Japanese government has started a peace movement.

This extraordinary bit of propaganda by Domei follows the warning given by Archibald MacLeish, Director of the Office of Facts and Figures, that the Axis would launch a peace offensive this summer. MacLeish speaking in New York on Monday, declared this was "as much a Nazi weapon as a Nazi mechanized division," and urged that this type of Axis propaganda be combatted.

Any peace campaign by the Axis powers now is filled with peril for the Allies, since it is motivated by a desire to be free to consolidate their ill-gotten conquests and get set for further brigandage. The Hitlerian brotherhood has made its ambitions too clear for there to be any misunderstanding. Japan, in particular, within recent days has been screaming to high heaven that it is going to crush America and Britain.

This is no time for the Allies to join in prayers for peace, that is, a negotiated peace. The war for survival in which we are engaged must be fought to a definite conclusion—until the powers of evil have been uprooted and utterly destroyed. No half-way business this time.

Hitler would fall on the neck of any Allied Power that suggested peace now. So would Hirohito. And why shouldn't they when it would give them a chance to absorb the vast territories which they have stolen, and rebuild their war machine for further slaughter?

Unless we want to sell ourselves into bondage we must give the enemy no respite. There's danger even in listening to the peace chant from the Axis, for it is calculated to lull us into a feeling of false security.

Our only possible safety, and our only chance to rebuild this world for the benefit of all peoples—Allied and Axis alike — is to continue fighting until the aggressors have been utterly smashed and the leaders of aggression have been placed under restraint.

Pierre Laval, cursed by millions, may have sold himself down the river and done France and he United Nations a good turn by taking over the Vichy French government as an Axis-backed "collaborationist."

When Laval again elbowed himself into the Vichy regime as old Marshal Petain's "chief of government" last week, the countries fighting Germany, Italy and Japan took it as bad news. On the surface it seems so. Analyzed, there are bright spots.

Two points stand out:

1. Petain retained direct control of the French fleet and all armed forces by making Admiral Francois Darlan Commander in Chief, reporting directly to him. Laval, as premier, normally could control the French forces.

2. Laval, marked himself as such a whole-hearted collaborationist, willing and anxious to work with Germany, that most of the French population certainly are in mental revolt against him, pending the time when they can shoulder arms and march with rescuing invaders against the Germans.

So far as is known:

It is a fact the French fleet has not been turned over to the Ger-

Troops Work 10,000 Acres

Out To Produce 50 Million Daily Rations

LONDON, April 22—(CP)—The growing season of 1941, a period of trial and error in the British Army's food offensive, produced the equivalent of 25,000,000 daily rations of vegetables. For 1942 the army—and this includes the gardeners among the Canadian troops in Britain—plans an all-out offensive aimed at producing 50,000,000 daily rations.

The hope is that at least 10,000 acres will be cultivated by troops under the direction of Lt.-Col. J. Clark, assistant director of army agriculture.

Last year, at Canadian Corps headquarters, soldier-gardeners produced enough vegetables to keep headquarters supplied. Lord Tweedsmuir, a captain and son of Canada's late governor-general, started the garden project at corps and before it was completed men of all ranks, from Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton down, had taken part.

"More and more lawns are to be dug up to grow food and the army is determined to do its utmost to produce a much larger proportion of its own vegetable rations," said Col. Clark.

"We have already added nearly 2,000 acres to last year's figure of 4,000 under cultivation by soldiers and we hope to reach 10,000. This may well be a vital harvest year."

ESCAPED NAZI'S DETROIT AIDE WILL FACE A CHARGE OF TREASON

Deed To Cost His Cafe, Citizenship

Detroit German Weeps In Jail Cell; Texas Arrest Fizzles

DETROIT, April 22 (AP)—Chubby Max Stephan, who allegedly succored a German war prisoner, worried in a county jail cell today over the calamity suddenly brought upon him.

Once a hearty, smiling fellow who cracked jokes with patrons of his riverfront bier stube, the 49-year-old German native is depressed and plainly fearful.

The state had taken away his liquor licence. His cafe is threatened with being closed. The United States government is considering whether to try him for treason, for which death is the extreme penalty. So Max, his cigar of apparent small comfort, wept in front of interviewers. He stumbled over his words.

"If I get in prison," he said, "I hope when the war is settled, they will let me out quick."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has accused Stephan, naturalized citizen, of aiding the flight of Lieut. Peter Krug of the German air force, a fugitive from a Bowmanville, Ont., camp. Krug escaped April 16 with Erich Boehle, 28, also a lieutenant and Boehle was captured the next day at Niagara Fals, N.Y.

United States District Attorney John C. Lehr said he would recommend a charge of treason against Stephan.

Suspect, Wrong Man

Meanwhile the F.B.I. here announced that a man held in San Antonio, Texas, on suspicion of being Krug was not the fugitive flier. City police had arrested the man in San Antonio railroad yards yesterday.

John S. Bugas, Detroit F.B.I. chief, after communications with San Antonio authorities it had been established that the suspect was not Krug. The man held, he said, was identified as an itinerant. The search for Krug continued.

In his cell here Stephan talked at length. He related he had fought in the German army in the first Great War. Often he wiped away tears.

John S. Bugas, head of the Detroit FBI office, said Stephan admitted giving money and food to Krug and arranging transportation for the flier out of Detroit.

"They tell me I will lose my citizenship over this," Stephan said. "I will feel bad about that. If anybody attacked this country, I would defend it."

The Sate Liquor Commission confiscated Stephan's tavern licence on a complaint by the city issued in connection with the federal charges against Stephan. A revocation order for his restaurant licence also was prepared.

Aussie Warship Lost Off India

MELBOURNE, April 22— (CP).—Loss of the destroyer Vampire a 1,090-ton Australian flotilla leader with a long record of sea exploits, was announced to-day by Prime Minister John Curtin.

The Vampire went down in the Bay of Bengal as the result of enemy action, but all of her crew were saved except six who were killed, another who died of wounds and two who are missing. She carried a normal complement of 134 men.

Among the missing and presumably dead is her master, Cmdr. W. T. A. Moran.

The Vampire, built in 1917 and mounting four 4-inch guns and six torpedo tubes, had been in the thick of this war's fighting from the Mediterranean to Malaya and from Australia to the Bay of Bengal.

With the British destroyer Thanet the Vampire engaged a superior Japanese force off the East Malaya coast last January 26. The Thanet was lost, but one Japanese destroyer was sunk and another was damaged.

Previously, the Vampire had logged a distinguished record in the Mediterranean. She captured an Italian ship the night before British forces captured Tobruk, was the first Allied warship in Crete and helped operate the "Tobruk ferry service," carrying supplies and men to the then-beleaguered fortress under constant bombing attacks.

The Royal Australian Navy now has lost six ships.

Cheese Plants In Hastings Now Operating

Most of the cheese factories in South Hastings have begun the new season's operations, according to the weekly county reports of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. "Experienced farm labor is very scarce," the Hastings report comments.

Fall wheat and clovers have made good growth during the week in Ontario county, and spring work is under way on most of the farms. A team of horses sold for $400 at an auction sale in Lanark; grade sheep $26.50 and grade cows up to $100.

Glengarry county says hatcheries cannot begin to fill their orders for chicks; more interest is being shown in annual pasture grasses such as Sudan.

All available men and boys offering services for farm work are picked up rapidly in Frontenac. Twin lambs are numerous in Dundas-Stormont. Seed is in demand and an increase in acreage of spring grain seeded this year is indicated.

The volume of chicks is greatly increased in Grenville, but in Leeds rather heavy losses of young pigs are reported from some parts of the county.

Milk production has already increased in Lennox-Addington. The first boarding of cheese was 785 boxes as compared with 616 at the opening sale last year.

Rain has been fairly general over Easter Ontario in the last week to ten days, and in some places has delayed plowing and seeding.

Fall wheat and rye are making phenomenal growth in Lincoln. 'Many farmers are looking for hired men.' Snow last week in Wentworth retarded seeding.

Headquarters said British casualties were "very light."

No British ships were damaged in the clash with the German trawlers, it was announced.

The thunder of a heavy distant cannonade which rumbled through the thick mist over the Strait of Dover before daybreak was the first intimation of the new blow against the German forces guarding their captured coasts.

Lookouts along the Kent coast of England said the firing seemed to some from the direction of Boulogne but nothing could be seen.

The last commando raid, at St. Nazaire, was made on March 28.

Calling Cement for Forts

Earlier today the Ministry of Economic Warfare said the Germans, fearful of commando forays, had earmarked more than half the French cement production for use in new defence systems along the German-held French coast. The ministry said France's annual cement production is about 2,500,000 tons.

In their hazardous raid of March 28 the commandos, later disclosed to have been placed under the direction of Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of the King, combined land, sea, and air forces in an attempt to knock out the important Nazi U-boat base at St. Nazaire.

The first big-scale commando raid on the coast of France was made just one month, earlier, when parachutists and sea-borne infantry slashed into German guarded territory in a destructive raid on a German radio detector post which had been spotting R.A.F. flights over the continent.

That time the striking force landed on the coast of Bruneval, 12 miles north of Le Havre, battered a way through Nazi-manned coastal defences and joined parachutists who had dropped half a mile or more inland.

Accident Charge Withdrawn In Court

Seven days in jail by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning was sentence imposed to Thomas Lansfield after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of druken driving.

Magistrate Langley ordered the police to impound the accused's car for three months and cancelled his driving license for the same period.

A second charge of reckless driving was withdrawn by the Crown.

No evidence was heard in the case, Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., stating that he would be satisfied with the minimum penalty.

The charge against Lansfield originated in an accident on Highway 7A in which the car of the accused ran off the highway and was badly damaged.

OBITUARIES

ARNOLD WOOD

Many friends in the city will regret to hear of the death of Arnold Wood, now of Hamilton who lived in Peterborough for more than 30 years.

The late Mr. Wood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wood, 411 Edison avenue, and his brother Wilfred, 688 George street is employed on the staff at County Jail. A sister, Mrs. W. Hughes resides in Sudbury. His wife and three daughters also survive.

He was born in England but was living in Peterborough when the last war broke out, and he served in France with the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

MRS. ERNEST WALKER.

Six brothers were pall-bearers on Wednesday afternoon at the funeral of the late Mrs. Ernest Walker, from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons, Water Street, and the huge banks of flowers in the room bore testimony to the popularity of this kindly woman.

The late Mrs. Walker died on Monday, April 20, and her home is at 163 Fradette Avenue. She has been a resident of Peterborough for the past 34 years.

Survivors are two sons and two daughters: Arthur Walker, Toronto; Edward Walker, Petawawa; Mrs. R. Simpson, and Doris Walker of Peterborough. Five sisters and six brothers survive: Mrs. E. Armstrong; Mrs. Roy Northey, Mrs. William Meredith, Mrs. A. Kelly, all of Peterborough, and Mrs. Arthur Bunn of Winnipeg. Garden Contest Suggested For Wartime Houses

Frank Mitchell, of Windsor, owner of the Peterborough Bus Lines, and one of the many people living away from Peterborough who looks on this fair city as their home town, came to bat this morning with a suggestion that should have considerable appeal to a large section of people here.

He was discussing flowers and shrubs with Jack Smith, local barber and mentioned that it might be wise to have a beautification competition for wartime housing residents, to stimulate interest in these new sections, and to add the finishing touches of floral beauty to the new homes. Beyond a doubt most people now living in these homes, and particularly the women will want a small flower garden, and vegetable garden anyways, and if some prizes were given for the best efforts, it would add zest to their work, and the city would benefit by the improvements.

Mr. Mitchell went so far as to add that he would be willing to give a prize, and it would not be difficult to secure three or four other prizes, to be given the Wartime Huosing residents who showed the most ingenuity and care in beautifying their new homes, or laying out vegetable gardens. The fact that these houses are painted in pleasing colors, will give the new residents a pleasing background for any horticultural effort they might undertake, and these places, now sitting out on Burnham's Point and north of Parkhill Road in surroundings which are to say the least drab, and bare looking.

Jack Smith, whose interest in this particular work is a byword in Peterborough was all for the suggestion, and he will formally present the suggestion to the Peterborough Horticultural Society at the next meeting and urge that the society give impetus to such a competition.

Antis In Quebec Strike New Vote

QUEBEC, April 22—(CP).—Rene Chaloult, Liberal member of the Quebec Legislative Assembly for Lotbiniere, speaking at an anti-conscription rally here last night, said that he hoped that this war, "the third in 40 years, would at least bring up the rupture of the Imperial bond and complete independence in the midst of the American nations."

Philippe Girard of Montreal, president of the Central Council of National Catholic Unions, said "It is not Hitler who will kill democracy in the province (of Quebec). It is our political leaders who make us believe by their attitude that this democracy is rotten."

Answering a question as to the possibility of Prime Minister King resigning, Mr. Girard said that "If we have to give the blood of our sons to keep Mr. King in power, his presence is not desirable."

Ernest Gregoire, former Mayor of Quebec, and Noel Dorion, former Crown prosecutor, also addressed the gathering.

Harvest Help From City Dewan Urges

Golf or helping with the harvest! Fishing or helping wtih the harvest!

And anything else that may be passed up for a few weeks this summer when neighboring farmers are harassed with the work of the harvest, and a lot of middle aged city men, some of them sons of the farm, have considerable spare time on their hands!

This challenge is being sounded in a round about way by Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Africulture, probably just starting to work on the propaganda of persuading city help to line up for a some choring in the country at haying time and when the grain is ripe.

What—motoring off to golf pastures, burning the gasoline, abrading the rubber tires and generally following the old ways of waste—at a time when the farmers need help!

Tut, tut! is what Mr. Dewan is saying in a mild way. Properly harvested crops mean just as much to urban dwellers as to farmers, says the Minister; for unharvested crops would mean a food shortage.

Grasses and hay in the barn are provision for milk and butter and beef next winter.

Farmers are going to be working long hours at high pressure to get seed into the ground these next few weeks. Harvesting this crop is a national problem which it is probable can be met only by adequate help from cities and towns.

The Minister is appealing to Boards of Trade, Service Clubs, city and town councils, and others to organize harvesting groups to be ready to help the farmers when they begin to feel the real pinch of the scarcity of man power.

Norfolk Survey

Norfolk county's farm survey is being completed this week with reports from 1,430 farmers, about one-half operators of farms in the county. Labor requirements indicate that 170 men are needed for the year, 192 for the summer and 176 for harvest; 646 reported adequate labor for their needs; 60 per cent of the farmers estimate that they can maintain their 1941 production; 35 per cent expect an increase and 5 per cent may have a reduced crop.

The survey also showed that 120 farmers' sons went into war industry and 76 into other positions since the war began; 120 are in the military training this year.

A.R.P. For the Farms

"Air Raid Protection on the Farm" is the subject of circular instructions received by Dr. G. R. Penhall, veterinary inspector with the Dominion Government. Its broad assumption of the possibility of Peterborough farmer requiring such guidance and instruction might amaze farmers of the peaceful countryside in this county who regard themselves as securely remote from the agencies of war such as airplanes, bombs, flying splinters, poison gas, incendiary bombs mustard gas, blister gas and so on.

This pamphlet runs to seven long pages, and reference to its counsel is not made in a spirit of comic doubt. Conceivably such an extremity as the war coming to Ontario farm lands is within the range of possibility, and Dr. Penhall showed the letter to the Examiner apparently in all the sincerity which originally actuated its preparation by somebody in Ottawa.

Any farmers who feel they should knock off time from spring seeding to study this A.R.P. pamphlet can look it over in Dr. Penhall's office.

Indignant Northerner Objects To Jail Sentence For Theft

"I can't do it, I have a garden to look after," declared Edward Edwards of Chandos township in police court this morning after Magistrate O. A. Langey, K.C., had found him guilty of stealing six pairs of blankets from W. J. Purdy, and sentenced him to a month in jail.

The magistrate suggested that the accused had better get his son to look after the garden.

"He can't do it either" remarked Edwards and as he was led out of the court room he remarked 'I'll see you again.'

Purdy, called by the Crown, said that he had a log building in Cardiff township near the boundary of Peterborough county and lumbermen's supplies, including blankets were stored there. Early in the winter, he said, Edwards wanted to borrow some gasoline from him and he had given the accused the key of the place to get the gas. Afterwards he had found a number of things missing, including six pairs of blankets. Last Saturday Edwards had denied having the blankets but on Monday Purdy said he had visited Edwards place with Provincial Constable Price Morris who had a search warrant and they had found the six pairs of blankets. One pair had been produced in court and were identified by the witness as his property.

Cross-examined by Edwards, Purdy admitted staying at Edwards' place the night that the accused had obtained the key to get some gasoline.

"Did you know that the blankets you had that night belonged to you?" asked Edwards.

"I didn't konw then."

Provincial Constable Morris testified to searching Edwards' place and finding the blankets.

Edward testified that when he had gone to get the gasoline that night he had been accompanied by Purdy's hired man and it had been suggested that some blankets be taken back to Edwards' house where Purdy was going to stay tha night because it was 15 below zero. Edwards said that he had kept the blankets because he claimed Purdy owed him some money but he admitted that he had not told Purdy that he was going to and that he had denied that the blankets were at his pace.

Magistrate Langley said he was satisfied that Edwards had intended to steal the blankets and found him guilty.

Given 3 Eggs In Month Instead Of One

"Just fancy, we got three eggs this month instead of one; weren't we lucky," writes a friend in Teddington, England, to James B. Brown, on March 31.

"We get one shilling's worth of meat a week, and we are going to have still less; two ounces of butter and eight ounces of sugar a week; one pound of jam a month. Boiling chickens are 2 shillings and 10 pence a pound, when you can see them, and now most things are in "points once a month; but never mind so long as we get this horrible war over.

"Thanks to the Russians, they have saved us. We have only got them to thank. We will be glad to have your brother's sons call on us. I am sending you a photograph of Dad (H. Stockwell). We see many of your boys over here. We have had a terrible winter, frost and snow and biting winds for such a long time. We shall be happy to see the sun again."

Hang Watchman For N.B. Murder

SAINT JOHN, N.B., April 22 — (CP).—The State took John Oliver's life today in payment for the life of Sgt. Herbert Lobb.

The cheerless pre-dawn was death time for the 63-year-old former watchman who went to the gallows inside the Old Saint John county jail.

A black flag, raised to a newly-erected pole over the doorway through which the body later was removed, fluttered announcement of the first hanging here in 59 years.

This was the epilogue of a "dreadful act which seems to have had so little point to it."

It began with a quarrel between Oliver and several young boys two days after Christmas. Later Oliver and Lobb, a middle-aged member of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, exchanged words. On the same day Oliver went to the Lobb home and fired a revolver bullet into the sergeant's abdomen. Lobb died two days later.

In court the accused declared that he merely had been trying to settle a misunderstanding when the revolver accidentally discharged.

In imposing the death sentence January 17, Mr. Justice J. H. A. L. Fairweather said in part to Oliver:

"It is hard for me to understand why you should have done this dreadful act which seems to have had so little point to it and which has brought tragedy to the home of your victim and tragedy, almost greater, to your own wife and little children."

Oliver was reported calm in the death cell during his last days.

With the press barred, only a few official witnesses saw the execution.

Oliver walked quietly to his death at 4 a.m., A.D.T. The drop was sprung at 4.02 by Camille Blanchard, hangman for the province of Quebec. Life was pronounced extinct at 4.32 a.m.

Farmers, encouraged by the renewed buying by packers, continued to ship their cattle into the Union Stockyards here yesterday in heavier volume than last week. All but 100 head of the day's offerings were absorbed, with prices strong at previous levels.

Regardless of the fact that prices on live cattle were higher than those paralleling ceilings on beef, packers were said to be buying freely in expectation that the Government shortly would take action in solving the cattle price problem which has been the cause of the limited beef supplies. There was no indication as to what this action might be, but it was felt in the trade that there will be a great protest if an embargo is clamped on cattle exports to the United States.

Insurance Near For Loss In Enemy Raids

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, April 22—(CP).—Insurance against injury and loss of life from enemy attacks on Canada may be available for civilians shortly, Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons last night as his war risk insurance bill received second reading and was referred to the committee on banking and commerce.

Having advanced this and another war measure, the Veterans' Land Bill, a stage in the proceedings the House today turns to the 2,000,000,000 war appropriations bill and Defence Minister Ralston will be available for questioning on all phases of army activities and expenditures.

The Veterans' Land Bill which is sponsored by Pensions Minister Mackenzie and contemplates settlement of some 25,000 veterans of the present war on farms and small land holdings at a cost of $80,000,000, received first reading.

Mr. Mackenzie said it is the Government's intention to bring the measure into immediate operation without waiting for the end of the war so that some of the 40,000 men already discharged from the forces may be placed on the land.

Pending consideration of the measure in a special committee he did not wish to commit himself as to what extent the measure would be used before the end of hostilities.

Mr. Ilsley's war risk insurance bill applies to property insurance and provides free coverage to home-owners against damage to their homes up to $3,000 and free coverage against loss of household effects up to certain limits. It also provides for insurance of other property on a contract basis on payment of premiums.

The personal insurance measure which he forecast will be made effective by order-in-council and not by act of parliament as it may require amendment from time to time. It is under consideration now.

Mail Bag Theft Costly 'Peg Raid

WINNIPEG, April 22 J— (CP).—Winnipeg police and postal auhtorities are investigating theft of eight bags of registered mail from a Royal mail truck in downtown Winnipeg last night. Postal authorities said to-day there could be no report on the value of registered mail stolen until a complete check was made, but possibly it would run into "thousands of dollars."

The robbery occurred when a driver on his regular evening collection route stopped at a Notre Dame Avenue drug store where a postal sub-station is located. In the store only a few minutes, the driver returned to the street to find his truck had been stolen.

The police radio immediately broadcast reports of the theft and within 20 minutes the abandoned mail truck was found on Maryland Street several blocks away. The eight mail bags containing registered letters had been removed.

22nd Battery Seeks More Recruits

COBOURG, April 22 — (ENS). — To stimulate recruiting and do a bit of advertising, the boys of the 22nd Medium Battery of Cobourg, now the 36th Battery Active Service, have erected a large banner across the main street from the New Royal Hotel corner to the north side of King Street. The banner urges enlistment in the unit.

A meeting was held in the Legion Hall last night to organize the "Dads Club" for the 47th Battery. The ladies of the 47th Auxiliary have been doing good work for the boys of that unit overseas and the dads decided to pitch in and help. When the Dads Club gets underway, it is planned to look after the smoking requirements of the boys of the 47th Battery. During the evening, an address was given by Sgt. Malcolm (Mike) Mallory of Cobourg, recently returned from overseas, who told the dads what the boys in the 47th wanted most from "the old man" at home.

DRUMMERBOY Reggie Benstead, who said later "Boy, what a nerve I've got," cut in on a captain of the Grenadier Guards last night and gained a dance with 16-year-old Princess Elizabeth at her birthday ball.

The captain who had the dance on his card stood aside, Private Benstead related, "and there I found myself with the Princess in my arms....She was quite talkative, but I couldnt think of a thing to say."

Rev. J. E. Simpson Adresses Conference On Stewardship

"What owest thou to My Lord?" was the text of Rev. Dr. J. E. Simpson, Oak Park, Illinois, when he addressed the Inter-church conference on stewardship at the evening session held in George Street United Church on Tuesday evening. Dr. Simpson said that each of us has a part in an ever-mounting debt to God. "God," said Mr. Simpson, "has a priority right," and went on to explain that, as the children of Israel were bidden to make oblation to their God with the first fruits of the harvest, so our debt to God should come ahead of all other obligations. To possess is not to own, but rather to owe, and our debt to God is proportion to our possessions.

Dr. Simpson divided people into three classes. First, the business concerns and their debt to God. To illustrate this he quoted the parable of the owner of the vineyard, who rented his property out to a company of husbandmen. These men refused to pay their landlord his share of the harvest, and were destroyed, and the landlord rented his property again to honest husbandmen. So our possessions—our business concerns—are but held in trust from God and we must pay God his share in the concern, "Render unto God that which is God's."

Debt To God

Then there is the debt of the well-to-do people to God. To illustrate this Dr. Simpson quoted the parable of the man who, before departing on a long journey, distributed talents among his servants, for them to invest against his return. The first two servants invested wisely and showed a handsome profit to their Lord, but the third servant, hoping that his master would not return, hid his talent and did nothing with it. The third servant was punished for his dishonesty, and this shows us that God gives us the talents (possessions) but leaves the investment up to us. We must invest our talents wisely and render unto God his share of the harvest that results.

The third class were the people of moderate means, who so often plead poverty as an excuse or not supporting the church financially. They are like the fig tree which grew in a corner of the vineyard. It drew strength from the soil of the vineyard and from the sun and rain which fell on the vineyard, and yet it did not bear fruit. The owner gave it one year in which to bear fruit or be destroyed. So all who have any possessions at all are bound to pay God his share or be destroyed.

"Only in the church," said Dr. Simpson, "is poverty made an excuse. We let our earthly debts take precedence over our debt to God and we do not pay God his share of the investment he has left with us."

Rev. Dr. H. H. Bingham, general secretary of the Baptist convention, was the other guest speaker at the conference, and he spoke of on the power of the church, and to illustrate his address, he described Raphael's picture of Christ's ascent into heaven, telling of the wonderful vision of heaven in the top half of the picture and of the confusion and grief in the bottom. He said that we must always have a shining peak to strive for, but that we must go down into the valley to render the services. The shining heights give the inspiration for the work to be done in the valley of human need.

Dr. Bingham said that the church must stand up to men, not cater to their weakness. There are people who say that the church has lost its power. In Russia the people said that the church was so full of promises of life beyond the grave that it was unconscious of human needs in this world and for that reason the people were willing to give it up. The church must come down from the heights and minister to the needs of humanity in the valley.

We have been inclined in recent years, ignore individual responsibility for sin, blaming sin and tyrannies on new movements and on organizations. We must teach ourselves self-denial and return to prayer as an aid in trouble.

Rev. Dr. G. S. Easton was chairman of the conference and explained the purpose. The devotional exercises for the evening session were conducted by Canon W. P. Robertson, rector of St. John's Church, assisted by Dr. Easton.

Campbellford Red Cross Active Branch

CAMPBELLFORD, April 22 (ENS) —The cutting of sheeting and toweling occupied the attention of members of the Campbellford and Seymour Branch of the Red Cross when the met for their regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon. The ladies cut up some 60 yards of material for sheets and 50 yards of towelling which was then given to members to hem and launder at home. A large shipment of yarn was also acknowledged as being received from Headquarters during the meeting and from this they will knit cardigans for girls 16 years old. It was pointed out that anyone desiring to assist with this project could secure yarn at the Library.

Thanks was expressed to the donors of quilts, quilt tops and money, as well as all of those who contributed in any way towards making the Ward I Bingo on Saturday a success. The bingo being sponsored by the ladies of Ward III and which will also assist in raising money for the local Society's current drive, will be held on May 2nd. Monday next has been set as the date for the next shipment of completed work to Red Cross Headquarters and members have been urged to have all supplies turned in by this date.

Quizz Contest

Citizenship Conveners Glen Maxwell and Jack Bleeker who were in charge of the program conducted a quizz contest as one of the chief features of the weekly meeting of St. John's Y.P.U. Monday evening. They divided members into two teams for this and a summing up revealed the Connor lead team had chalked up the most points During the devotional period Glenn Maxwell gave a reading, "Empty Seats", which was an indictment against those who neglected to attend church, and following this Mrs. Chas. Howey gave a vocal solo.

For the business the President, Miss Pearl McComb, presided, and she announced an executive meeting at the close to deal with the appointment of committees to make other necessary arrangements for the Plunkett dinner which the Young People are sponsoring on May 4th.

Girls Complete Quilt

Meeting on Monday evening at the home of Miss Pat Poulton, Grand Road, members of the Victory Club spent a busy evening in completing a crib quilt top for the local branch of the Red Cross. The girls, who have on hand two other tops, ready for stitching, received a knitted helmet from one of their number. Work on an afghan, begun several weeks ago, is proceeding and the group hope to have it finished within another week.

Address On Health

Dr. Ward Baker, M.D., was the guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Tabernacle Church (English Line) Y.P.U. on Monday evening, and to the members he gave an intersting talk on contagious diseases, food and diet, and first aid. The doctor emphasized the importance of keeping diseases of a contagious nature under careful control in war time when large groups, such as soldiers, were living under conditions which would make its spread more likely if rigorous measures were not enforced. President Alex. Stephens introduced the speaker to the gathering and at the opening Misses Gladys Stephens and Dorothy Peake assisted with the devotions. It was announced the final meeting of the season would be held next Monday when it would take the form of a social evening. The program will be in charge of Mrs. Fred Smith, Misses Eileen Stephens and Winnifred Haig.

Donated Quilt

A vote of thanks to Mrs. A. Higginson for the lovely quilt she recently donated, was made by members of Christ Church Guild when they met for their regular meeting on Monday. In discussion the probable disposal of this item members expressed the view that it should be raffled at a later date to raise funds for the Society and in this connection they named the treasurer, Mrs. Gordon Hay, to look after the preparation of tickets with the help of Miss Ethel Bedford. Arrangements were completed for a bridge and euchre to be sponsored by them on May 1st with the president, Mrs. R. A. Linton, and Miss E. Bedford being named as conveners. Principal work during the evening was sewing on quilt patches and at the close the hostess, Mrs William, Smith, Booth street, served refreshments. Mrs. Joseph Ellis has offered her home for the May 4th meeting.

Fighting Diphtheria

There are two ways of fighting diphtheria: the first way and the easy way is to have your child inoculated against the disease shortly after it is six months old, and again in its fifth year; the second way, and the hard way, is to fight it after your child has caught the disease. If you choose to fight the first way you will have no trouble, for the preventive treatment is entirely satisfactory. But if you choose to fight the second way you may lose your child and you will certainly regret your neglect.

This is "Toxoid Week," during which the Health League of Canada is making a national campaign for immunization against diphtheria. It is called Toxoid Week because Toxoid is the agent which is used to safeguard children against this dangerous disease. It is a simple, safe, sure preventive, and it is folly to deny your child the protection which it can give. There are areas in Canada in which diphtheria has been unheard of for several years; these are areas in which Toxoid has been extensively used and where it has proved its efficacy. There are other areas where the disease still flourished and where there are unnecessary deaths every year.

During the past three years there have been 8,071 cases of diphtheria reported in Canada, and the disease was fatal in one case out of every ten. Eight hundred children is a high price to pay for neglect. It is essential that the knowledge that diphtheria is preventible and that it must be prevented penetrate to every home in this Dominion.

Peterborough may congratulate itself on its record in this matter. Local schools were among the first in the country to have a yearly Toxoid drive, and under the care of the late Dr. A. W. McPherson splendid results were achieved. It is desirable, however, that precautions against diphtheria be taken long before a child reaches school age and the responsibility for this lies upon the parents.

Death from diphtheria is calamitous. But consider the trouble and anxiety which the disease brings to homes where that most unhappy outcome is avoided. The progress of diphtheria is painful and weakening and it may leave behind it traces which last a lifetime. Children should be spared the trial of long and weakening illness by foresight on the part of parents.

Any child may have Toxoid treatment. It is not expensive, and in cases where the usual fee is too much provision is made that the injections may be given free. This community endorses Toxoid Week and the Examiner puts its full weight behind the campaign to stamp out diphtheria. But the final effort must be made by the parents; which way are you going to fight diphtheria—easily in the doctor's surgery, or the hard way, at the bedside?

We Give The Master a Lesson

The German plan for the present war is contained, not in detail but in theory, in Hitler's Mein Kampf, and if we had troubled to read that book, and if it had been available in an English edition before it was too late, we should have been less taken aback by the events of the spring of 1940. But we have no time to regret the past, and the spring of 1942 shows that though late in learning we are apt pupils; indeed, at present we are busily giving the Master a lesson in his own special subject of nerve warfare.

Shortly before Munich we began to hear the "war of nerves" mentioned rather often, and many people supposed that it was something new. In point of fact, it was an old dodge even with the Greeks, who used every means at their disposal to spread disquieting humors among their enemies, and to make as many false and misleading feints as possible before making war. But modern communications have given new life to the old diplomatic game of playing on the enemies' nerves, and Dr. Goebbels, who is a genius in his way, and Herr Hitler, who is not as big a fool as he looks, have used every trick, old and new, to rattle us. Now, to their great discomfiture, we are rattling them. The nerve war has proved a boomerang.

There have been repeated demands in Britain for a new front in Europe, for an attack upon Germany, for an attack upon Italy and so on. It has been stated officially that there will be none of these things. But British actions belie British words. There has been a great deal of unofficial talk by persons not given to talking idly which seems to point to an Allied attack on Europe very soon. General McNaughton, for instance, has repeatedly spoken of the part which Canadian troops will play in such an attack. Many pictures have been published of troops in exercises of a clearly offensive nature. Manoeuvres have been carried out of such a violent nature that several officers were killed; live ammunition was used to accustom the men to conditions of attack. Despite the official statement that the United Nations are not yet ready to make an assault on Europe they appear to be getting ready for that very thing.

What are the Germans to make of it? The trouble with a war of nerves, and its greatest strength, is that it is impossible to tell when it will turn into a war of men and ammunition. German officials appear to have reconciled themselves to the fact that there will be such an attack, and it is possible for us to believe that, in such a matter, they may be better informed than ourselves. There is reason to believe that they await such an attack with anything but high hearts. That too, is just what we like. We have learned the lesson of the nerve war the hard way, and we are delighted to be able to give the Master a taste of his own medicine

Disturbing Japan's Equanimity

"The Japanese," we read in that admirable compendium, the Encyclopaedia Britannica, "are essentially a kindly-hearted, laughter-loving people, taking life easily and not allowing its petty ills unnecessarily to disturb their equanimity." That, if we may be pardoned an undignified lapse into the vernacular, is a hot one! The Japanese, considered as a nation and judged in the light of their recent conduct, are about as kindly-hearted as a nest of rattlesnakes, and the laughter which they love is certainly not of a kind in which we can join. And their equanimity has been smashed into as many bits as a dropped Satsuma vase by the recent mysterious raids on Tokyo, Yokohama, Kobe and Nagoya; for the first time in 2,600 years they have an enemy above, if not actually upon, their own land. We doubt if these kindly, laughter-loving folk will retain their equanimity as well as the people of Britain under air bombardment.

Japan would very much like to know the source of the planes which carried out the raid, or raids, and has said that they were American B-26 medium bombers; we all know the skill shown by Oriental peoples in flying kites, and this may merely be a sample of it. We shall know whose bombers they were and where they came from when it is safe to release such information. They may have come from the Aleutians, or from bases in China, or they may have flown from Alaska; they may have come from plane carriers which have penetrated the Japanese naval defences. All we know for certain is that they reached their goal and did an excellent job.

The petty ills which these visited upon the Japanese disturbed the equanimity of those supposedly calm folk in an unmistakeable manner. Berlin announced that factories were left burning. This, by the bye, was in contradiction to the Japanese claim that the brutal enemy had concentrated upon schools, hospitals and similar unmilitary objectives; the righteous horror of the Japs on this score was distinctly amusing to the laughter-loving members of the United Nations. No bomber pilot in his senses wastes ammunition bombing schools and hospitals when there are military objectives about; if any of these edifices came to grief it must have been because the Japanese cities burn easily, being built of light and inflammable materials. Care was taken, also, to inform the populace that the sacred and inviolable person of the Emperor remained all in one piece, so the scare must have been considerable. Upon the whole the Japs appear to have lost their nerve badly over these raids and this, as well as the damage done, is a notable victory for our side.

Such reports as are available do not suggest that the United Nations are ready to begin a large-scale offensive in the Pacific; but at least we have been able to strike a blow at the heart of the aggressor nation, and what has been done once will be done again. The kindly-hearted and laughter-loving Japanese may soon be laughing on the other side of their faces.

A New Propaganda Offensive

Archibald MacLeish, the well-known American scholar and former Librarian of Congress, who is now Director of the Federal Office of Facts and Figures, has warned American newsmen of a forthcoming peace offensive which he believes that the Axis will direct at the U.S. this summer. He couched his warning in good set terms and the men of The Associated Press who heard him were in complete agreement with him; MacLeish knows, however, that more than agreement will be necessary to defeat the kind of menace which he foresees, and it is probable that the recently begun investigation of Father Coughlin's paper Social Justice added weight to his words.

Mr. MacLeish appreciates more than most of his countrymen the power of words in the life of a nation. It was he who, before the U.S. entered the war or seriously considered such action, attacked the writers and intellectuals of his country who had, in his opinion, neglected their duty to guide and mould the thought of their country in a manner which would safeguard its best interests and arouse its deepest patriotism. Playwrights and novelists were the people most heavily indicted, and although spirited defences were put forward by Brooks Atkinson the critic, Clifton Fadiman, the book reviewer, and Robert Sherwood, the playwright, it was felt generally that MacLeish had put his finger on a national weakness. It was a weakness, we may add, which had also been apparent in Britain for many years where the people were badly in need of intellectual leaders.

Defense against a peace offensive will have to come from the newspapers for the most part. They are staffed by men trained in weighing the words of others and detecting fallacies in argument. The American Press is very much alive now, and very angry, and we doubt if it will be taken in by an Axis blandishments, however subtle they may be and however obliquely they may be expressed.

BRITAIN—THE CITADEL

She stands alone—a shining citadel
Like a white tower in a storm-swept world,
Around her is the tumult and the night,
Against her strength a thousand darts are hurled;
Yet, founded on a rock her people stand
Guarding the lonely ramparts of the land.

From every crannied hill and hidden dune
The bristling guns give answer to the sky.
At every lonely peak a soldier waits,
At every hilltop is a watching eye.
For every heart must be a sword and shield,
And every street and road a battlefield.

Strong as the granite of her ancient hills,
The people wait the onslaught without fear.
A great united nation brave and strong,
They hold together when the foe is near;
Undaunted by the terror and the pain,
They bleed and die and rise to fight again.

For every man is England—every heart
Only a pulse beat of the mighty whole,
And every woman watching on the shore
Is but a symbol of her country's soul,
And all the skulking treacherous hosts of hell
Shall never take that shining citadel.

Germany's Labor Problem Is Most Pressing

By J. G. SIMONDS

THE German needs for more troops to replace losses and at the same time for more workers to keep up production of war supplies are becoming steadily more pressing as the winter months draw to a close and the time approaches when Hitler's armies can again undertake large-scale military military operations.

Experiences of the Russian campaign have taught the German army leaders that it is better to use Germans as troops, and this lesson is being put into effect by importing hundreds of thousands of foreign workers from other European countries to work in German war industries, freeing Germans for duty at the front.

Already Germany has more than 4,000,000 foreign workers, including war prisoners, engaged in production in the Third Reich, and the Nazi government is steadily increasing its numbers by campaigns to enlist more in the countries under German occupation.

Foreign workers are divided into three categories. The first are the war prisoners, who have been brought to Germany after their defeat. They number about 2,000,000. A second group, of about 1,000,000 men and women from both conquered territories and nations friendly to the Axis, has come into Germany on labor contracts, while a third group consists of more than 1,000,000 Poles, who are virtual prisoners, have no privileges and are treated far worse than the members of the two other groups.

According to the best available German estimates, on Sept. 25 there were 2,193,553 foreigners, not prisoners of war, working in Germany. Of these, 1,007,561 were Poles. All the others except the Poles receive the same treatment as that accorded to German workers.

Next in numbers to the Poles come the Italians, with about 271,000 workers in Germany; the Czechs, with 140,000; the Belgians, 121,000; the Yugoslavs, 108,000, and the Dutch, 92,000. Since September, however, the Germans have made strenuous efforts to increase their labor recruiting throughout Europe and the figures may have gone up considerably.

On Jan. 13, for example, the German press announced that the 250,000th Belgian worker had signed his labor contract with Germany. He was Flemish, and had been released from a Nazi prison camp in October, 1940. He will serve as a metal worker in a large aircraft factory in Germany.

The Germans made a special celebration in Brussels to mark the event, which they said meant that including those employed in Germany, more than 1,000,000 Belgians were now employed directly or indirectly in the German war effort.

In Norway, recently, the German occupational authorities have adopted a different line. They have undertaken a campaign to enlist Norwegians to go to Germany to "study" rational agriculture on German farms, apparently a way of getting unpaid agricultural workers.

The only country in which the Germans have not been recruiting their labor is Finland, where the two wars with Soviet Russia have caused a shortage of manpower, so that there were no workers available for service in Germany.

Meanwhile, the Germans are continuing a steady "combing" process in German factories to get all possible men who can be released from work as soldiers, replacing them with the newly-recruited foreigners.

That foreign labor has not been unsuccessful is shown in reports from reliable sources in London that during December airplane production in Germany increased 15 per cent, and submarine construction hit a new high.

Among other nationalities that are being used by the Germans as labor are a number of Ukrainians, and the Hungarian radio even reported recently that 1,500 Russians have been recruited from conquered Russian territories for such service.

In all, German estimates state that Germany now has 24,000,000 workers, including these foreigners, in war industry. This is divided into 14,600,000 men and 9,400,000 women, which is 1,000,000 more women than were employed in Nazi war production before the outbreak of the war.

Nazi Government officials have repeatedly called on industries not to "hoard" manpower, so that every available man and woman could be put into war production.

A Ukrainian paper published in Krakow, in occupied Poland, hinted recently in an article that passed the German censor that conditions of foreign workers in Germany were not good and that it was increasingly difficult for workers who once left their homes to go to Germany to get leave to return to visit their families.

"We do not maintain that conditions are ideal and that the rights established according to the law are maintained with sanctity," the newspaper article stated.

"In certain places our workers have met with unpleasantnesses."

The attitude of Germans toward foreign workers is undergoing a change, reports from Germany indicate. The "obligation to service" idea is replacing the "free work contract," and the Nazis are pounding on the theme that Europe should support them as a duty because they are saving it from Communism. If this "obligation to service" were made the basis for obtaining workers for Germans factories it is undoubtedly true Germany would get many more workers, but their loyalty might be even more questionable than that of the workers now employed.

A recent article in a Swiss newspaper, "Die Neue Zuericher Zeitung," from a Swiss correspondent who had just visited foreign labor camps in Germany was even more frank about conditions.

"Ruthless proceedings are taken against foreigners who do not want to understand their task and their special role, and who oppose the factory management," the correspondent wrote.

"They are at once taken by the uniformed works protective police to the frontier of their home country and dumped across the border. The same treatment is meted out to women workers who become pregnant. On principle, the firm refuses to burden itself with small babies."

The Swiss correspondent encountered considerable grumbling among foreign workers as to their food rations, which he said were not adequate.

• Allies Round A Corner

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 22 —(AP)— Whatever its deeper strategic significance, there is much evidence that American bombing over Japan as reported from Tokyo is stirring public belief along the whole United Nation front that it signals another vital war corner turned in Allied favor.

Even lacking authoritative word as to that operation from any American source, it has set off in London predictions that American Army planes are on the verge of carrying their colors into battle over enemy territory on the other side of the world. German and German-held war factories on the European Continent soon are to feel the weight of joint British-American airpower, it is stated.

Circumstances tend to back up that prediction. The crisis on the Russian-German front is close at hand. A test of Nazi ability to regain the offensive on any effective scale cannot be many weeks away.

It will be a test, too, of the prime Allied strategy which has called for concentration on aid to Russia, whatever the risks taken in the Pacific and Indian Ocean, and even the Mediterranean.

Behind that lies the firm belief in Washington and London that should Hitler's attack again bog down in Russia this year, the end will be at least distantly in sight. It would certainly reduce the Axis war effort to a defensive struggle of which the duration would be beyond calculation, but the result certain.

Accepting that as the keystone of Allied strategy, it follows logically that Anglo-American air attack and counter-invasion threats against the Nazi's 2,000-mile continental seafront must be stepped up to maximum. Every telling blow struck there in the weeks ahead tends to ease German pressure on Russia.

The Russians, however, are not waiting for Anglo-American massed air attacks or other help to take full advantage of their greater mobility over their foe in mud as well as snow. Red Army guns are reported within range of Smolensk, central bastion of the Nazi winter front. The advance toward Smolensk from the northeast was last reported only eighteen miles away.

A wide stretch of almost roadless steppes lies north of the Smolensk-Vyazma road and rail system. It is through that rolling region, which the Germans fought shy of even in dry weather and that now is a sea of mud, that the Russians have driven their deepest and most threatening winter thrusts. Should Smolensk fall, the whole Nazi centre would crack. A greater disaster than Napoleon's could result for the Germans.

• A Pointed Question

COLONEL Huneens-Eastman, the Chilean military attache in Washington, having completed a tour of Canadian war industries, said in Montreal that Canada "is better equipped, better mobilized, and better prepared for war than any other nation in the Western Hemisphere."

The Ottawa Journal is surprised that the gentleman should have made the statement. Canada, it says, after more than two years of war would naturally be better equipped and mobilized than other American nations. But as his further remarks indicated, his observation arose naturally from his astonishment. He went on to say that he was "unable to understand why Canadians go to such lengths to belittle what they are accomplishing."

The Chilean colonel had doubtless been hearing for months about Canada's futile and inadequate war effort. He had been hearing about it from isolationist newspapers, from America Firsters, from Anglophobes, from Axis sympathizers; and he was aware that these worthies in their disparagement of Canada's performance could quote supporting statements from Canadian "authorities" a-plenty; newspapers, politicians, armchair strategists and mischief-makers.

His surprise when he found how vastly different were the facts led him to express his astonishment and to ask his question. Canadians might properly ask the same question and seek the answer which can readily be found: Why have certain Canadians gone to such lengths to belittle and defame the war effort of Canada?

LETTERS FOR TROOPS

CANADIANS at home do fairly well, in the matter of mail, for their fighting men overseas. Postal records show that in March 1,431,560 letters were cleared through the Base Post Office to Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen serving overseas, as well as 1,101,610 pounds of parcels, 344,736 pounds of tobacco, and 215,000 pounds of printed matter, mostly newspapers.

This means, a news story says, an average of about ten letters for each man in March, which isn't bad for letters. It means two or three pounds of tobacco or cigarettes a month, on the average, and several newspapers.

In the matter of parcels the men overseas do not fare so well. A total of 1,101,610 pounds seems impressive, but if every package were of the maximum weight of 11 pounds it would represent only 100,000 of them, or distinctly less than one a month per man on the average. These parcels contain everything from tinned peaches to pipe cleaners, from sox to strawberry jam, and unquestionably they mean much to the comfort and well-being of the services. In the way of things it will happen that some men get no parcels at all, while others are bountifully supplied with good things from home—and this is a matter which only relatives and friends of our soldiers, sailors and airmen can adjust.—Ottawa Journal.

Huns May Force French Crews To Handle Fleet

By NED RUSSELL.

LONDON, April 22. — Allied diplomats fear that the German Gestapo might force French seamen to man the French fleet for operations against the United Nations by threatening their families, as was done to lure the warships into the French ports after the 1940 Armistice.

They agreed that the battered but partially repaired fleet concentrated at Toulon would play a critical role in the new French Government's avowed policy of collaboration with Germany, especially since Pierre Laval is believed determined to win back colonies lost to the Allies and the Free French. That could be done only by fleet operations.

Private advices rom the Continent said that, although Laval is anxious to maintain diplomatic relations with the United States he is determined not to tolerate any Allied interference with his efforts to win back the lost colonies.

Private advices to the British United Press said Laval's return to power followed a report to Marshal Henri Philippe Petain that Adolf Hitler, not satisfied with Alsace-Lorraine, also wanted French Flanders, would insist that Italy and Spain get shares of France, and was ready to install at Paris a gauletier to rule France because of the purported abandonment of Vichy's collaboration policy. Petain immediately asked for a conference with Laval, asking him to intervene and to be his counsellor in the future, the advices said.

The Moscow radio quoted "trustworthy reports from Berne" as saying that members of the Laval Government believed Marshal Petain would retire "for a rest" and that rumors persisted in Paris that Petain would retire and transfer all of his powers to Laval.

Threat Possible Course.

Spokesmen pointed out that if French crews cannot be persuaded to put to sea against the Allies by promises of a quick peace and restoration of the French Empire, the Gestapo could spread word among the sailors that their families face arrest as hostages.

Naval experts admitted that the addition of the French fleet or any considerable part of it to Axis forces in the Atlantic and Mediterranean might upset—at least temporarily—the Allies' vital lifeline to the East. The French ships also could convoy a stream of men and materials to Libya.

The pivotal man in the Franco-German dickering for the fleet is Admiral Jean Francois Darlan the Minister of Defence, who Marshal Henri Petain said still was his designated successor as Chief of State in the new Laval Government.

A Foreign Office spokesman said that the aged Marshal may have thought he "scored a point" in naming Darlan his successor, but "it's difficult to see how this can be done since Laval certainly will have an important say in finding a successor to Petain."

"Darlan," he said, "is every bit as much a collaborator as Laval, but probably not so effective."

Main Allied Hope.

Diplomats believed the main Allied hope for France was the possibility of a major revolt against the Laval Government, or at least enough violence to weaken the grip of the German occupation forces and the Vichy regime's influence.

Laval's elevation to the post of Chief of Government was described as a 'very favorable' reason for revolt in France.

According to the private advices regarding the events leading up to Laval's return to power, Laval was quoted as saying that he never would initiate any move to break off relations with the United States.

It was his argument, the report ran, that if he were in power the Germans would have more confidence in him than in Admiral Jean Darlan and would tolerate a much more liberal relationship between Vichy and Washington.

He said if he had a chance he would send 1,000,000 French volunteers to fight alongside the Germans against Russia, but added that he never would mobilize a French army or furnish a single soldier or sailor to Germany for use against America.

He said he would give any guarantee the United States wanted that no French island and no part of the French Empire ever would be used for basing Axis submarines or planes operating against the Allies. But he said, he would not tolerate any Allied interference if he began to fight to win back the colonies taken by the followers of General Charles de Gaulle.

Over The Hump

Washington, April 22 (AP)

DONALD M. NELSON, the United States War Production Chief, testified today that the United States is "over the hump" on military production and in a few months will offset the equipment reserves built up by Axis nations.

"America, England and Russia are producing in much greater quantities essential war material than our Axis enemies." Nelson told the Senate Investigating Committee in summarizing accomplishments of the war production board since its organization last Jan. 16.

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U.S. army, is shown examining a pair of field glasses used by the late Admiral William S. US to Seize, Keep All Enemy Patent Rights

WASHINGTON, April 22—(AP)—The United States war production effort burst through into new channels to-day under the impetus of a Presidential order seizing all enemy-owned or controlled patents — including German patents on the manufacture of synthetic rubber and fuels.

President Roosevelt announced the seizure order yesterday at a press conference sandwiched in between a series of war councils with representatives of the United Nations.

The announcement, coming in the midst of a Congressional investigation of international patent pools, was hailed here by members of the Investigating Committee who said they might broaden proposed legislation to give the Government greater control over patents.

"A very salutary and necessary step," said Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.), a member of the committee.

Mr. Roosevelt, invoking his war-time emergency powers, said legal and technical obstacles would be brushed aside and the several thousand patents controlled by Axis nations would be explored and developed for whatever use they may be to America at war.

The first consideration, he declared, was to win. And when the war is over, he went on, the patents will not be permitted to revert to alien hands as they did after the First Great War.

Start Already Made.

Leo Crowley, alien property custodian, said the President's orders already are being carried out—that researchers now are studying once-forbidden processes for making artificial rubber, fuels, foods and fabrics as well as all kinds of drugs, biologicals, electrical equipment and Diesel engines.

Among these, he said, are rubber and gasoline patents held by I. G. Farbenindustrie, the notorious German dye trust.

The seized patents, including those technically held in pools by Americans, will be made available to all United Nations, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Harry L. Hopkins, the President's war supply adviser, gave the President what one informant described as an "interesting and encouraging" report on his recent visit to Great Britain.

Other White House callers included Leighton McCarthy, Canadian minister, who said: "I think we all agree we are getting place," and Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister who told reporters that "we are progressing."

Midland Strike Is Settled

By The Canadian Press.

Shipbuilders returned to work today in Midland and Kingston yards following a settlement of a week-long strike at Midland and a walkout that began last week-end in Kingston out of sympathy with the Midland strikers.

But for five men at Kingston a courtroom was the first major concern. Before the more than 300 Kingston strikers last night followed the earlier example of the Midland workers in calling off the strike, it was learned that summonses were issued the five.

They were issued under orders of Crown Attorney T. J. Rigney, appointed to represent the Department of Justice which on Monday declared both strikes illegal and that the strikers were liable to prosecution under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act. Names of the five were not available.

Kingston strikers appealed last night through their spokesman, however, for withdrawal of charges. Announcing the back-to-work decision, W. E. Blair, union spokesman, said a mass meeting "expressed the desire that we might have the co-operation of the Department of Justice in withdrawing all charges laid by them under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act and thus removing all traces of any hostility that may have been interjected into the issue."

Rehiring Worker.

The 400 Midland strikers were assured that a semi-skilled worker whose dismissal precipitated the walkout, would be rehired. They were also informed that consideration of their request for higher wages would be given by the National War Labor Board.

Members of the Midland Workers' Committee told the mass meeting which voted to end the strike that the "best step to take at this point is to carry on the fight after returning to work." It was announced that a conference of Ontario shipyards employees' representatives would be held in Midland

TORONTO, April 22 — (CP). — Public golf course regulars will join this department in a shudder of horror at what the golf ball shortage will do for fairway shortstops—those aggressive small boys who can dart from behind a tree, steal a golf ball and disappear in the time it takes to say: "Look at that slice!"

Even last year, with no shortages, driving on some public links was like trying to bunt through the Yankee infield. The lads were fielding 'em on the run, over their shoulders and from bad bounces.

Golf balls are classed by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board as seasonal commodities, and thereby are allowed slight price increases. Balls which sold formerly for 75 cents are now 85 in Vancouver. In Toronto, one sports store has repaints at 59 cents.

The Expert Says

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson, regarding fish, fruit and eggs thrown at Toronto's Turk Broda in Detroit: "Apparently there is no thought of food conservation around these parts."

Incidentally

Bill (Kingston Whig-Standard) Walshe, one of the sports editors who suggested this column, recalled a couple of weeks ago that Kingston played in the first challenge series for the Stanley Cup (lost to Montreal) and won the Allan Cup for the first time, beating Ottawa.

Regina Al Ritchie, New York Rangers prairie scout, has signed all but about two members of Edmonton Maple Leafs for tryouts with Rangers next autumn . . . Doug Peden, brother of the famous Torchy, has signed a professional baseball contract with Pittsburgh and will report to Fort Worth in the Texas League this season . . . The Peden brothers have done plenty to publicize Victoria around the sports beat . . . Vince Leah of the Winnipeg Tribune is an eminently successful hockey coach . . . In the last five years his Excelsiors have won 10 Manitoba championships — three midget, four bantam "A" and three bantam "B" . . . A swell record, Vince.

The armed services may branch into baseball in Western Ontario . . . An army team from Chatham and an air force outfit from Fingal are interested . . . Bill (Moncton Transcript) Hutchinson suggests skeet-shooting as training for anti-paratroop forces, says: "Jerries slowly fluttering earthward in parachute harness would be like sitting birds. What couldn't a charge of buckshot do to them."

MM-M-M That's "SKYWAYS"

Sure, your friends know when you are smoking "SKYWAYS" pipe tobacco. It has a distinctive aroma—not pronounced, but certainly very pleasing. What is more important to you though is its flavor. From the first puff to the last you enjoy the full-bodied richness of the finest Ontario-grown burley tobaccos—so processed as to eliminate all bite or sting. If you haven't tried "SKYWAYS" yet, there's new smoking enjoyment awaiting you. But, why wait? Get acquainted today. Ask for "SKYWAYS" in the new, handy, flavor-protecting pouch. It costs only 15c—and you'll consider it a mighty fine investment. •

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Boston Red Sox were idle Tuesday with the result that the New York Yanks, triumphing easily over the Philadelphia Athletics, climbed back on even terms with Joe Cronin's team at the top of the heap. Red Ruffing had little trouble picking up his second win of the season, despite the fact that the A's broke through his delivery for ten hits. The Yanks got their veteran away to a great start when Charlie Kellar hit a homer in the first inning with the bases full. Roger Wolfe started on the rubber for the losers and Christopher had to go to the rescue. St. Louis Browns, finding the going a little tougher in the second week, went down 4 to 2 at the hands of Lou Boudreau's Cleveland Indians. Al Milnar held the Brownies to seven scattered hits. Harris and Hollingsworth did the pitching in behalf of the losing St. Louis club. Schoolboy Rowe, twirling for Detroit got credit for a win over Chicago White Sox, although he did not go the route, Gorsica having to take over the burden. The final count was 4 to 2, the loss going to Humphries.

* * * * * *

A sweet bit of pitching by Mort Cooper of the St. Louis Cardinals featured the doings in the National League. Cooper scored a shutout over the Cincinnati Reds and allowed them only three hits in the best tossing exhibition of the entire day. Bucky Walters had the bad luck to oppose Cooper and the Reds were badly beaten 8 to 0. Blackwell had to finish the pitching chore for the Red veteran. Brooklyn Dodgers who climbed out in front Monday gave notice of their intention of staying there with a hollow victory over the Boston Braves who were beaten 13 to 2. Ed Head, last year with Montreal, had little trouble in winning for the Bums who collected 19 blows off the delivery of Javery, Errickson and Hutchings, with the first-named getting the loss. The Pirates kept close up with an 8 to 6 win over the Chicago Cubs with Sewell pitching steady ball for the winners, holding the Cubs to six safe raps.

The official paper published in connection with the John Inglis plant in Toronto has the following interesting article in regard to a former Peterborough athlete, Emmett Creighton. His many friends here will enjoy the breezy article: "No doubt each one of us knows of some sportsman who is a first class athlete and a fine team player but who is known as a "hard luck Harry," one who seems to hit teams which come just short of championships, although their material is of championship calibre. One of these hard luck athletes is our own Emmett "Red" Creighton, boss of the Colt Cutter Grinding Dept. Red has been in sports since the time his pappy caught him snitching cookies and raced him to the woodshed. This would take us back to around 1927, when Red started playing hockey with Peterborough Midgets. He fooled around with hockey, through Juvenile, Junior and Intermediate years, the latter with Port Hope in O.H.A. company. At the same time he played baseball in the summer time, pitching for the various Peterborough teams, and the only medals won by any of the teams were league championships."

* * * * * *

"Then Red turned to what has turned out to be his main forte, lacrosse, this in 1934," continues the tribute. "This was a championship year for the home town, for the team not only were city champs, but went on to win the inter-county league. Then in 1935 they were beaten out in the playoffs—hard luck and the injury jinx again. Red played for two more years before hitting a championship aggregation and in 1938 it was Peterborough's Senior "B" Club which came through to win the Ontario championship and the William B. Levack Memorial Trophy."

* * * * * *

"The next year this team also flopped and the same thing happened in 1940," concludes the article. "Then last year Red joined the Oshawa team, and as boxla fans will remember, this outfit reached the Ontario finals, only to be beaten out by Owen Sound. Red sums all this tough luck up in one sentence, for, as he says, 'It's exercise, fun, and besides that it's healthy.' So to Emmett Creighton, who in June will join the Benedict League, we wish more success in this circuit than in the sports aggregation you've booked up with so far."

Everything is in readiness for the banquet to be tendered the Peterborough Soldiers hockey club, O.H.A. Senior B champions, by the city council and the Kinsmen Club in the Empress Hotel tomorrow night. The affair is the usual civic recognition of a championship outfit and the service club is acting as joint host on this occasion because of the assistance given by the hockey club to the Kinsmen's Milk for Britain Fund. The Petes will be presented with championship cup from the O.H.A. as well as medals from the Ontario body and Secretary W. A. Hewitt and other hockey notables including Sandy Burrows of Belleville will be here to help do honor to the Petes. A large number of guests has been invited and the affair promises to be a very enjoyable recognition of the cleancut manner in which the Peterborough team won its own group and then went on to capture the Ontario title.

While most Peterborough hockey fans were naturally pulling for Oshawa Generals to take the Memorial Cup, no one here will begrudge the gallant team from Portage Le Prairie their clean cut victory in the final series for the Dominion junior honors. After all Oshawa has had its full share of Memorial Cup glory while for the Western town it was the first time their representatives had ever gone so far along the championship trail. There does not seem to be any doubt of the superiority of the Terriers. They took the series 3 games to 1, outskating the Generals and showing a surprising scoring punch and in the final game at Winnipeg last night they came through with a win that was so decisive that even George Soup Campbell was probably convinced that the better team had taken the championship. And that should about make the thing unanimous. While no one can even hazard a guess as to what is going to happen in hockey in the next year or two it is safe to say that such names as Jack McDonald, Lin Bend, Joe Bell and other Terriers would under ordinary conditions become familiar in professional circles before long.

There is a certain amount of stir along the softball front with the air warming up a bit. President Fred Scates of the City League has decided to call a meeting of that organization for Monday night and that will help to get softball rolling again. Up to the present there has been little activity except down at the Military Training Centre where the Soldiers have been working out for some time. They expect to come up with a strong team this season, with a number of stars from other clubs of last year now in training at the local camp. The latest addition to the Military team is Eddie Dixon, outfielder of last year's Quakers, a good hitter and fielder who will probably win a place on the soldier's lineup. The Peterborough hockey club will have a team in the loop but nothing has been heard from the Orphans, Chesterfields, or Quakers so far this season. Quakers have been hard hit since last campaign. Pitchers Bob Strickland and Frankie Shine are both missing, the former with the Air Force and the latter with the Rangers. Scriver is out because of illness, Dixon is at the Military Training Centre and Manager Shorty Barrett is a member of the Rangers.

Toronto Bowler Lays Pins For 1040 Triple

TORONTO, April 22—Gord Gard, member of the well-known local bowling family, smashed the pins for a 1,040 triple last night at Olympia Gerrard alleys and boosted A. R. Clarke & Co. into first place in the Canadian Bowling Association team event. The Clarkes, helped magnificently by Gard's great rolling, compiled a total of 3,750.

The tall, well-known softball hurler pitched in with a three-game string of 349, 306 and 385 and had he been rolling in the singles would have been virtually assured of a title.

Freddie Turner and Percy Godwin of Pears Academy smashed out a count of 1,681 to take the lead in the doubles, while Len Smith and Reg Gudagno were only thirty pins behind in second place. In third spot with 1,594 was Eddie Marlatt and his partner, Herbie Donaldson.

Big Hometown Dinner Waits Terrier Heroes

WINNIPEG, April 22.—(CP)—Portage la Prairie Terriers rolled home by train today to a roaring welcome from hometown folk including many who watched them win the Memorial Cup and junior hockey championship here last night.

Terriers, successors of Winnipeg Rangers as the nation's best ice artists in the under 20 year class, will be officially honored April 30 at a dinner, sponsored by civic dignitaries and the Board of Trade at the city of 6,000 just 55 miles west of Winnipeg.

Besides prizes scheduled to be donated at the dinner, Terriers hold more hockey honors than any other national champions in 24 years of competition.

They ran up a victory record of 24 straight games, averaged more than eight goals a game for 33 encounters this season, almost twice the average of the opposition.

IT'S A BEAUTY BUT THEY'RE SCARCE!

THE C·C·M· FOR SPRING

FOR OVER 100 YEARS the bicycle has had a universal appeal to old and young and its appeal now is stronger than ever—especially the C.C.M. for Spring! It's a beauty but they're scarce. They're scarce because much of the material and many of the machines with which we ordinarily make bicycles are converted to war work.

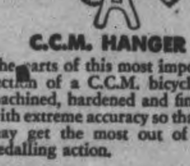
However, we still make as many bicycles as we are able to get material for, as bicycles are essential for many war workers to carry them to and from their important war jobs.

In spite of our manufacturing difficulties we are rigidly maintaining the high quality and precision of C.C.M. Bicycles down to the smallest detail.

If you are engaged in war work go to your C.C.M. dealer and see the C.C.M. Bicycles for Spring. If the dealer can supply you with one you would be wise to buy it and make yourself independent of other means of transportation.

C.C.M. COASTER BRAKE

An improved brake by C.C.M., faster in forward clutch-action, more powerful in its smooth, quick stop than any of its predecessors. Built of super-strong, hardened steels to meet the needs of today's cyclists.



C.C.M. HANGER

The parts of this most important section of a C.C.M. bicycle are machined, hardened and finished with extreme accuracy so that you may get the most out of your pedalling action.

Bearcats Think They'll Hand Flyers 2nd Loss

TORONTO, April 22 — (CP). — Since they've shown it can be done, Port Arthur Bearcats, in the fourth game of the Allan Cup hockey finals here to-night, will again attempt to punch holes in the idea Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers are unbeatable.

The Lakehead club, which lost the first two games before winning one, also need a victory to keep the best-of-five series alive.

On the other hand, the Flyers are determined to show it was all a mistake when they dropped that 3-1 verdict in Montreal on Monday night. It was the first time in 21 games the Airmen took the short end of the score.

Both clubs arrived here last night, the Flyers without either their manager, Squadron Leader Jim Campbell or Coach Bill Touhey. Campbell went under an appendectomy in Ottawa on Saturday, while business prevented Touhey from accompanying his team on the trip. He is due this morning.

Coach Hugh O'Leary of the Bearcats looked forward to his team playing on the big ice surface of the Maple Leaf Gardens and rated the club as an even bet to win.

The ice and rink conditions at Ottawa where the first two games were played was "a tremendous handicap to us," O'Leary said.

"Once we got them on the larger ice surface in Montreal it was a different story."

The Lakehead coach thought it would be the same here, but added this as an afterthought: "That is if some of those young gaffers don't start staring around in amazement at the large Gardens and allow the Flyers to run up a five-goal lead."

Cardinals Defeat Reds 8 to 0; Pittsburg Pirates Down The Cubs

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Cincinnati Reds are staggering groggily at the doorway to the National League cellar and finally learning what their best friends wouldn't tell them during spring training.

The Reds' pitching, one of baseball's marvels for the last three years, suddenly has faltered.

Yesterday St. Louis Cardinals shut out the Redlegs 8-0. The fact that Cincinnati did not score would never cause a ripple of concern anywhere, because the club never has been able to hit, but the fact that Bucky Walters gave up 11 hits in 6 1-3 innings was a matter of moment.

In their six games so far the Reds have had to use 11 hurlers. Elmer Riddle, the league's leading twirler last year, was belted off the mound in the first inning he pitched this season. Gene Thompson lasted only three frames in his first start. John Vander Meer pitched a five-hit game and spoiled it with 'one bad inning" which he seems to run afoul in game after game. Walters was beaten in the opening game of the season, too. He pitched seven-hit ball, yielded four runs in the first four innings. Altogether the Reds have given their foes 53 hits in 60 innings.

Prior to yesterday the Cardinals had come up with two four-hit games. Mort Cooper looked masterful in holding the Reds to three singles in his latest outing and the offensive his teammates waged on Walters was nothing short of vicious.

Braves Crumple 13-2

The Dodgers administered an even more heartless threshing to Boston Braves in a 13-2 decision. They knocked Al Javery out of the box with six hits and six runs in the first inning. They chased Dick Errickson with five hits and three runs in the second. And they collected eight more hits and four additional runs off Johnny Hutchings while coasting with second stringers the rest of the way. Meanwhile Rookie Ed Head pitched eight-hit ball for his second success.

In the only other National League game Truett (Rip) Sewell held Chicago Cubs to six hits while Pittsburg Pirates patterned a 5-2 triumph around home runs by Bob Elliott and Stu Martin.

New York Yankees crushed Philadelphia Athletics 10-4 by way of celebrating Manager Joe McCarthy's 55th birthday. Charley Keller hit a grand slam homer in the first inning and the Yanks raided the A's for five more runs in the fourth. Charley (Red) Ruffing breezed to his second victory of the season without drawing a deep breath.

Detroit Tigers whipped Chicago White Sox 4-2 with Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe and Johnny Gorsica sharing a six-hit pitching stint. Rowe kept the Sox shut out until the ninth, when Gorsica had to come in with the bases loaded to cool off a Chicago rally.

Cleveland bunched its hits to beat St. Louis Browns 4-2 in the other American League game as Lefty Al Milnar kept seven safeties adequately spaced.

Blast Generals 8-2 In 4th Memorial Game

By MARSHAL BATEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG, April 22.—(CP)—Portage la Prairie Terriers rose to the pinnacles of hockey perfection last night to blast Oshawa Generals 8-2 and win the Dominion Junior hockey championship for Manitoba for the fifth time in the last eight years.

Classed on a par with the great Monarch machine from Winnipeg that swept all aside in 1937, the Terriers shone in every department of play as they gave the Eastern champions a lesson in speed to take the best-of-five series 3-1.

In the last two periods only Goalkeeper Rube Waddell prevented the Manitoba goal-crazy kids from running up a count twice as great as the final decisive score.

A great defence—first real body-checking show Terriers put on all season—greeted the Generals in the fourth game. Bill Heindl, Bud Ritchie and Jack O'Reilly generally performed flawlessly in front of Gordie Bell who had a fairly easy night but saved sensationally at times.

The forward lines, particularly Lin Bend, Joe Bell and Bob Love hit a top-geared performance. Wally Shaniw, Bill Golden and Jack McDonald also were at their best.

These trios simply skated the Generals into the ice in the middle session and the Eastern title bearers who won the cup in 1939 and '40 seemed to have lost their stamina for a closing drive.

Bend Warps In Two

Lind Bend, picked by spectators as the most valuable man on the ice, put Terriers on even terms after Oshawa scored midway in the first period, then added another midway in the second. He finished the Portage wide-open offensive with a goal in the last three seconds of the game. Joe Bell notched one while McDonald fired home three quick third-period goals and Stefaniw got the other.

The ice was sticky as the players skated out for the final session. The heat from the crowd of more than 5,000 made the atmosphere humid.

Only in the first period did Oshawa resemble the balanced unit of the previous game. Goalkeeper Bell blocked 14 hot drives in that session while Red Tilson, fast-skating pivot, came out from serving a minor penalty to grab a loose puck and score the first goal of the game.

Tilson, scorer of four goals in one game and play-maker for three in another, also made the play for Generals other goal. He raced down centre, ran smack into Heindl and O'Reilly but got the rubber away to Ken Smith who whipped it home.

It was one of the cleanest national final series ever played. In the closing game only five minors were called. Neither team could capitalize on these breaks.

Zephyr Boxer At Gibraltar

GIBRALTAR, April 22.—(CP). — Sport is the chief amenity of off-duty hours for the Royal Canadian Engineers who have been living a Spartan life for more than a year now at Gibraltar, confined to the narrow limits of the "Rock" which they are helping make impregnable.

The Canucks have been running athletic competitions within their own tunnelling company as well as taking part in garrison tournaments with British troops.

Biggest Canadian athletic achievement was in boxing when Sapper Howard Spencely of Zephyr, Ont., battled his way to the heavyweight championship of Gibraltar. Close contenders in other brackets of the tournament were Sapper Angus McEachern of Thorburn, N.S., Sapper John Melville of Schumacher, Ont., and Sapper Henry McLary of Orangeville Ont.

Wide interest was displayed in a cribbage tournament — listed as "sport" by the Canucks here—with Sapper Albert Nesbitt of Calgary winning the singles and Sapper Sammy Foxhall of London, Ont., a close contender. In soccer, Corporal Davie Conner of London, Ont., organized and captained a formidable squad and won many of the games.

The softball season now is under way with teams from each section entered in the Canadian league. Introduced for the first time last year on the "Rock," the game created considerable interest and amusement for the British troops. Bill Diggins of Stellarton, N.S., has been largely responsible for success of the league.

Unusual Defence

LOS ANGELES, April 22(AP)—A magazine article in which Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight boxing champion, told of having boxed several rounds after being knocked unconscious—but not off his feet—won an acquittal yesterday for Michael Burns, 26, charged with murdering Edward Browski, 32, in a fight with bowling pins. Burns contended that Browski knocked him out, but not down, with a pin and that if he struck Browski he did it while unconscious. Physicians agreed his story was logical.

Andrews Hurls Chiefs 9-0 Win Over Wings

By The Associated Press

Big Nate Andrews, who has been shuffling back and forth between the majors and minors since St. Louis Cardinals brought him up to the big stem in 1938, has gained sweet revenge on his former bosses.

The righthander, who also has been tested by St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians, yesterday pitched Syracuse Chiefs into first place in the International League by setting down Rochester Red Wings, a Cardinal farm, with seven hits for a 9-0 victory.

The great Rochester power, which hammered nine home runs against Baltimore in the opening games of the season, was held in check. Andrews was never in trouble. He struck out eight men and walked two.

Nino Bongiovanni led the 10-hit attack against Matthew Surkont and Mike Clark with three for five and drove in two runs.

In the only other game played, Baltimore Orioles defeated the last place Buffalo Bisons 6-4.

Bob Lemon and George Staller walloped home runs for the Birds, while Mike Rocco kept the Bisons in the ball game with a round trip-

WA Of Lakefield Makes 58 Quilts In Winter

LAKEFIELD, April 22—(ENS).—As evidence of their splendid activities, Mrs. George Spencer, convener of the quilting group, announced at the April meeting Tuesday afternoon, that the Regent Street W.A. ladies had completed and forwarded to the Red Cross since November 58 quilts.

Over thirty ladies were in attendance and they decided to cancel the annual strawberry festival. It was believed that the loss sustained would be covered by returns from the five-cent-a-week envelopes, distributed among the members previously.

In order to save fuel in the church and due to pressure of annual housecleaning season, further quiltings were called off until summer.

A short program in charge of Mrs. Oscar Calberry, convenor of Group "C", consisted of scripture reading by Mrs. Roland Bullock, solo by Mrs. Carl Butcher, accompanied by Mrs. Walter Yale. President Mrs. John George Kelly with prayer by Mrs. Murphy was in charge of the business session, after which a social half hour was spent.

Car Stands on Its Rad

An unusual accident took place on the Buckhorn road on Monday when a half-ton truck, owned by C. J. Whitmore, general merchant of Selwyn, and driven by Eli Burston, turned on its side in the ditch. The oddity of the crash was that the truck, which had apparently hit a soft shoulder of the road, stood upright on the radiator for some minutes before flopping over on its side.

Neither Mr. Burston nor Mrs. Whitmore, a passenger in the truck, were injured, but considerable damage was done to the radiator, lights and fenders of the machine.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sherin, who have been in Toronto for several months, returned to the village this week.

Miss Elinor Jewell and her little friend, Miss Sonia McLaughlin of Peterborough, have been spending the past few days with Elinor's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Jewel, Queen street.

Friends of the Rev. George Kelly will regret to learn that he has been ill with the 'flu and was unable to take the Sunday services at Regent Street United Church. Mr. Robert Kitchen, of Peterborough, Missionary Convener of the Bay of Quinte Conference, took the morning service.

Mrs. W. A. Payne, Mrs. Orville Ridpath and Mrs. Andy Miller are on the sick list this week.

Mr. Don Hendren has returned home from Nicholls Hospital, where he had been for several weeks.

The many friends of Mrs. Arthur Kingdon were glad to see her out at church on Sunday after her recent illness.

damages from falling aircraft and Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) wanted to know why the war risk insurance bill did not provide for damage from sabotage.

"I want to point out to the member (Mr. McNevin) and some others who advocated a wider range of coverage that the government has no desire to provide insurance that is being provided now even by a few companies," said Mr. Ilsley.

"It is only because war risk insurance is not provided at all now that the government is getting into the business. The object of this measure is not to give a cheaper form of insurance that cannot otherwise be obtained."

Regarding sabotage Mr. Ilsley said it was hard to determine when damage was due to that cause. If sabotage were covered there might be endless debate and litigation over whether an explosion was due to enemy sabotage or some other cause whereas damage from bombardment as plain and open for all to see the cause.

The provisions of the bill are retroactive to Dec. 24, 1941, and earlier Mr. Ilsley stated insurance companies stopped accepting war risk contracts in Canada after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The retroactive feature, however, limits compensation to $50,000.

Protest $50,000 Limit

Some members objected to this limit on the feature of the Bill which applies pending the time it becomes law. The minister said it was hoped that no substantial damage would occur but if a property worth $1,000,000 were destroyed and there were no limit on compensation the owner would get the benefit of an assumption that had the bill been law he would have insured his property "for the full million dollars, which is an entirely unjustifiable assumption."

The compensation is free retroactive compensation and I think there should be some limitation of that compensation," he said. "Whether $50,000 is the proper amount I do not know."

The Bill met with general approval although Conservative House Leader Hanson and several other opposition members objected to the powers conferred on the government to make regulations under it.

Mr. Ilsley said such powers were more necessary in wartime than in peacetime. The bill was an experimental one and it was impossible to spell out every line of the policy to be pursued.

At the opening of the sitting Prime Minister Mackenzie King made a brief statement on the Pacific Council which meets at Washington. He said President Roosevelt is chairman and the procedure is much the same as in a cabinet council. He said he could not disclose what matters were discussed. Mr. King visited Washington last week and attended a session of the council.)

A sort of informal Pacific Council had been formed in London but that body did not now exist except in a general way. If it became active Canada would be represented on it by the high commissioner, Hon. Vincent Massey.

Mr. King said "There are bodies which have to do with questions that arise out of decision with respect to strategy which exist alike in London and in Washington, but the fact that one exists in one country and the other in the other does not mean that either is subordinate to the other.

"It is part of the arrangement under which the present war is being carried on, which recognizes at the head of the command a combination of the Prime Minister of Great Britain and the President of the United States."

Many Skeptics.

Many members were skeptical about the success of the Veterans' Land Bill, basing their views on the operation of the Soldier Settlement Act after the first Great War and the difficulty experienced by farmers in earning a living in recent years but most were willing to support the Mackenzie bill while warning against mistakes.

J. M. Dechene (Lib., Athabaska) took other members to task for their pessimism. He said he had started farming in the West in a shack and had seen bad times but looked for plenty of opportunities after the war.

"I am convinced there will be more opportunities after this war for those with ambition and courage than we have had in this country for many decades," he said.

"I say to the young men who are in the forces and to those who unfortunately perhaps because of physical defects are unable to join, do not listen to the proposition that this world will not be fit to live in after the war.

"I resent and deprecate and reject the libels being expressed on the floor of this House against Canada, its possibilities and its people."

Dutch Denounce 1940 Premier De Geer, Traitor

LONDON, April 22—(CP). — The Netherlands Government in London in a broadcast last night to the Nazi-occupied homeland assailed Derek Jan de Geer, Premier at the time of the German invasion, as a "traitor" and a "tool for his peoples' enemy."

The broadcast said De Geer, who returned to the Netherlands from London late in 1940 to join his ailing wife, had written a pamphlet which the Nazis are permitting to circulate and which "is a crafty plea for a compromise peace."

De Geer also was accused of twice breaking his word: First, when he went back to the Netherlands via Lisbon and Berlin at a time when he had accepted a mission from the Government in London to the Netherlands Indies and second, because he promised when he got back to Holland that he would live as a "forgotten citizen."

"With this pamphlet," said the broadcast, as quoted by the Aneta News Agency, "the writer has betrayed the Netherlands people, whatever happens to him personally."

Information reaching responsible Netherlands sources in New York indicates that the Germans are playing the pious, elderly, De Geer against Anton Mussert, the Netherlands Nazi leader. Mussert, long a foe of De Geer, is understood to have retaliated by charging De Geer with mistreating Netherlands Nazis during the invasion of Holland, "provoking Japan," neglecting the Indies and with leaving the Netherlands while military operations were proceeding in May of 1940.

HOW TO TELL TWINS APART or Pepsodent to the Rescue!

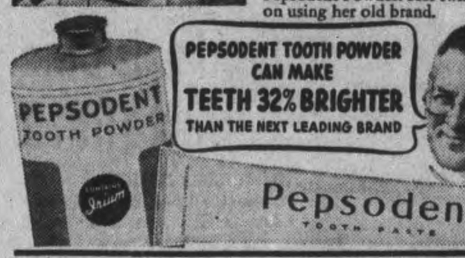
1. Twins are confusing enough. But when one of them deliberately tries to fool a fellow . . . well . . . I was all at sea . . .

3. Suddenly we had a wonderful idea . . . Joan and I decided to turn the tables on her twin sister. Joan switched to Pepsodent Powder. Her twin kept right on using her old brand.

4. It worked like a charm! One quick glance told me Joan's teeth were twice as bright! They both use Pepsodent now, but I can tell Joan every time . . . she's the one with my solitaire on her finger!



5. Independent laboratory tests proved this fact. No other powder can give Pepsodent's high degree of lustre, because only Pepsodent contains Composite Metaphosphate, the remarkable patented polishing ingredient.

KINSMEN MEETING.

It is open house at the next meeting of the Kinsmen Club on Thursday evening, and members of the Peterborough Senior B hockey team, Provincial champions, will be the guests along with members of the City Council. Trophies and medals will be presented at the meeting, which is being held in conjunction with the Kinsmen because the latter are appreciative of the fine work done by the hockey players in aiding the Milk for Britain Fund.

STRICT ECONOMY.

An item which might be termed a masterpiece of Scottish economy, but which actually is only in keeping with the spirit of the times, came to light today. Jack Smith, Benson Avenue, wrote a letter to his brother Adam, in Lanarkshire, Scotland. The latter cut one end of the envelope open, and in answering enclosed his letter in the same envelope, sealed the end, crossed out his own address, and re-addressed the envelope to the original sender back in Canada. The letter arrived on schedule.

NEED MORE STUDENTS.

Men between 16 and 19, and over 35, are eligible to train for war work in the war emergency classes at the Collegiate. William Mellis, of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, Barrie Building, reported today he can place 30 men before next Monday in a class if they apply. Subsistence allowances will be paid. Rejects from the army, or those medically unfit, regardless of age, are also eligible to take the course.

ALL TOURISTS.

Two hundred Rotarians and their wives are expected in Cobourg on July 21st from Wayne County, New York, according to word received here by Joe Patterson, president of Cobourg Rotary Club. They will make the trip over on the local car ferry. It is expected that representatives of Rotary clubs from Toronto to Belleville and north to Peterborough and Campbellford, will be on hand to greet the American Rotarians.

STILL THEY CLIM.

Reports on weekly sales of war savings stamps at the Peterborough Collegiate shows another fine job done. There were $235.00 worth of stamps sold, which is a slight decrease but the pupils made it up in certificates when they came through with a total sale of $556.00.

SUCKERS RUNNNG

Tuesday night two youngsters were using a pitchfork to good advantage in Jackson Park Creek, way up in the park scooping large black suckers out on shore. The suckers are well worth preparing for the table at this time of year, and a person who cleans them, removing the backbone, and cutting off the portion directly in front of the tail, will get rid of most of the bones.

GRENFELL MISSION.

SLOW AT KENDRY.

Don't hit Kendry crossing at anything more than five miles an hour, motorists advise the public driving down the Port Hope highway. The C.P.P. crossing is said to be in a state of high hazard to tires and springs. A trucker said that one of two new tires blew out as he went over the rails yesterday.

PUT OUT FLAGS

Thursday being Saint George's Day merchants are urged to put out their flags in honor of the great fight that Britons are waging for democracy.

AUCTION SALE

Nearly four hundred farmers attended the auction sale on the farm of Wesley Webster, Otonabee, Monday. H. R. Redmond was in charge of the sale, and prices are said to have been favorable. A spreader bought last fall sold for only six dollars less than it cost.

MORE CENSORSHIP

Ottawa press censors are being instructed to reduce the news permissible to print, according to a report from the Capital explaining that events of late have seriously increased the menace of enemy action against Canadian war industry. In that connection a local man said that he had come by information some time ago about a big convoy then leaving Halifax. It was told to him by a friend, but the significant fact was that he did hear about a vastly important operation that should not have been known.

FEMININE SLOGAN

"Bulge for Britain" is a feminine slogan in the Old Country, applying to those who if they cannot 'slim' are going to forget the fuller lines for which there is a scarcity of the usual restraining garments.

71 IN THE ARMY

Bill Scott, president of the Friday Night Supper Club reported today that 71 members and former members of the club are now in the active service forces. About fifty of that number are in the air force. This is a fine effort and dwarfs the other clubs, but the comparison is not exactly fair as all members of the Friday Night Club are in the military age groups, and would naturally gravitate to the armed forces quicker than the older men, with more responsibilities, both in industry and in business.

BARE LEGS

Scarcity of silk stockings is believed to be responsible for the epidemic of bare legs noticeable as the girls walk home from local factories. Apparently the lasses are buying short socks, and are saving the longer hose, by sporting bare limbs, thus effecting an economy, and aiding the war effort by reducing the sales of unessential commodities—that is unessential in the summer.

SUSPENDED COURT

Gerald Sweet was found guilty after a trial in police court this morning of fraudulently obtaining food and lodging from John A. Loucks, 301 Townsend street and was allowed to go on suspended sentence, provided he pay $10 the court found owing to Loucks. Sweet, seventeen-year-old Trenton boy is related to Loucks who is his great uncle. The complainant claimed that Sweet owed $15 but Magistrate Langley sliced $5 off that amount after hearing the evidence. The boy was defended by W. B. Gordon.

HAVELOCK MAN HURT

When he lost control of his car on Bloor street and Indian Road, Toronto, early Tuesday, Bruce A. Curtis of Havelock suffered broken ribs and concussion of the brain when the automobile crashed into an iron post. He was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto. Toronto police said that the car plunged over the curb and struck the post which was on the property of a service station. The vehicle was badly damaged.

PRISONER OF WAR

Surgeon Lt.-Cmdr. William Duncan Gunn of the Royal Navy is a prisoner of war in Hong Kong, his uncle, James Thorndyke of Oakwood, was informed today by Lt.-Cmdr. Gunn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hugh Gunn of New Westminster, B.C. Born in Alberta 33 years ago, Lt.-Cmdr. Gunn received his commission five years ago in England and was in charge of one of the largest service hospitals in Hong Kong.

CHARGE WITHDRAWN

A charge against W. S. Jolly of driving over a fire hose with an automobile was withdrawn today after it was learned that Jolly himself had not been driving the car when the offence was committed. His son who is in the Air Force happened to be at the wheel at the time, according to the father. Fire Chief Gimblett intimates that while this case had to be dropped because of the circumstances, that other offenders who persist in driving over hose while the firemen are fighting a fire will be prosecuted.

TRAFFIC CASES

For failing to bring his car to a full stop before entering a through street Michael Brady, on a written plea of guilty, was fined $2 and $1 costs in police court this morning. It was explained that there had been an accident but Brady had paid all the damages. Denton Johnston was fined a similar amount for overtime parking.

Rangers Plan Church Parade To All Saints'

Headed by the Regimental Band members of the Active Battalion of The Prince of Wales Rangers will attend Divine Service at All Saints' Anglican Church on Sunday morning next, it is announced by Major R. J. Bolton, the Acting Officer Commanding.

The occasion will be the dedication by the rector of All Saints' of a silken Union Jack to be presented by Mrs. A. Mason in memory of her son, Christie Mason, who was killed in a motorcycle accident while serving with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps in England on 7th December, 1940.

"Chris" Mason joined the Rangers at the age of 14 years, and at the time of his enlistment into the Active Army in the Fall of 1939 was a member of the Sergeants' Mess. He went overseas in February, 1940, and was only twenty years of age at the time he met his death.

Another flag—a Canadian flag—is also to be dedicated at the same service. It is one presented by the Boys' Club of All Saints' of which Mason was also a member.

As a tribute to this young soldier, Major Bolton announces that the Active Battalion will parade at full strength, with exception of those members of the unit who are away on courses of instruction in various parts of the Dominion.

Capt. W. H. Peryer, E.D., Director of Music, is cooperating to the fullest extent and the members of the band are asked to make a special effort to turn out for the parade, notwithstanding that many of the bandsmen are engaged on war industry that requires them to work on Sundays.

The parade will fall-in at the Armouries at ten o'clock a.m.

At North Bay

Lt. Bob Juby, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Juby, 319 Boswell Avenue, is now serving at North Bay. He graduated from the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville, a short time ago, and was posted as a reinforcing officer to the S.D. and G. Highlanders. He enlisted in the reserve army with the Rangers, and was later recommended as a cadet to take the course at Brockville.

36 Candidates Boarded For Active Army

Today the recruiting office at the Armouries published the fourth list of men who have presented themselves for examination for admittance into the army, but whose services have had to be refused on medical grounds. These men deserve commendation for thus offering themselves and it is for this reason that their names are made public. Their rejection is a matter of regret to all concerned, but at the same time it serves to emphasize the high medical standard set by the examining board. The board's activities yesterday kept pace with the livelier recruiting tempo: not less than thirty-six candidates for the active army were medically boarded during the day, and in the evening many were examined for service with the second battalion.

Two Boys Overturn In Canoe At Chemong

BRIDGENORTH, April 22—(ENS)—What might have been a fatal accident occurre when two young boys capsized in a canoe on Chemong Lake on Monday evening. The boys were Bill Glover, aged 13, and Jack O'Connor, aged 10, both residents of Chemong Park.

They managed to swim and push their overturned canoe to the shore. They made their way to the home of James Gifford, the reeve of Ennismore, and phoned to their parents to come for them.

Mark Ballot Only With "X"

When you go to vote next Monday on the plebiscite please remember that you do not write any word on the ballot.

You do not write "Yes" as the democratic world expects of you; nor do you write the "No" which only Hitlerites and Quislings will applaud.

You simply mark the letter "X" opposite the word "Yes." Of course if you want to line up with those who do not want to defend their country until its enemies are right here on the home soil, if you can blindly think your way into voting "No," then you mark the "X" in the blank space opposite the word "No" on the ballot.

The explanation should not be necessary, but Doug. Hammond, who is assisting Vincent Eastwood in the preparations for the taking of this vote of the Canadian people, said today that many enquiries are received as to what the citizen has to do.

Remember, Mr. Hammond says, if you WRITE any word on the ballot you thereby destroy its effect.

Then, people are talking about what the plebiscite, and some of those who assume to advocate it manage unintentionally to add a needless note of confusion by interjecting the advisability of even taking the plebiscite.

The question you are being asked is this: "Are you in favor of releasing the Government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

What is mean by "past commitments" in that question?—The Government's promise during the last general election that military service beyond the shores of Canada would not be compulsory. Both parties held out the same undertaking.

You are not being asked to express your opinion about the necessity of such a "release." You may think Mr. King is unduly meticulous, but that is not an issue.

One man said the other day, "I am not going to vote to send my neighbor's boy overseas." You are actually not being asked to express that [illegible]. That final step will remain with the Government.

A "YES" vote does imply your approval of the Government sending Canadian fighters anywhere the Government considers they are needed or can strike the best blow to win the war.

Muskie Season Will Open Dominion Day

Hopes of the local resort owners that the bass and maskinonge season might be open on June 27, the Saturday before July 1 are sent glimmering by the announcement from D. J. Taylor, deputy minister of the Game and Fisheries that they anticipate no change in the opening date, which is usually July 1.

The local association favored moving the opening date back to June 20, but most people feel this is going a bit too far, although it is an early spring, and it is logical to expect bass and maskinonge will have completed spawning far in advance of the last week in June. At that time regardless of weather conditions some bass seem to be still in the shallows spawning, but these represent only a small portion of the bass population.

Factory workers, plugging away up to seventy hours a week, want every week-end they can get for a spot of fishing, and with other wartime restrictions in the shape of reduced gasoline rations, and a scarcity of tires, their chances of fishing are materially reduced. These men for the most part favor opening the season on June 27, as this would give them an extra week-end for a whack at the bass and muskies, and it would also enable many of the factory workers in the States to come across the line over that week-end for a two-day fish.

Big Investment

Resort owners claim they have a tremendous investment in their properties, and all have been hard hit by a scarcity of male and female help, so that they too hope to prolong the fishing season in order that they may show a profit on the year. Then again reduction in the amount of gas available for outboard motors, gives them an additional headache.

The feeling is general that many of the tourists who come to this district to fish during the spring and summer will be short term holidayers who can get just two or three days because of war demands on their jobs.

Mr. Taylor makes no mention of the opening of the pickerel season in this district, in his letter to Mr. Kingan, but it is likely this will be the same as last year namely May 16. Speckled trout and lake trout fishing in this county will probably remain the same as last year also, May 1. In 1941 the maskinonge season opened on June 28, which gave the fishermen and the resort owners the extra week-end.

Any local fishermen or resort owners who feel action should be taken to have the season for bass and maskinonge opened on June 27, should wire or write Mr. Taylor giving notice of their views in the matter.

Helps British War Victims

Mrs. Jane Chapman, of 226 Woodbine Avenue, who made a beautiful quilt and donated it to the British War Victims' Fund. Mrs. Chapman is approaching her 85th birthday, and is quite a past master at making quilts, having only recently won a first and third prize at the last Peterborough Exhibition to be held, and does all her own housework. On Tuesday she was longing for the warm weather in order that she might get out to work in the garden. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion held a draw for the quilt, which resulted in $30 coming to the fund.

Given Priorities Omemee Tannery Can Soon Be Back Into Production

OMEMEE, April 22—(By Staff Reporter)—"I can get this factory back into production in sixty days, if I can just make Government officials give the cooperation that I feel is justified in view of our war contracts," Charles Shaw, general manager of the North American Leather Company at Omemee said today. His big plant which manufactures one-quarter of all the sole leather required for army boots in Canada was almost entirely destroyed by fire on Monday evening.

To back up his assertion of immediate action, Mr. Shaw had the ninety male employees of the tannery on the job Wednesday morning, clearing away the old wood to burn it, stacking the iron, and sorting the burned metals for scrap and for use in the new building. The men thus are not losing time nor money as a result of the fire, but they will lose some time later.

Saved Machinery

"The men went in under a falling roof, hooked on to a ten-ton machine and pulled it to safety at the risk of being burned or seriously injured by falling debris," Mr. Shaw said as he paid high tribute to these workers who rallied to his aid when fire struck the building.

"It has been positively refreshing the way the men stayed on the job and did all they could to reduce the loss and I want to extend my heartfelt thanks to the firemen of Peterborough and Lindsay, and the citizens of the district, all of whom gave such valuable aid.

A survey by Mr. Shaw has revealed that there is no shortage of electric motors, or incidental switching equipment, and all of the main tanning equipment can be put back into service in a short time. Many of the steel "I" beams were twisted by the heat, but these can be split with a torch and used as reinforcing steel in the concrete pillars. A one storey building on the site of the mill that was burned can be built in a mighty short time under supervision of an expert from the Canada Cement Company, unless government priorities interfere.

Interesting History

The history of the tanning industry in the village of Omemee is an interesting one, and as the tannery is the primary industry in the thriving little village, the fire loss has been a a heavy blow to the entire district.

Ninety years ago, George Lamb came to Omemee and purchased a smal tannery which was then in operation. Two years later, the building was torn down and rebuilt, and as the years passed the factory was enlarged. Mr. Lamb died in 1893.

That same year Mr. Lamb's son, the late J. J. Lamb, built the huge brick smokestack which still stands, a monument to his ability as a builder. In 1898, J. J. Lamb took his son Harry into the business, and the partnership flourished, and the business increased materially. The son, Harry Lamb, still lives in Omemee.

The number of employees increased and one of their products "Empire Harness Leather" was known from coast to coast as a top ranking product. J. J. Lamb died in 1916, and his son carried on until 1918, when he sold out to C. Parsons and Son of Toronto, who operated the firm under the name, Omemee Tannery Co., with Mr. Lamb as manager.

Demand for harness leather slumped as the motor cars increased in number, and made horse drawn vehicles less essential, and the plant was remodelled to manufacture sole leather.

Charles Shaw, the present manager took over the duties in 1932 and has been a popular member of the small community since that time. Last year eight new homes were built for the employees, and there is a spirit of loyalty and cooperation apparent in the organization that would gladden the heart of any industrial executive.

Legion Ladies Make $30 For War Victims

On a number of occasions the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion has done good work on behalf of air raid victims in Britain through the City and district fund which operates solely for that purpose.

The fruits of their latest effort [illegible] acknowledged in today's list for the fund, and is result of a draw for [illegible] quilt, made and donated by Mrs. Chapman of Woodbine avenue. Mrs. Chapman is well over the four score mark, being 84 years of age, and the labor of love to help those in distress must surely bring her much satisfaction and especially the nice amount of money which it was the means of raising. The Ladies' Auxiliary sponsored the sale of tickets, from which $30 was raised, and the draw for [illegible] was made by Andy Rutter Sr., at [illegible] Canadian Legion Bingo, and resulted in Mrs. Stirrett of 247 Park street being the winner with ticket No. 2135.

Another interesting item of note in today's list for the fund, comes as the result of a collection taken at a banquet for the Senior Bowling League of the Y.M.C.A. held on Monday night, the result of a suggestion to the twenty-five members gathered at this function, that they might like to help the people in Britain. This resulted in the $8.4[illegible] credited in their name today, being handed in by Bill Saunders on behalf of Gray Copping, the president and the members of this group.

One personal donation is listed this coming from one who has given a number of times previously to the fund.

Musical Tea

The pupils of Mrs. R. T. F. Brai[illegible] have helped the fund at least on three occasions as a group, and now they are working to add still further to their record by holding a Musical Tea in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon at [illegible] o'clock. Tickets are now on sale at 25 cents each, and may be procured from any of the pupils from this studio.

Brides Honored By Friends At Double Shower

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. N. Roseborough, 120 Gladstone Avenue, Tuesday night was the scene of a happy and rather unique gathering, when Mrs. Roseborough entertained at a miscellaneous shower—unique in that two brides of the near future, both nieces, the Misses Leta Dixon, and Ethel Blakely, of Lakefield, were the guests.

Some twenty relatives and girl friends gathered in a living room, delightful in pink and white. Centre of attraction was the "wishing well," with little Fern VanNest in fairy garb officiating, while Master Melville Robinson produced the gifts from the depths. Unwrappings by the guests of honor provided a jolly half-hour as the gifts were viewed.

Mothers of the two brides-to-be Mrs. James E Dixon and Mrs. John Blakely, presided at a table centred by pink and white snapdragons and pink candles, pouring tea and coffee. Assisting were the Misses Zetta Wood and Mable Robinson, Mrs. Gordon Robinson and Mrs. Percy VanNest.

Games and contests rounded out an enjoyable evening. Previous to the party, Miss Dixon and Miss Blakely were dinner guests of Mrs. Roseborough.

Neglected Children Are Problem For Children's Aid

The regular meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held on Tuesday afternoon in the committee room of the City Buildings, with Mr. E. B. Fowler, vice-president, in the chair in the absence of Mr. James Dutton, president.

It was decided that Miss Rachael Young, supervisor, and two delegates from the board, to be designated by the president, should attend the conference of Associated Children's Aid Societies, to be held in Toronto May 14 and 15; and that Miss Alfreda Swenfield should attend the Canadian Conference of Social Workers, to be held in Montreal May 4 to 7. Regret was expressed at the loss of Mrs. R. Cutting, who is leaving the city and can no longer be a member of the board.

Miss Skenfield read the supervisor's report, in the absence of Miss Young, who has been ill for the past week. Twenty new families, involving 19 children, were reported to the Society during the month; 11 investigations were referred by the Dependants' Allowance Board. One child remained in the Hospital a month, following a mastoid operation; one was placed in a foster home for the first time; a baby was moved to a home nearer medical care; 32 children received medical care; one child was taken to the Neurological Clinic at the Sick Children's Hospital and the doctor recommended her staying in tht Shelter for three years. Four final adoptions were obtained, but two children were admitted to care on a adoption basis. This phase of the Society's work is steadily growing.

During this month 12 children were admitted to the Shelter in one night. The children were dirty and several of them had bad colds and their clothing was ragged and filthy. They were admitted because they were found alone in their home at night. Mrs. MacMillan was forced to take a compete rest in order to regain her health and a great deal of trouble was experienced in getting someone to take over some if the responsibility, but the services of Mrs. Douglas of Warsaw were finally secured.

There are 11 children at present in the shelter, the reason for this increasing difficulty in finding foster homes for them. The gas ration is making the work of the Society more difficult and if the ration is curtailed the difficulty will become serious.

Plans were discussed at the meeting for the annual meeting, to be held April 28, next Tuesday, in St. Johns Parish Hall. The Hon. F. Oliver, Minister of Public Wefare, will be the speaker

St. Peters CWL Review Work At Annual Meeting

The well-attended annual meeting of St. Peter's C.W.L. was held on Tuesday evening in St. Peter's School. A year of unusual activity, resulting in splendid reports, was revealed as the '41-'42 executive retired. The president, Mrs. F. J. Lynch, opened the meeting with the League prayer for peace. Following the presentation of the recording secretary's report, Rev. Fr. Finn, Chaplain, was introduced.

Father Finn, in his address, described the C.W.L. from the National executive to the district subdivisions in a most inspiring manner and called on every member for all out effort in every war project, and particularly to give every assistance to the soldiers, sailors and airmen who are giving their all that we may live in peace and harmony.

The report of the corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Clancy, was then given. The report of the 1st vice-president, Miss Agnes Grant, showed a remarkable growth in membership. The educational efforts were well rewarded and the winning ticket on the afghan donated by Mrs. Foley was drawn for by Mrs. R. J. Kearns. The winner was Mrs. B. Conway, 306 Aylmer Street

The musical program was presided over by Miss L. Hurley. Miss Geraldine Collins rendered two beautiful selections, accompanied by Miss Marion Best, A.T.C.M., who also played two piano solos which were much enjoyed by her audience.

The third vice-president, Mrs. J. Roach, was revealing. This is a very busy office, ranging among all types of relief work, including destitute families, homeless girls, neglected children, and incurable children and adults. Mrs. Roach was thanked for her aggressiveness and faithfulness in the year's work, in which she has been called out night and day, Sundays and holidays.

Miss G. McNamara, treasurer, read an encouraging report. Over $500 was raised and disbursed by the C.W.L. in the past year. Most of this money was expended in war work and all National and Diocesan obligations were met. Miss McNamara was highly commended for her work in this position.

The war work convener, Mrs. P. J. Burke, gave an impressive report. The work done by the C.W.L. at the Red Cross rooms, the Training Centre, the Salvage Depot, and most important of all, for the boys overseas, was enormous. Mrs. Burke read a letter from Hon. Captain W. O McCarney, overseas chaplain, who thanked the ladies on behalf of himself and the boys whom they had remembered. He assured the ladies that the boys were in the best of health and spirits.

As wool convener, Mrs. George Lynch stressed as an important feature the seamen's socks and equipment. Mrs. Lynch was asked to co-operate with Mrs. Dorrington, president of the Peterborough and District Auxiliary to the Navy, and promised all possible assistance to sailor boys.

Miss T. McNamara presented Mrs. Overend's report on the Red Cross work. This important feature of the C.W.L. war work was well carried on. Miss E. Dainard gave a very able report on the work of visiting the sick and shut-ins which has been carried on during the year.

Mrs. R. J. Kearns, president of C.W.S.C., was introduced by Mrs. Lynch and addressed the members on the Salvage work. Her enlightening remarks astounded her listeners and all assured her of their sincere interest. Her startling figures of money raised by the salvage turnover and donated to war work societies in England and Canada was surprising.

The Hon. J. J. Duffus addressed the meeting on the plebiscite, stressing the sincerity of our Prime Minister. His remarks were timely and instructive, and their impression on the audience was very marked. A hearty vote of thanks to the speakers, and to Miss Best and Miss Collins was moved by Mrs. J. Roach and seconded by Mrs. A. Grant and Mrs. P. J. Burke.

The Sacred Heart and Immaculate Conception sub-divisions were splendidly represented and their presence was much appreciated. The election of officers for 1942-3 was conducted with the Diocesan president, Miss L. Hurley, in the chair. The slate of officers is as follows: President, Mrs. F. J. Lynch; Past President, Miss L. Hurley; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. John Cameron; 2nd Vice-President, Miss G. Collins; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. J. Roach, Jr.; Corresponding Secretary, Miss M. Clancey; Treasurer, Miss T. McNamara; Wool and Navy League convener, Mrs. George Lynch.

Emem's New Era Cake

The delicious fragrance from it is in the air—that's how brand new this recipe for the cake is.

Doubtless you are aware of how "hipped" I am on the subject of using whole wheat flour whenever possible. Why not a cake from it? Answer follows:

EMEN'S NEW ERA CAKE
(using whole wheat flour and half sugar, half corn syrup.)

Two cups sifted whole wheat flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup butter (or ¼ cup shortening and ¼ cup butter), ½ cup sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 eggs, yolks and whites separated. Sift the whole wheat flour, adding the siftings in the sifter to the flour. Add the baking powder and salt to the sifted flour and sift again. Into bowl measure the butter and sugar and cream them very well, then add the corn syrup. Sift the dry ingredients into the butter mixture, alternately with the milk about ¼ of each at a time. Now separate the eggs, and beat the whites, then lift the beater with some of the whites clinging to it into the bowl containing the yolks and beat until very foamy and pale and thick. Add the yolks and vanilla to the batter and then carefully fold in whites. Have an 8" x 8" x 2" cake pan, buttered, paperlined and buttered again ready and pour in batter. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for from 30 to 35 minutes having cake in exact centre of oven. Turn out on cake rack when done and immediately peel off the paper. Let cool. When cold cover with date or raisin filling, and cover this with Boiled Frosting made with corn syrup instead of sugar.

Date or Raisin Filling: ½ lb. dates or raisins, 1 cup water, ½ cup corn syrup. Wash dates and stone or just wash raisins. Add water and syrup and cook over low heat until thick enough to spread. Cool before spreading over cake. Cover with:

SEVEN-MINUTE CORN SYRUP FROSTING

Into top of double boiler put 1 cup corn syrup, 1 egg white, ⅛ teaspoon white vinegar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, and beat over boiling water until stiff enough to stay in peaks. You need not hurry with spreading this frosting—its beauty lies in its dependability, and its creamy appearance and delicious flavor will make a standby with you.

When you try the cake with all whole wheat flour I would appreciate knowing how the family took to it. Mine said "Swell, Mum"

St. James' W.M.S. Holds Easter Meeting

The Easter meeting of St. James' United Auxiliary of the W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. Wesley Rose, presiding. A short devotional service was the prelude to the splendid Easter program, arranged by Mrs. F. W. Craik and her group.

Following the theme "The Call of the Risen Christ to Youth," the program was largely responsive with various members assisting the leader as readers and singers. A familiar hymn "What a Wonderful Saviour", chosen by a shut-in group member, Mrs. P. Sollitt, was sung by Mrs. E. Kitney, accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Doig, and followed the timely Easter message of Mrs. E. J. Wagar to her Auxiliary members. Earnest prayer was led by Miss M. Kidd, Mrs. Wesley Rose and Mrs. E. Beavis, and the worship service closed with the benediction used by the Missionary Monthly.

Preceding the brief business session, prayer was offered by Mrs. A. Cripps. Reports from the secretary and treasurer were found encouraging. Letters were received regarding requirements for the bale and two letters from Missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Kitchen and Miss Dorothy Fox of China.

For Community Friendship Mrs. A. Rowe reported sending fifty Easter cards and Mrs. E. Beavis brought her usual inspiring temperance message. The department of Christian Stewardship was represented in a talk entiled "Budget Building" by Miss M. Deyell. Collectors were appointed for the Bible Society of Canada to represent St. James' Auxiliary, Mrs. A. E. Prest and Mrs. W. K. Sloane.

The beautiful bouquet of spring flowers, the gift of Mrs. Craik, were sent to Mrs. Sollitt at the close of the service.

Muriel J. Potts Is Bride Of Harold Barnard

George Street United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday when Muriel Jean, youngest daughter of Mr. G. H. Potts and the late Mrs. Potts became the bride of Harold Percy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Barnard of Bailieboo. The cermony as performed by Rev. H. L. Roberts, and Mr. A. Collison played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white faille taffeta gown with a long full skirt and circular train and a fingertip veil of white net and carried a bouquet of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Norman Edgar, as matron of honor, who wore a pale blue gown similar to the bride's, with a matching turban and a nosegay of pink sweet peas and roses. Miss Phyllis Rome, as bridesemaid, wore a similar gown of pale yellow taffeta and carried a nosegay of iris and daffodils. Cpl. Errol Barnard of Sydney, N.S., brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Norman Edgar, brother-in-law of the bride, and Gerald Anderson, cousin of the groom.

A reception was held at the Empress Hotel, where Mrs. Potts received, wearing a two-piece gown of blue with a dusty rose hat and corsage of sweet peas. Mrs. Percy Barnard also received, wearing a black gown with matching accessories and a corsage of sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnard left on a motor trip, the bride wearing a British tan and beige ensemble with matching hat and accessories and a beige coat. They will live in Peterborough.

No washing job is complete without . . .

SUNLIGHT'S "EXTRA-SOAPINESS" for the extra dirty parts

CLOTHES get badly soiled in the same difficult places week after week. Pillow cases are dirtiest where sleepy heads have rested . . . shirts at the collar bands and cuffs. Almost everything in the wash has extra soiled parts which require an additional soaping to get them really clean.

Any soap—bar, powder or flakes—will remove the general dirtiness. But much of the grime clings tightly, and only the Sunlight method of washing will remove it. Sunlight has a wonderful "extra-soapiness" which enables you to get right at the extra dirty spots at once. Just apply lightly—scarcely more than a mere touch—and you leave a film of soap right in contact with the dirt. And because it is Sunlight Soap this film is sufficient to loosen the last tiny speck of stubborn grime.

In the rich Sunlight lather every particle of dirt is carried away, yet its action is gentle—safe for the finest materials. It is all good pure soap—and that purity means perfect safety for everything in the weekly wash. It's gentle to your hands, too.

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

The Story.—Two cars of week-end guests are en route to Ferdy Lorton's country place near Montreal. In one are the three Macks: Myra, a stenographer; Michael, a soldier, and Peggy, their 17-year-old sister. In the other are beautiful Fay Ransom and Lieut. Nigel Monkhouse, who has seen Fay once before and now is suffering from tongue-tied adoration.

THE GUEST ARRIVE
CHAPTER VI

To compensate for his awkwardness, Nigel drove as fast as his concern for his precious freight would allow, and that was faster than he realized.

After leaving Montreal the car sped through the farmlands and villages of the plain beyond the island. Beyond St. Jerome they turned from the main highway and soon were plunging along a little known road climbing up into the hills through cuttings and long lanes of trees. A subtle freshness came into the air of the warm afternoon and mixed with sudden waves of coolness, as the road cut through thick woods. All the time they climbed.

Nigel became uncertain of their destination. He consulted a rough map drawn on paper with an air of doubt.

"You are sure you know the way?" asked Fay with an amused smile.

"Well...er...I think we're all right. We'll ask if e pass anyone.'

The first people they saw were three, all grouped around a fairly ancient model. One girl leaned with detached patience against the door of the car, while another girl and a soldier struggled angrily with a flat tire.

Nigel pulled up. "Could you tell me if were on the right road to..."

Then he stopped and his voice took on a note of relief,

"Well, if it isn't you"

"Is it?" Myra Mack smiled. Michael and his younger sister straightened and turned expectantly toward the other car. There was an awkward moment in which everyone looked at everyone else without quite knowing where introductions should begin.

"Well," said Myra. "To think of meeting you! Miss Ransom my sister...' She cleared the introductory hurdles as Peggy gave forth with a low whistle and an audible comment.

"My!' she murmured, gazing at the other car and the other girl. "What a swell outfit!" She included the convertible, Fay Ransom and her escort in the expressive statement. Fay looked cool and dewily beautiful in blue linen, her hair gleaming copper gold in the sun and blowing free.

Peggy, on the other hand, looked decidedly hot. Her hands were grimed from helping her brother and she had forgotten that she had wiped the heat from her face with dirty fingers. It didn't seem to bother her. With engaging frankness she was staring at Nigel Monkhouse, obviously wondering how much he was involved with this beautiful piece of nature's handiwork and whether it would be fun or hard work to try and pry him loose. It was a pity, she thought, that he was not as handsome in his blonde way as her brother was darkly good-looking.

Michael, just hot and soiled as his sister, was also staring at Fay with a startled look in his eyes. Myra was the only one who was as cool and collected as Fay Ransom.

"We're almost through," said Michael Mack. "Practically set to go.

Peggy was already examining the other car. She flipped open the rumble and climbed in.

"Come out of there," said Myra.

"Nothing doing," said Peggy with a pleased grin. 'If we are all going the same way I'm going in style. O.K. folks, let's go.'

The car drew away from Myra, whose lips were set in a stern, thin line. Nigel Monkhouse was even more uncomfortable, but Peggy was blissfully happy. This, she decided, was fun.

Ferdy's aunt was weeding a flower bed in front of the wide verandah when the sleek coupe drove up. Ferdy lifted himself from a lazy chair and joined her. Both of them stared as they saw the strange contrast in the car, the extremely attractive girl in the seat and the strange apparition in the rumble.

"Well!' exclaimed his aunt. "We do see some strange things."

Ferdy grinned with his usual calm. He guessed the streaked, gamin face in the rumble belonged to Myra's sister, and probably had a normal explanation.

The car drew to a stop. Impulsively, before the car door could open, Peggy Mack was down on the ground with a brilliantly white smile breaking across her smudged face. She had already seen it in a glass and had decided it was beyond repair short of soap and hot water. So she had left it as it was.

"You're Peggy Mack," said Ferdy.

"Yes," smiled Peggy with a pleased air, holding out grimy fingers. She looked down at her hand and drew it back. "Dirty, isn't it? Pure white spirit beneath, though."

Everyone laughed. Introductions were completed but somehow Peggy's entrance had stolen the show. Nigel Monkhouse glanced several times at this odd child who had kept up a stream of chatter all the rest of the way up to Ferdy's place. Ferdy really did get hold of some queer people, but he had never heard of him robbing the cradle.

Peggy had given two days of careful thought to this week-end. She had ransacked the wardrobes of her best friends to decided what she should borrow to wear, and then had concluded that her line would be gypsy informality. If there were cool pressed linens and expensive prints she could not hope to compete, but if she went to the other extreme and dressed with a carefree ease she would gain by contrast. After all, Ferdy was an artist, and she would dress the part to play up to him, except, of course, when it came to a swim suit. She drew the last dregs from her savings account to buy something that would open their eyes, provided she could keep it from her father's eyes until they left.

Oddly enough, as at all Ferdy's parties, the haphazard mixture of guests turned out well. There was just time for a swim before dinner and the whole party drifted down a pine-needled path through the cool woods to the lake below Ferdy's cottage. The path led to a small level grass clearing, a large boathouse and a wooden wharf.

The men stared with appreciative eyes as Peggy and Fay came out of the boathouse and out to the wharf.

Myra whispered to her sister in ominous tones:

"Where in the name of decency did you get those two pieces of string you've wrapped around yourself?"

Peggy grinned like a pleased child. "Straight from Vogue," she replied.

"Wait until your father sees you!"

"He wont," laughed Peggy. Then she walked onto the wharf, lithe and lovely as a native princess. Which was what she felt like.

Fay, in contrast, was camparatively modest in white lastex, but was quite pleased when the eyes of Nigel and Michael followed her as she walked slow'y to the wharf.

TEN HELPFUL HINTS FOR THE GUIDANCE OF YOUNG BRIDES-TO-BE

First Pick a Husband Whose Tastes Are Similar to Yours, Then Court Him for Rest of Your Life.

A young bride-to-be asks me if I will give her a few suggestions about how to get along in peace and harmony with the man she is about to take for better or worse. Well, dearie, believe me, it is an undertaking that requires the staying powers of Patient Griselda, the abilities of a mind-reader, the technique of a gold-digger and the diplomacy of a delegate to the League of Nations. But, nevertheless, it can be done, and I offer the following ten helpful hints for your guidance.

(1) First and foremost pick out a husband whose character and disposition jibe with yours. You can't mix oil and water, neither can you blend two natures that swear at each other. They should be the best part of each other's good times. So if you and John get in each other's hair during the days of courtship, pass him up for some lad who has the same tastes and habits and likes the same kind of pie that you do.

(2 Take your husband as he is. Don't try to make him over. Nothing makes a husband so sore as to have a wife who is always taking tucks in his vanity. You have led him to believe that he is the hero of your girlish dreams. Keep up the illusion. No husband ever disputes with a wife who is always telling him how big and handsome and wonderful he is.

(3) Feed the brute. All animals, husbands included, are surly and irritable when they are hungry, but when they are well fed they are so gentle that even a girl child can handle them. So if you want your husband to come hastening home of an evening, let him be sure that there is a better dinner awaiting him than he could get in a restaurant. If you want him to be a fireside companion, fill him so full of good food that he will be too logy to go out in search of sirens. And if you want to avoid friction, never tell him bad news on an empty stomach.

A Way To Overcome Family Rows.

(4) Don't argue. When you don't agree with your husband's opinion which you won't half the time, don't dispute them. Just let them ride and you will save nine-tenths of the fights that leave a husband and wife mad at each other.

(5) Don't set yourself up as your husband's mentor. Don't correct his statements, or set him right when he tries to tell a story. Don't Emily Post his table manners. Let other people tell him of his faults. It is too dangerous a pastime for a wife to indulge in. A husband will condon many faults in his wife, but not her being a critic on the hearth.

(6) Drive with a light rein. Give your husband his head a little. Don't make him feel that his home is a jail and that you are his jailer. Don't look as if he had committed a capital crime if he isn't home on the dot for dinner. Don't wait up for him with a curtain lecture on the end of your tongue if he stays down town and plays poker with the boys now and then. There wouldn't be so many wandering husbands if there were not so many tyrannical wives.

(7) Be nice to your husband's old friends and try to make his family love you. There is nothing else that a wife can do that will so fill her husband with gatitude towards her as for her to give his old pals a warm welcome, instead of her serving them cold shoulder, when they come to his house. And if she will show his mother some affection and appreciation, he will simply grovel at her feet.

(8) Ask your husband's advice. You don't need to take it and he won't care whether you do or not, but he craves that little gesture that recognizes him as the head of the house, and that implies that you consider his taste impeccable and that you desire to please him. Never order your husband to do things. Suggest that he do so-and-so and you will save a million domestic scraps.

(9) Never throw the salve-spreader into the ash can, as so many women do as soon as they are married. Jolly your husband along. You know what tact'cs you used in catching him. Redouble them to hold him. Marriage isn't a place where the wife can sit down on the do-nothing stool and let Nature take its course, for unhappily human nature leads men towards women who are easy on the eyes and who flatter them and entertain and amuse them, and away from wives who let themselves get slouchy and dull and fault-finding. So look and act like a Lady Love if you want your husband to treat you like one.

(10) Don't take your husband for granted. Tell him every day how much you love him, and how much you admire him, and how grateful you are to him for the daily slavery he goes through to keep you safe and comfortable. As long as a man feels he is the centre of his wife's universe all's well with his world, and there are no Other Women.

DON'T RUSH INTO MARRIAGE

Dear Dorothy Dix.—I am a girl 19 years of age, very much in love with a boy who is also 19. We are thinking about marrying, but there are some things I am in doubt about. One thing is that he lives on a farm and wants to be a farmer, and I am a town girl and don't know whether I could adjust myself to farm life. It doesn't appeal to me and I like working in an office where I have a good job at present. Next, is that he will probably soon have to go into the army. We do not know whether we should marry before he does, or not. I think we should not. The way things are now we couldn't get married for two or three years, anyway, and we would still be young enough to marry if we waited. The next thing is that we argue a lot and I am afraid we couldn't make a go of it because we both always think we are right and we are not willing to give in to each other. What is your advice?
your advice?—Troubled Sally.

Answer.—Well, Sally, taking all of your perplexities into consideration, I should certainly advise you to wait until your Johnny comes marching home before you marry him, if you ever do. You will need to love the boy very much indeed to be happy with him on the farm, for his ways are not your ways, his habits are not our habits, and you will find it pretty dull when doing the milking and gathering up the eggs are the only excitement you will have.

If you did not intend marrying this lad for three years, anyway, why rush into it now when he is about to be called to the colors? It makes the situation worse for both of you. You will be much better off as an unencumbered girl with your job than you would be as a married woman without a husband, or as a war widow.

But the real serious objection to your marrying this boy, or anybody else for that matter, is your thinking you are always right about everything and being determined to have your own way. You will never be happy with any husband unless you are willing to give and take.

Meantime, the two strikes had repercussions in the House of Commons Tuesday. Labor Minister Mitchell, replying to questions by J. W Noseworthy (C.C.F., York South) said "It would be just too bad if the men who go down to the sea in ships, in corvettes, went on strike because a man was demoted"

Asked the cause of the dispute, Mr. Mitchell said, "In the first place, the strike at Midland was called without any knowledge of the Department; it was called because a man was demoted and laid off."

"THE HOARDER"

PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1

People who buy more of anything than they currently need, and merchants who encourage them to do so, are sabotaging the war effort, and are therefore public enemies.

Loyal citizens do not hoard. They buy only for their immediate needs. They cheerfully adjust their standard of living, realizing that their country's needs must come first. They do not try to gain unfair advantages over their neighbours.

Are you a hoarder or a loyal citizen? Are you hampering Canada's war effort by unnecessary buying? Or are you co-operating to the best of your ability to save Canada from such horrors as Hong Kong?

If Canadians do their duty, there will be no more hoarding. Everyone will get a fair share of the goods available. More food can be sent to Great Britain. More raw materials—more manpower—will be available for making guns, tanks, planes and other armaments to back up our armed forces.

In cases where it is advisable for you to buy in advance of your immediate requirements—such as your next season's coal supply—you will be encouraged to do so by direct statement from responsible officials.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, April 23

The forecast is for a most stirring and eventful day, with all things moving in a surprising and rapid manner, under unusual pressure and toward quite unpredictable goals. This probably as a culmination of sound ideas, plans and objectives faithfully and logically pursued but with a sudden and unlooked- for denouement, the combination promising stability and enduring success and good fortune as well as surprising experiences of far-reaching importance. Elders and strangers may figure with real possessions.

If It Is Your birthday

Those whose birthaday it is may be on the threshold of a year of the sudden, strange, surprising and thrilling, in which unlooked for and unpredictable forces may come to the fore. Not only may benefits arise from the staid, expected and worked-for, but there may be unexpected benefits from strange and novel sources. Probably old friends and relatives may figure, or old static assets or business investments may be stabilized.

A child born on this day should possess many splendid traits of sound and stable quality, fortified by unusual ingenuity, vision and creative skills assuring a successful, dramatic and romantic career.

Less Tourist Driving

OTTAWA, April 22 — (CP). — Canadian Travel Bureau officials said to-day inquiries received from the United States indicate that many tourists propose to visit Canada in 1942 although they will undertake fewer side trips than in the past.

"Larger numbers are expected to travel to Canada by rail this year, and even the inquiries from those who plan to come by car indicate they plan to head directly for some spot they have chosen and spend their holiday there," an official said.

Low-Calorie Foods Reduce Poundage

Fat Girl Left Alone at Parties

"Ruthie's fat but awfully nice," the hostess said. But the men prefer the slender girls somehow!

If you're a "Ruthie" you needn't accept such a fate. You can lose two pounds a week, choosing foods that cut you down to 1,200 calories a day, instead of the high quantity —maybe 4,000 — you get now.

It's easy. When you know your calories you can have just as much to eat. Sliced chicken has only 100 calories a serving (creamed chicken has 435) and a baked white potato (100) is as filling as a sweet potato (200).

Desserts, too, may be on your reducing menu as long as they're low-calory—such as apple snow, 125 a cup—but NOT chocolate blanc mange, 431!

By being smart about your food you win a smart figure; soon everyone admires yours!

To know your calories, see our 32-page booklet. It has a calory chart, 42 delicious low-calory menus, recipes for slimming desserts. Includes a 3-day liquid diet to start your reducing.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of "The New Way to a Youthful Figure" to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

GO AFTER MAXIMUM

DON'T BE satisfied to embark on a plan of ruffing out certain losers in your hand until you have first surveyed the possibilities of setting up a long suit for discards. That applies most emphatically when you are in a match point duplicate which you are trying to win, and in which you may get bottom score if you merely make your contract or even one or two over-tricks. Somebody else who takes one more trick than you, or perhaps two more, will steal away match points which you yourself might have shared by giving a little more thought to your problem.

At most tables where this deal was played, the heart 4 was led and ruffed by the spade 9. The diamond Q was sent through, the diamond J covered by the K and A, the heart 9 ruffed by the spade Q, the club Q finesse won and the heart Q ruffed by the spade K. The club 5 was sent to the A, the spade A cashed and the 10 lost to the J. The heart A was returned, ruffed by the spade 2 and the spade 8 cashed, dropping the 7. This made the spade 5 good, and the diamond 6 to the 10 took the final trick, making six-odd and producing two extra tricks.

Another declarer, Joseph E. Cain, of Indianapolis, took all of the tricks for a top. After ruffing the heart lead, he went to work on setting up clubs. First he won the Q finesse, then the A, led the spade 2 to the Q and the club 6, ruffing with the spade 10, which East could not over-ruff. A spade to the king enabled him to put the diamond Q through, and lead the J to the K and A. The spade A dropped West's last trump, and the diamond 8 to the 10 was an entry for the set-up clubs.

Revealing Plane Documents Vetoed In House

OTTAWA, April 22—(CP).—The House of Commons by a vote of 80-34 Monday defeated a motion for production in the chamber of certain correspondence between government offices and an airplane company.

The division was forced by the Conservative opposition. On the vote all Conservative, C.C.F. and Independent members supported the motion while the Liberals voted against it.

A question on the order paper as the House resumed after the Easter recess, in the name of Rodney Adamson (Con. York West) asked for a copy of all letters, telegrams and other doucments exchanged between the Curtiss-Wright Aeroplane and Motor Corporation and the Director of Aircraft Supply, the War Supply Board and the National Defence Department during 1938, 1939 and 1940.

The question sought the correspondence dealing with an offer to manufacture airplanes and airplane products in Canada, and copy of memoranda submitted to the Aircraft Supply Director in connection with the subject during December, 1939.

Munitions Minister Howe said he felt the documents were privileged. An investigation had been made by the department in connection with the proposed agreement and nothing had come of it.

Mr. Howe said the correspondence dealt with business of the Curtiss Wright Co. and should not be tabled.

Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) said he protested Mr. Howe's reply. The House wanted to know why the agreements with the airplane company had not been consummated.

The Conservatives then called for a division.

The request for Pratt and Whitney correspondence was also set aside, without a vote.

Canucks Captured

London, Ont., April 22 (CP) CPL. Webb Ayres, recently returned from overseas, today said in an interview that during a recent raid on the southeast coast of England, Nazi raiders captured a few Canadian soldiers and took them to German-occupied France. He said the Germans caused no property damage and were "not nearly as clever or efficient" as British raiding parties.

Ayres, who served 18 months with the 11th Field Ambulance, returned on a ship bringing about 1,000 Axis prisoners to Canada.

Springville YPU Presents Play "Only Sally Ann"

SPRINGVILLE, April 22—(ENS). —The group of players from Springville Y.P.U. has already established a reputation for themselves and this was substantially strengthened by the presentation of the comedy-drama "Only Sally Ann", in the United Church on Friday evening.

The auditorium was filled to capacity y an enthusiastic audience.

The parts were very capably played by the entire cast and Miss Helen Staples, their directress, is to be congratulated.

Congratulations are also due to S. S. Staples who filled in so very capably for Duncan Seymour who unfortunately was unable to take his part, owing to illness.

The plot centered around Sally Ann, the kind-hearted, fun-loving daughter of Capt. Caleb Ross. She is left in the home of her Uncle and Aunt, Martha and Timothy Ross, while her father goes to sea in quest of a long lost treasure.

Life for her is made nearly unbearable by the unkindness of her Aunt and the jealousy of her spoiled and pampered cousin, Ruth. Sally Ann, however, has many friends, including the tousle-headed young, Al. Piper known as Huckleberry, and the poor, half-demented but apparently harmless, Crazy Jake. Also she has an ally in the sympathetic and loveable Drucilla, another poor relation in the Ross household.

When Sally Ann is warned by Drucilla that their two gossiping neighbors, Adeline and Hyacinth, have been to her Aunt with a story about the new young minister having carried her over a rain-filled gutter, Sally Ann refused to take it seriously, not knowing that her Aunt is anxious to capture the young minister for the spoiled Ruth. However, none of the manoeuverings of Martha can curb the minister's growing interest in Sally Ann, even though she did, on one occasion, inadvertently shower him with peas from a pea shooter.

The three months provided for by the money paid Martha and Timothy by Capt. Caleb, expires and word is rumored about that his ship was lost. Timothy then conspired to marry Sally Ann to the rich but conceited and ill-bred Hector Larkins, whom she despises.

The climax is brought about when the Ross family return one night to find Hector Larkins shot in the back on their kitchen floor and Sally Ann nowhere to be found. They immediately do all in their power to direct suspicion towards her. However, Huckleberry, heartbroken over Sally Ann's plight, finally finds her in the little old house where she and her father had lived. He tells her what has taken place and she returns to defend herself, stating that as she was running away from Hector Larkins she heard a shot but had kept on running.

As Sally Ann is taken to the inspector's office Rev. Miles, the minister, and Huckleberry arrive. They are shortly followed by Crazy Jake fingering a revolver and hysterically muttering to himself about at last having made Hector Larkins pay. As his hysteria dies away he collapses.

Sally Ann is brought back to be freed and the young minister, interrupting the unkind remarks of Martha and Ruth, proposes to her before the entire gathering. To make Sally Ann's happiness complete, her beloved Daddy enters the room. He tells Sally Ann that not only has he returned to her himself but that he has found the long looked for treasure.

Sally Ann was charmingly portrayed by Mary Staples, who handled the difficult emotional scenes very capably. The domineering and selfish Martha Ross was superbly played by Jean Fairbairn and the part of her grasping husband was capably taken by Charles Whittington. Ruth, the spoiled dughter, was ably played by Dorothy Cathcart, who handled a difficult part well.

The parts of Adeline, the typical small town gossip, and the romantic Hyacinth were well played by Velma Staples and Jet McIntosh respectively. These two missed none of the opportunities to produce laughs from the audience.

Capt. Caleb Ross, the loveable old sea-going father of Sally Ann, was realistically portrayed by Gordon Morrison.

Jim Hunter as Rev. Miles Vance, the popular young minister, played the part in his usual capable way.

Jack Preston was Huckleberry and he captured the hearts of the entire audience. He played the part in such a good-natured way that it made it very real indeed.

The part of Crazy Jake was skillfully played by Clifford Johnston.

Marjorie Galbraith took the part of Drucilla and did it in a very pleasing manner.

S. S. Staples, pinch-hitting for Duncan Seymour, played splendidly the part of Hector Larkins.

At the close of the performance Mrs. Sam Carew voiced the appreciation of the cast to their directress, Miss Staples, and Carolyn Whitfield presented her with a bouquet of roses.

During intermissions the audience was entertained by Laura Neals at the piano and Barbara Staples with the violin.

Reign of Terror Sweeps Madagascar

Nazis Muster 1,900,000; Boys 17 to 18

500,000 Slave-Landers; Nine-Tenths Of Army In Russia

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer.

KUIBYSHEV, April 23—(AP). — By mustering 1,900,000 reserves made up of workers in vital industries, boys as young as 17 and 18 and men from the conquered lands, the German army has concentrated 9-10th of its fighting force on the Russian front, a Soviet spokesman declared to-day.

He would not say however, that this disposition of German power justified creation of a second European front by the United Nations.

He did say that despite this mighty massing of Nazi troops, the Red Army, itself being bolstered by fresh forces, has enough reserve power to drive the invaders from Soviet soil.

The spokesman, S. A. Lozovsky, Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs, told a press conference that the latest call of German reserves included 900,000 in two new military classes—youths of 17 and 18 years.

The remainder of the 1,900,000 reserves was said to be made up of 500,000 men from the subjugated countries and 500,000 drawn from vital German industries.

Rear Forces Exhausted

Lozovsky said that the German rear was disintegrating while the Russian home front remained strong. The Germans back of the lines are "exhausted," Lozovsky asserted.

He praised the R.A.F.'s recent raids on Luebeck on the Baltic and Augsburg in the heart of southwestern Germany, saying "the more the better because this is the only language the Germans understand."

Lozovsky withheld comment when asked whether the reported presence of 9-10ths of the German army on the Russian front offered a new opportunity of a second front at the German rear.

The number of German prisoners, he said, is increasing, but the spokesman refrained from giving the figures. Asked if they would be used in agricultural work in Russia,

As a comparison, the newspapers said Belgium, with a population one-fifth that of France, had supplied 250,000 "Volunteer" workers for Germany up to the beginning of 1942.

New Stricter Curb Due Tires, Tubes

Want As Many Cars Going As Possible If In War Program

OTTAWA, April 23 — (CP). — Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson is drafting new regulations for the restriction of dealings in tires and tubes, "more drastic than any previous tire regulations," the Munitions and Supply Department said to-day.

The aim, said a department statement, is to provide sufficient tires and tubes for vehicle owners whose needs are vital to the war program.

The regulaitons will not call for commandeering of tires and tubes from non-essential cars, it said, but it quoted Mr. Williamson as saying:

"We cannot rule out the possibility that this step may be necessary in the future, but we would not take such a step except as a last resort.

"If tires were seized to-day they could not be used immediately by the really essential vehicle owners, and would have to be stored away. Tires not properly stored deteriorate almost as rapidly as tires in moderate use, so no good purpose would have been served by the seizure."

The Controller said tires with very little mileage left in them will still be salvageable, even if they remain on the road.

For two or more decades this continent has been rolling on rubber, Mr. Williamson said, and 'it is virtually impossible, and certainly not efficient, to fall back on a more primitive means of transportation when the need for getting about with a reasonable degree of rapidity is greater than ever before."

'So that our tempo may not be slowed down, and so that still greater pressure on our already overburdened public transportation systems may be avoided as many cars as possible must be kept on the road," he added. "For his own sake and for the sake of the war program, it is the duty of every motorist to conserve his tires as long as possible."

Risk Seamen No Longer For Pleasure Drivers Says US Heads As 2½-5 Gal. Ration Looms

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP).—Heads of five top-ranking United States war agencies told motorists flatly today the Government no longer would risk lives of American seamen "so someone will have gasoline to go to a bridge party or a ball game."

Following swiftly on yesterday's announcement that gasoline ratiining would start May 15 in 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia, the joint statement declared "motoring-as-usual is out" in that area, possibly for duration of the war.

However, Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold Ickes declared today that there was 'no justification' for anticipating that motorists of the eastern United States would be limited to as little as 2½ to 5 gallons of gasoline a week.

Vichy Jailing De Gaulle Sympathizers

S. Africa Severs Ties With Nazi France May Handle Island

LONDON, April 23—(CP)—Agents of the Vichy government were reported today to have instituted a virtual reign of terror on the strategic French island of Madagascar in their attempts to round up all sympathizers with the Free French movement.

Dispatches to the Daily Express from Tananarive said Governor-General Armand Annet had arrested hundreds of Free Frenchmen on orders from Pierre Laval, Vichy's new chief of government and proponet of collaboration with Germany.

Annet's own secretary as well as other members of the island administration were among those reported arrested.

The situation on Madagascar is of concern here because the island, situated off the east coast of Africa, lies athwart vital Allied lines of communication with India and there has been speculation that the Japanese might try to gain a foothold there.

Annet was quoted recently as saying the island would be defended against any aggressor and the Madagascar radio has denied any Japanese or German encroachment. The Daily Express dispatches today, however, declared:

"Madagascar is not being defended against Japanese infiltration and it cannot be defended against Japanese invasion."

An official spokesman said today: "It is now reported 50,000 tons of French shipping have been taken over by Japan and these are almost certainly ocean-going vessels."

Africa Cuts Relations.

In Pretoria, it was announced the Union of South Africa severed diplomatic relations to-day with the Vichy government of France.

France's new role in the war, particularly with the Axis, was sharply emphasized to-day by a series of developments:

1. South Africa, which would probably be given the task of dealing with Madagascar, broke off relations with Vichy. It is about 800 miles from Durban, South Africa, to Madagascar.

2. In London, a British spokesman said "it is now reported that 50,000 tons of French shipping have

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson reported today the United States army is 'working very hard' to build and place all along the coasts radio detector devices which he said could signal the presence of hostile ships and planes more than 100 miles away.

Italian Units Routed Badly Cut Up

Nazi Counter-Attacks Abandoned Try To Hold Forts

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, April 23—(AP)—Battered heavily by Soviet divisions in recent weeks, the German armies on the southern front were reported today to have abandoned their counter-attacks and changed their tactics to a defence of fortified positions.

A front-line dispatch to the army newspaper Red Star said that "only in a few sectors do the Fascist troops make futile attempts to strike at our units," and reported the partial annihilation and rout of a strong Italian detachment which was cut off by a Soviet pincers after attempting to outflank the Russian positions.

Fighting in other sectors apparently was limited to skirmishing: two Nazi counter-attacks beaten off in the southwest, where Soviet artillery smashed a pontoon bridge to block a German attempt to cross an unnamed river; Soviet units moving up through German wooden log defences to widen the wedge driven into the invaders' lines on the Bryansk front below Smolensk; 200 Germans killed in the course of five unsuccessful attacks in a central front sector.

At Yukhnov, according to a Pravda correspondent, thousands of Nazi bodies were found when the melting snows uncovered a huge pit in the central square of the town.

900 Mowed Down.

Soviet forces in the Kalinin zone, between the Leningrad and Smolensk fronts, were officially declared to have killed 900 Germans and knocked three tanks out of action in repulsing a Nazi attack.

More than 600 other Germans were listed as killed in other engagements.

"Our ships sank a 5,000-ton German tanker and a 4,000-ton transport in the Barents Sea," the Soviet Information Bureau said.

The Moscow News said yesterday that 92 German vessels totalling 456,400 tons had been sunk in the Barents and Norwegian Seas by the LONDON, April 23—(AP).—Following close upon yesterday morning's commando raid at Boulogne, dispatches from Stockholm, where Berlin news is assiduously sifted for war trends, reported today that the German expectancy of and preparations for Allied invasion in Western Europe had considerably increased.

British sources here counselled correspondents at the same time to "remember Von Rundstedt." Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, whose name generally is associated with the German army's offensive operations, was reported a week ago to have moved into France.

Alder reports were that Von Rundstedt had gone there to strengthen defences of that German dominated country against invasion but current advices were that he went there with parachute troops.

Despite the German offensive suggestion in this latest report on the game of nerves—who's going to invade whom and where?—it appeared that the Germans were more apprehensive than the British.

In contrast to Britain, where responsible leaders have said they expect air-borne invasion on a "diversionary scale" sometime, and expect to repel it, Stockholm dispatches said the Germans were taking hasty precautions along their entire western "front" — from northernmost Norway to France.

Watching North Gap

Stockholm advices were that both the air and naval headquarters of the Germans in Norway had been moved "northward" from Oslo.

Recently Stockholm reported Norwegian civilians had been evacuated from the Molde and Tromsoe districts along the central and northern parts of the coast, evidently to give the Germans more freedom of movement and to minimize the fifth column threat in case of Allied invasion.

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Dagens Nyheter was permitted to write for his newspaper that "certain optimists are convinced the British will come by May 1." British authorities regard this as a feeler so obvious that anxiety must have dictated it.

The Dagens Nyheter writer reported that military circles and the semi-official spokesman at Berlin were interested in the correspondent's views while at the same time they held fast to the thesis that any Allied invasion plan was destined to fail.

Britons Enthrone New Archbishop In Bomb-Pocked Loved Cathedral

By J. WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Staff Writer.

CANTERBURY, April 23—(AP).—In a solemn ceremony which had its origin centuries ago, Most Rev. William Temple was installed today as Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of All England while 45 bishops stood by in sandbagged, bomb-pocked Canterbury Cathedral.

"If the Christian movement and all hopes connected with it" are to prevail, the Axis must be defeated, the new Archbishop declared, as sunlight streamed through the beautiful stained - glass windows which bear the mark of Hitler's bombs.

Just 45 years previously, Dr. Temple had watched his father enthroned as Archbishop in the then untouched cathedral with the same ceremony. He is the first son to succeed his father in the record of Canterbury's 98 Archbishops.

The full official title of the ceremony was "Enthronement of the Most Reverend Father in God, William, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England."

Trumpeters sounded a fanfare for the richly-robed Archbishop as he entered the Cathedral by the great west door. He was led to the chair of St. Augustine—a massive marble throne—by the Archdeacon of Canterbury, Ven. T. K. Sopwith.

Dr. Temple was preceded by a long colorful procession of dignitaries, with titles reaching back to the middle ages such as Bedesmen, King's Scholars, Apparitor General, and Dean of the Arches.

Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury, led Dr. Temple to the Dean's hall in the choir and said, "As a sign of real possession we place you, most reverend father, in this seat."

Murders Owner Acts Clerk 2 Hrs.

CHICAGO, April 23—(AP)—Police hunted today a young negro who coolly waited on grocery trade for more than an hour after he had shot and killed the storekeeper, hacked the body with a meat cleaver and left it lying bleeding in a back room.

"Back in 10 minutes," read a sign the killer posted on the front door before escaping with money from the cash register in the Bronzeville store of Robert Berg,33, white.

This account of the crime was given by policeman Napoleon Sutton, who obtained it from David Neal, a negro clerk in the store:

The robber, about 21, entered the store yesterday, drew a pistol and ordered Berg and Neal to go to the rear room.

"I've had it in for you for a long time" the youth told Berg. 'You don't know what you've done but I do."

"I don't know you," Berg protested. "How could I have done anything to you?"

While the terrified Neal looked on, the robber shot Berg twice in the chest and a third time in the back of the head. Then he forced Neal into the icebox, saying, "I've got something else to do."

When Neal came out of the icebox the killer was slipping a bloody cleaver into a bag. He put on an apron and told Neal to "keep on waiting on customers."

Chinese Chase Japs 3 Miles Down Irrawaddy

CHUNGKING, April 23 —(AP)— Chinese troops are mopping up the last Japanese forces clinging to villages immediately downriver along the Irrawaddy from recapturing Yanangyaung, and the invaders' lines have been pushed back three to four miles south of that West Burma oil town, an army spokesman said today.

On the eastern flank of the Burma front, however, Chinese forces have fallen back under intensive pressure along the Salween River and up the road toward Mandalay. Fierce fighting continued in the area.

The army spokesman said the Chinese were forced to withdraw north of Pyinmana, 150 miles from Mandalay, because of a thrust by the Japanese through the right flank of the Pyinmana line at Zewe, 10 miles west of the city.

Frontal thrusts against the Chinese defences had won the Japanese less than six miles in this area before the flanking attack, the spokesman declared.

He declared, however, that the Japanese advance toward Loikaw on the west side of the Salween River 65 miles east of Pyinmana, had been much more rapid.

There the Japanese gained 40 miles in a week, placing Chinese defenders of Loikaw in desperate straits.

New Delhi reported today British troops have withdrawn from Taungdwingyi on the central Burma front.

Hong Kong Mail May Go By May

OTTAWA, April 23 — (CP).—Col. F. W. Clarke, National Defence Department officer specially charged with the care and welfare of prisoners of war, saiad today he had advised next-of-kin of Canadians who served at Hong Kong that the International Red Cross may be able to forward mail for prisoners of war there within the next 30 days.

He warned, however, that present negotiations may fail to materialize.

"We realize that friends and acquaintances also would like to be included but because of lack of the shipping space, the sending of parcels will have to be restricted to the next-of-kin as listed with the Department of National Defence," he said in a statement.

"The limited space that may be available over and above the mail and next-of-kin parcels must be utilized for shipment of needed medical supplies and essential foods, clothing and tobacco, which will be forwarded by the Red Cross."

Bomber Routs Japs At 7 to 1

SYDNEY, Australia, April 23. — (CP).—A report from an advanced Allied air base in Australia told today of a successful fight by a bomber crew against 7 to 1 odds to protect a companion bomber crippled by Zero planes.

The bombers were two of a formation of six attacked by 20 pursuit craft. Damaged by a burst of gunfire, the one dropped to within 100 feet of the sea.

Seven Japanese fighters darted down to finish it off. They were thwarted by the dive of a bomber which hovered protectingly above the cripple and the gunners fought off repeated Japanese thrusts.

The gunners shot down three Japanese planes. They were down to their last 24 rounds of ammunition when the assault force withdrew.

Athough riddled by bullets, both the crippled bomber and its protector landed safey at heir base.

Coast Raids Show Red Drain Upon Nazis

Stroke At Boulogne, Vital Invasion Spot, Finds Hun Defence In On Weak Scale

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The significance of the astonishing British Commando raid on the coast of France in the neighborhood of the important channel port of Boulogne is the fact that the Britons encountered so little Nazi resistance that they were able to scout about for two hours and then withdraw.

Now it would be rash to rush into sweeping conclusions on the strength of this circumstances, but it does tend to confirm recent reports that, because of the urgent demand for troops on the Russian front, the Germans haven't been holding this vitally-strategic channel coast in full strength. The Boulogne area is of the utmost military importance, and one would expect it to be about the last place the Nazis would leave with light protection, in view of their obvious fear the Allies are preparing for invasion.

This ancient port, through which a steady stream of troops passed during the long years of the last war, lies within sight of the cliffs of England, and is one of the harbors nearest the coast of Britain. German big guns can easily drop their freight of death on British towns from there.

The fact that the commandos found this sector fairly easy of access gives to wonder what the situation may be at less important points along the French and Belgian coasts. That is a point which the Allies are bound to be investigating in their search for an opening to get at the master gangster.

One of the great values of such a raid of course, is to stimulate the Nazi fear of an invasion.

A constant prodding of the coast by the commandos certainly would compel the Nazis to man defences strongly, from Norway down the French coast to Brest, for fear that one of these black-faced expeditions might be the spearhead for a major landing.

This would have the effect of making Hitler defend two fronts at once—something which every commander dreads and which the Nazis chief especially fears in view of the terrific pressure from the Red army. In other words, the commandos are helping to create a psuedo-invasion which will force the Fuehrer to maintain on the western continental coast strong forces which he desperately needs in Russia.

To this Allied advantage we must add the encouragement which these raids undoubtedly give to the rising revolt among the French people. That is a real threat to Hitler, as he clearly indicates in his slaughter of hostages in an effort to stem the sabotage and slaying of Nazi soldiers.

When we also take into account the fierce onslaught which the Royal Air Force is making on France and Germany the cumulative offensive should prove of great value to the Russians, who have been urging that the Allies create a distraction which would lessen the German resistance on the eastern front. Word that American airmen and commandos are joining the British in these adventures against western Europe can bring no joy to Hitler. Certainly it keeps him in constant fear of invasion.

Out of all this one would expect to see emerge a real invasion of Western Europe by British and American fighting men. That it will come sooner or later there can be small doubt, and we are safe in saying that it will be at the earliest feasible moment.

Battle On The Home Front

Quebec Anti's Jump Police Groom In Mistake

MONTREAL, April 23—(CP). — Rookie Police Constable Georges Durette nursed a bruised head last night after a celebration in honor of his approaching marriage was mistaken for the aftermath of a political rally.

Fellow officers had tied him to a truck and, singing loudly, they escorted him toward a midtown hall, where they intended making a presentation.

A group of youths, who police say mistook the proceedings for police measures against anti-conscriptionists, waded into the celebrants. Paving stones and bottles were hurled and fists swung wildly. Three arrests were made by police reinforcements before order was restored and the situation explained. Traffic was held up for nearly half an hour.

Meanwhile Constable Durette, struck on the head with a paving stone, was spirited to the nearby home of his fiancee where he was given medical attention.

Startling Food Shortages

Lack Of Ships To Affect Both U.S. And Allies

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP).—The United States may have some surprising food shortages through meeting the increasing wartime demands of the United Nations.

Senators said agriculture secretary Claude Wickard announced this situation at closed sessions of a Senate appropriations committee reviewing House of Representatives action in slashing more than $30,000,000 from cash budget estimates for the agriculture department in the coming fiscal year.

Several Senators quoted Wickard as saying that a shortage of shipping space is the chief obstacle now in the effort to keep this country and her allies well fed. Later, the cabinet member said some farm production shortages might develop.

If the United States could ship all the food required or requested, Wickard said shortages probably would develop in dairy products, fats and oils, meats and some other abundantly common products.

Tables Turn In Year With Spirit Of Attack Rampant

LONDON, April 23 — (CP). — British bombers, re-opening their weather-interrupted air offensive, last night attacked objectives in the Rhineland and docks at Le Havre, the Air Ministry announced to-day.

Four of the attacking aircraft are missing, the Air Ministry said.

The raids followed the two-hour smash on Boulogne by commandos early yesterday and the spirit of attack marked England's celebration of the day of her Patron Saint, St. George.

British bombers carried out a raid over the Cherbourg peninsula of occupied France. Bomb-carrying Hurricane fighters attacked enemy airdromes.

Heavy guns on the English Channel—emplaced both to counter the German long-range artillery and to challenge German shipping—boomed across Dover Strait about midnight and continued firing at frequent intervals for about 30 minutes.

Anti-aircraft and aerial machine-gun fire sounded briefly along the Thames Estuary early this morning and a few Nazi planes flew over a Southern English coastal area last night, but reports indicated there was no bomb damage in either incident.

Cheese Price Four Cents More Than 1941

The new price of 20 cents a pound for export cheese will give dairy farmers supplying the factories an increase over last year of around 30 cents a hundred pounds of milk, G. A. Gillespie estimated for the Examiner this morning.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, federal Minister of Agriculture, has announced the new agreement with the British Ministry of Food for a minimum of 125,000,000 pounds of cheese from Canada in the present current years from April 1, 1942, to March 31, 1943.

Provincial and federal subsidies will advance the price to 24 cents a pound. Last year the basic export price was 16 cents, and the subsidy for first grade cheese was then four cents, bringing the price to 20 cents a pound.

The price for which the dairy industries has been expectantly and impatiently waiting is f.o.b. Montreal.

"For 94 grade cheese the price of milk will be $1.70 a pound," Mr. Gillespie said, "and 93 grade cheese will bring $1.60. These prices may be considered as being paid for milk at the farmer's door."

The increase might work out over the season at slightly less than 30 cents more than for last year's milk, but approximately the top price will be close to the $1.70 a hundred pounds.

The higher price applies to an enlarged contract.

Great Britain is asking the Canadian cheese industry for 125,000,000 pounds as compared with 112,000,000 last year.

In regard to the subsidies paid by the governments, continuing the subvention of last year; two cents a pound of cheese by the government of Ontario, and two cents for top grade and one cent for 93 grade by the federal government.

George A. Elliott, Norwood, president of the Peterborough Cheese Patrons' Association, said this afternoon "the new price is not too bad at all."

Producers were hoping that the basic price plus the bonuses would amount to 25 cents a pound. Their expectations were for a basic price of 21 cents. The total in premiums and subsidy would be four cents added to that, which would have brought the price to 25 cents a pound for the new season's output.

"Top grades cheese will bring 24 cents with the new price," Mr. Elliott said, "and that comes pretty close to what the trade was looking for this year. I think dairy farmers will be pretty well satisfied with the announcement about the new price."

The German view as said to be that the Norwegian and French coastlines are "100 per cent equipped to meet all eventualities and any conceivable tactics" and, "while it is true that the weight of German effectives has been moved eastward, quite a sufficient number remain."

One Berlin military commentator was quoted by Dagens Nyheter as saying that "although the possibility of a landing in northern Norway must be considered the recent 'pinpricks' (Commando raids) show that the French coast is the main interest of the British."

To which London observers commented: "It seems to show that the Germans are undecided and that they are keeping an open mind of the subject. Well, that's the frame of mind we want to keep them in.

Signs of Nazi Fear.

Other Stockholm reports, in part indicating German fears that the Allies would invade Northern Norway and link up with the Russians, include:

1. That the Arctic defence highway from Bodoe, Norway, to Kirkenes, Finland, has been completed.

2. The construction of a motor road from Halden, near the Swedish frontier, through Oslo to Trondheim would be undertaken immediately. This road would accelerate communications between the Baltic and Northern Norway.

3. That 40,000 laborers are 'completing' anti-invasion defences in Norway.

Among the latest precautions taken by the Germans in France is an order barring civilians from Normandy's coast roads between 7.30 p.m. and 6 a.m. The assumption left apparent is that any person abroad in the forbidden hours is a British Commando or some other foe of the Germans, subject to shooting on sight.

NY State Brands Seaway Folly In War

ALBANY N.Y., April 23 — (AP) —The New York State Assembly approved 101 to 40 yesterday a resolution terming development of the St. Lawrence seaway project "the height of folly" in wartime.

Adoption of the resolution, sponsored by Frank Caffrey, Buffalo Democrat, would place residents of President Roosevelt's home estate on record against a development endorsed by the President, Army and Navy officials, and the War Production Chief, Donald Nelson.

Republican Grant Daniels, Ogdensburg, described the resolution as 'indirectly aimed at defeat of the St. Lawrence electric power development."

Caffrey, who had amended his original resolution to remove all mention of the power development, denied any such intention, and asserted that opening of the seaway would seriously damage the business of port of New York City and the State Barge Canal system.

The measure went to the Senate where a similar resolution was defeated by a few votes last year.

Synthetic Coats Keep Army Dry

OTTAWA, April 23 — (CP). — Raincoats made from cheap white limestone powder are going to keep Canada's armed forces comfortable in dirty weather, it was made known to-day.

The Department of Munitions and Supply announced that the powder, transformed by the chemist's art into a polymerized vinyl resin is being used as a substitute for rubber in making raincoats for the sailors, soldiers and airmen.

After the resin is dissolved, pigmented in navy, Air Force blue, or khaki, and plasticized for flexibility, the coating composition is applied to a cotton fabric of suitable weight and strength. Several more coatings are added, obtaining a "better-than-rubber" fabric ready for sheeting or the tailor's scissors.

"The synthetic raincoats are not only just as good as rubber," the Department said. "They are said to be better."

No Paratroops, Commandos For Canucks Yet

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, April 23.—(CP).—Out of the new battle training school being established somewhere in the west the Canadian army will get the material for commando, guerilla and paratroops units, when and if these are required, Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons yesterday.

In the first "free for all" discussion of army matters this session the Minister answered a wide range of questions from members and said he was enthusiastic over both the battle training project and the west coast militia rangers, the bodies of local fighters being organized to defend isolated localities.

Col. Ralston said it is not intended to establish paratrop or commando units in the Canadian army at once. The basic training for such formations consisted in a toughening of the body and a development of the mind which will ge given to officers and non-commissioned officers at the new school. They will then be able to instruct and train other men in their own units and when the formation of special units is wanted the men will be ready.

A Hardening Process.

He declared that "battle training, while it sounds rather imposing, means nothing more or less than a hardening and toughening process of body and bringing about the alertness of mind that is necessary, cultivating initiative and resourcefulness and bodily ability to serve a man in a tight corner."

The final phase of paratroop training, learning t jump from aircraft, is relatively the easiest, said the Minister. That would come later.

As Col. Ralston spoke members had afternoon newspapers which headlined a British commando raid on the Boulogne area of Nazi-occupied France before them and they followed his words with close interest.

The discussion took place on the $2,000,000,000 war appropriations bill and may be resumed today if other matters are disposed of in time. Finance Minister Ilsley gave notice of a motion to reduce the amount of the bill to $1,500,000,000 because $500,000,000 has already been voted in an interim b[illegible] passed before the Easter recess.

Mr. Ilsley promised that the House would be given a statement today on subsidies paid under the price ceiling policy. After that the

The injured man, Norman Cross, is undergoing treatment at the farm hospital. He was sentenced at Peterborough last year for car theft and burglary, after Ed. Riley's store in that city had been burglarized.

The pair was reported to have made a break from a work gang near the main farm buildings.

he said, "we'll not use prisoners as Soviet captives are used in Germany because their treatment is unimaginable."

Replying to an inquiry, Lozovsky said there had been no change in Soviet-Japanese relations in the past 10 days—the period since the April 13 anniversary of the neutrality pact, when the Russian press warned Japan to abide strictly by the terms of the pact.

Asked if Premier Stalin had seen the new Japanese Ambassador, Naotake Sato, he said any such meeting would be announced in the press. There has been no such announcement.

Lozovsky said the Soviet press had given "a straight-forward, clear" denial to Italian reports that American planes bombed Tokyo from a base on Soviet soil. He declined to say what action Russia might take if American planes should be forced down on Soviet territory.

Night Raiders Fill Hun With Terror

No Real Resistance As Commandos Range For 2 Hours

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

A BRITISH PORT, April 23.—(CP Cable)—Britain's hard-hitting Commandos struck such terror and demoralization into the enemy in their two-hour raid on Boulogne, 30 miles across the Channel, that he was unable to offer effective resistance.

The first correspondent from any Dominion to see the men of Lord Louis Mountbatten's command in action, I accompanied the sea force which took the men across the water early yesterday and stood offshore for the two hours the invaders remained ashore, testing the strength of the German defences and conducting with surprising ease what was described officially as a reconnaisance operation.

For those two hours the Commandos, their faces blackened with burnt cork and shoe polish to merge with the pre-dawn darkness, destroyed German communications, shot up their strong points and conducted a survey of the defences while the light naval force which escorted them fought a brisk action offshore, damaging two German anti-aircraft trawlers, one of which took fire.

Many were veteran Commandos, some men who had taken part in the first lightning raid on the Lofoten Islands, some men who fought in the battle of France. Many wore on their tunics ribbons of decorations won in other fights.

Start By Daylight

Several hours of daylight remained when we slipped quietly out of the British port where we had been waiting for a coincidence of ideal conditions of sea and weather. The men sprawled below in the hot wardrooms, singing and telling yarns until darkness and fog blanketed the Channel, making it safe for them to come on deck without fear of detection. Then they were silent, waiting for the signal to wade ashore.

Early in the morning the zero hour came. The men slipped quietly from the transports into surf craft The transports let go their anchors and swung ashore, their engines idle.

Suddenly two lights broke out

Obituary

MRS. DAVID HUNTER

A veteran reesident of Otonabee township, Agnes Catherine Weir, widow of David Hunter, died on Thursday, April 23, at her home, 406 Mark street, in Peterborough in her 88th year.

The late Mrs. Hunter was born in Otonabee township on the farm now occupied by Ross Larmer, on the 10th concession, and later lived on the property just east of the canal on the Old Norwood Road now owned by C. A. Hope, the fine brick house which still stands having been built by Mrs. Hunter's father, the late Frank Weir. On her marriage to the late David Hunter, who died 22 years ago, she moved to the Hunter homestead, which stands at the top of Hunter's Hill on the Norwood road, and was a beautiful spot, being completely surrounded by lilacs. This farm home was burned about 25 years ago.

More than a quarter of a century ago, Mrs. Hunter moved to Peterborough and has made her home with her daughters at 406 Mark street since that time. The late Mrs. Hunter has been in poor health for the past six months.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Beattie, (Annie), and Miss Edith Hunter both of Peterborough, and two grandchildren, Jim and Edith Beattie. Mrs. James McDonald of Toronto is a half-sister of Mrs. Hunter, and a half-brother, Fred Weir, is now living in the United States.

The funeral will take place on Saturday, April 25, from the family residence, 406 Mark street, at 2.30 o'clock. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. E. W. Rowland of Mark Street Church will conduct the funeral services.

Small Girl Hit By Automobile

Three-year-old Anne Damario, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. V. Damario, 81 Lynch street, had her ear cut when she was struck and knocked down by an automobile on Romaine street at Lynch street Wednesday afternoon.

The little girl was crossing Romaine street just as a motor car driven by Charles Hooper, Hamilton, travelling east came along. The driver told police that he swerved his car to the side of the road in an effort to avoid hitting the child but that she was struck by the front right headlight and knocked to the road.

Medical examination showed that the little girl was not badly hurt.

Sewing Circle Completes Two More Quilts

CAMPBELLFORD, April 23. — (ENS). — In addition to several articles being handed in representing the work of co-operating groups, members of the Rylstone Red Cross Sewing Circle completed two quilts at the monthly meeting held Tuesday afternoon at Mrs. F. W. Barnum's home. Work brought in by the members included three girls' blouses, 1 skirt and a quilt completed at the April meeting of the Institute. The president, Mrs. Everett Heath, made an appeal to members requesting that they bring in any clothing, especially coats which would be suitable for making over into children's clothes. It was suggested that they contribute patterns as well, so that this work might be proceeded with when they gather next month when they will meet at Mrs. James Gibson's for a pot-luck dinner to be held in connection with the meeting. Members of the Circle expressed their appreciation to the Rylstone branch of the Institute for a $10.00 donation representing part of the proceeds from the Victory concert staged at Petherick's on March 6. Another contribution the group appreciated was two batts of cotton from Mrs. William Stewart and Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn, which will find their way into the two quilts that will be completed next month. A considerable amount of material suitable for girls' blouses was sent in by the Rawdon branch of the Red Cross and this will also be used at the next meeting.

History Of Music Feature Music Study Club

PORT HOPE, April 23.—(ENS)—The regular monthly meeting of the Music Study Club was held at Seaton Hall on Wednesday night.

The meeting opened with a few remarks by the president, Mrs. M. C. Byrant and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the new secretary, Miss Dorothy Dodd, who was appointed at the last meeting to fill the vacancy of the resigning secretary, Miss Doris Chesher.

Mrs. I. D. Willis was then introduced by Mrs. Bryant.

Mrs. Willis gave most interesting descriptive readings and musical recordings of 2,000 years of music. This was a collection of descriptions and recordings which Mrs. Willis secured while in England in 1939 and titled "Concise history of music from the earliest times down to the 18th century." The records used were recorded from the instruments which had been preserved from the early centuries.

Hellenic Music

Starting with the early Greek music composed by Scolion of Seikilos in Asia Minor and a "Hymn to the Sun God" composed in the 2nd century by A.D. Mesomedes was played.

Next came the Jewish music which showed that in spite of the breaking up of the Jewish race some of the earliest Jewish music has been preserved both in the East and in the Catholic church and are still used in the present day Jewish synagogues.

"Kaddish" meaning song of praise and "Aboda" a description of the Day of Atonement and extracts from the Book of Esther were the next descriptions and recordings given.

Gregorian Chant

"Gregorian Chant" which is associated mostly with the Roman Catholic church and represents a declaration by the priest with the responses; and "Gradual" which was originally a Psalm from one of the earliest masses at the beginning of the 2nd century were given.

The trend of the music to become more cheerful as the centuries passed was very marked and in the eleventh century more freedom crept in while in the twelfth three-part songs appeared. "The Pilgrims Songs" a three-part had most graceful and flowing lines which was typical of the 12th century.

Spanish Troubadours appeared at the end of the twelfth century when peasant and prince desired the same types of music.

A Gayer Period

Next played was the German parallel of the Troubadors a style of church music played between the dates of 1200 and 1450. "Song of Palestine" was the record played which was composed by Walter von der Vogelweide who was born in 1170 and died in 1230 and was one of the outstanding musicians of his day.

Early Netherland music was the next recording, "In the Manner of Trumpets" a composition of 1450.

Jacquin de Pres brought about quite a change in both music and art at this time. He was born in 1450 and died in 1521. Josquin des Pres wrote the operetta "Incartus" an extract of which was played showing more harmony.

Palestrina who was born in 1526 and became a choir boy in 1540 had a very outstanding career and composed ninety-three masses and forty-two madrigals as well as many compositions. It was he who was instrumental in holding to the church treno of music, which was beginning to slip at this time. The recording was one of his compositions "Sanctus."

The Harpsichord

Germany and Spanish Magridals began to appear in 1618 and the record gave a description of these on a harpsichord which was the instrument of the century, a square box with strings, its music was very sweet.

A clavicord, another instrument that has been preserved down from the seventeenth century was used in the recording written by J. S. Bach in 1720 and produced music very much like that of our present day violin. This recording made a most suitable closing to a very interesting evening.

Mrs. J. V. Strong at this time thanked Mrs. Willis for so kindly giving of her time and in making the meeting so interesting and beneficial.

The secretary, Mrs. Cecil McCulloch, gave her report and it was announced the roll call for the May 27 meeting to be held at Mrs. John Kelly's, will be taken from St. Luke's Gospel. Cobourg Foreman Injured In Fall

COBOURG, April 23— (ENS). — James Campbell town foreman, had a severe fall on Tuesday when a rope being used to pull down a limb from a tree tripped him and threw him heavily to the pavement. The rope was attached to the partly sawn limb and thence to the town truck. Two Birthdays

This week we celebrate two birthday anniversaries: Adolf Hitler was 53 on Monday, and today William Shakespeare is 378. Though older, Shapespeare is still the more vigorous and interesting man of the two. It would be a graceful compliment to say that Hitler is like a Shakespearian character, but unfortunately it would not be true; Shakespeare never created a villain without investing him with a certain magnificence. The playwright had no objection to sordid and vulgar people; indeed, he appears to have been interested in them; but he hated a jack-in-office. When he wrote that—

Man, proud man,
Drest in a little brief authority...
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep.

he might have been speaking of Hitler. But although he would not have cared greatly for the Berlin end of the Axis it is interesting to speculate what Shakespeare would have done with a character like Mussolini; there he would have found a comic inspiration to eclipse, perhaps, the immortal Falstaff himself!

It is instructive upon this occasion when chance throws them together to compare the great creator, whose works have established his sure and unshakeable dominion over the minds of men, with the great destroyer, who seeks to be master of Europe. Both are artists in their way, but one is a supremely great artist, saying Yes to life, and the other is a bad artist, saying No to life. Hitler might say, as Napoleon once did: "I love power. But it is as an artist that I love it. I love it as a musician loves his violin, to draw out of it sounds and chords and harmonies. I love it as an artist." But it has never yet been given to any man to exercise his artistic impulses upon the bodies of millions of his fellow-creatures without bringing disaster upon himself and all who have been connected with him. Only those who set out to be conquerors of the mind can hope to establish a dominion which will last a lifetime and which, even after three centuries have passed, will draw new and eager citizens within its confines, anxious to acknowledge the supremacy of the conqueror.

What a world of misery and anxiety would have been saved if Hitler had decided to be a playwright rather than a politician! Then he could have indulged his passion for conquest, oratory and pageantry without doing much harm. But no, he had to have Europe for a stage; he wanted princes and potentates for his supporting cast; he had to have whole nations for his crowd-scenes and the world for his audience. Hitler is a creature with no conception of either the sublimity or the insignificance of Man. Shakespeare could have told him a thing or two; if Hitler had read Hamlet instead of wasting his time writing a poor book of his own, he would have found these words: "The very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream." And in those words he might yet find the reason why Shakespeare will be alive for centuries to come, while Adolf Hitler will figure only as a character in other men's plays.

More Savings Needed

The announcement of the National War Savings Committee that it wishes to double the war savings of the Canadian people will not surprise anyone. The cost of the war is reckoned in astronomical figures, and the more money we have to spend now the more violent will be the reaction when peace comes. There is only one way in which we can guard against hard times after the war and that is by saving now.

Canadian war savings by means of stamps and bonds now amount to a very large figure, but it is not nearly large enough. Many loyal and prudent citizens are doing their bit in this way, and some are even making considerable sacrifices in order to give the Government the money which it needs. But there are still a vast number of people whose savings are no more than a token; they buy a few stamps each month and consider that sufficient though they could spare more without appreciable hardship. It is the duty of each wage-earner to assess himself and to make the most generous contribution that he possibly can. It is primarily in the interest of the country but it is also in his own interest; he will not find a better investment anywhere today.

It is possible that war savings stamps will soon be sold over the counter in places of business, and we feel that this would be a good move. Many people are well disposed toward the savings campaign but they are lethargic and will not make the effort which is always involved in saving money. If it is made possible for them to take their change from purchases in stamps, and if stamps are made easily available to them, we feel sure that they will respond. Charities have long recognized that the way to get money is to make it is easy as possible for people to give it, and we think that this principle might be profitably applied to the sale of stamps, if not of bonds.

Taxation For Its Own Sake

Everyone has heard of artists who practice their art for its own sake and without thought of reward, but a Chancellor of the Exchequer who taxes on the same principle is something of an oddity. To many British housewives the tax on household goods in the new Budget seems merely a bit of make-believe; Sir Kingsley is taxing the non-existent.

The purchase tax was formerly set at thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the price; now it has been raised to sixty-six and two-thirds. But where are the household goods to buy, even at this increased price? Textiles in general, such as curtains, upholstery, carpets, silks and household linen are on the list, but they are not in the shops. Face-cloths are taxed, but there are no face-cloths; hotels have had to reduce the number of towels which guests may use, and in some cases the supply is as little as one a week.

China and glass can hardly be found. and a family which lost its supply through bombing is hard put to it to find enough for the most meagre use. Cooking utensils are equally scarce, and so is cutlery. Housewives who have been doing without for months because they could find no new supplies in the shops are wondering just what Sir Kingsley thinks he is taxing.

Ten Years Of Traffic

The branch of the Ontario Department of Highways which deals with Motor Vehicles has published the result of a careful survey which it has made concerning traffic accidents between 1931 and 1941—that is, a period of eleven years. The statistics are shocking; though we are apt to take other people's motor accidents as a matter of course in daily life, an aggregate of them commands attention. In the time specified 6,689 people were killed and 117,085 were injured. Property was damaged to the value of $16,790,218. This total of loss of life, property, and injury was the result of 135,146 accidents, involving 195,647 drivers and 203,519 vehicles. Those who were killed were drivers in 1,286 cases; 1,945 were passengers and 2,804 were pedestrians. Last year was the worst for accidents; there were 18,167 altogether and 801 people were killed.

The 1941 statistics are particularly interesting. Although drunkenness is blamed for much bad driving, only 362 drivers out of the 18,167 accidents were drunk—a surprisingly small percentage. Two-thirds of the drivers involved had driven for more than five years, and most of them were between 18 and 55 years old; most of the accidents happened between 5 and 7 p.m. Of the 28,158 vehicles involved 21,453 were travelling straight ahead, and 16,100 of the 18,167 accidents happened on good roads, usually paved and between intersections.

Now these statistics seem to show that the great cause of accidents is carelessness. Motorists grow in time to be used to driving, and this lulls them into a fanciful belief that they are good drivers. No driver is a good driver who does not remember that he is in charge of a powerful machine which is quite capable of killing several people, himself included, if he does not keep himself continually alert. The present time, when driving is limited to forty miles an hour, is no time to become careless; it is as easy to be killed in a car travelling at that speed as in one going seventy, or fifteen miles an hour. Cars are always dangerous if they are in the hands of over-confident, unwittingly careless people.

Italy Seeks a Way Out

There are persistent rumors and reports from neutral sources that Italy is anxious to make a separate peace with the United Nations and may soon launch a peace offensive seeking that end. Italy is now at the nadir of her fortunes, destitute, short of food, and reduced to the level of a German colony; her position is, in a way, worse than that of a conquered nation, for she has fallen through her own stupidity and greed. If Italy seeks peace she will be in a humble mood indeed.

Italy has, for almost a century, been a friend of Britain, grateful for British aid in unifying the peninsula under the House of Savoy. Doubtless many Italians have felt badly about turning against an old friend, and are eager to climb back into Britain's good graces. It is interesting to notice that, ever since Italy entered the war, British hatred has been reserved for Mussolini, and British feeling for the Italian people has ranged between sympathy and amused contempt. Italy is now the football of nations, and would undoubtedly choose the amused contempt of the British in preference to the distinctly unamused contempt of her Axis partners.

There has been concern in Italy recently over a rumored Allied attack on the Axis, beginning with a seizure and subjugation of Italy; undoubtedly Italians, who have no stomach left for fighting, would like to avoid this if they can, and apparently the manner in which the recent exchange of prisoners was effected led them to believe that a peace might be arranged.

A separate peace with Italy is not to be despised. It would give the United Nations a freer hand in the Mediterranean and it would depress the German people mightily. They despise the Italians, but the concept of a Rome-Berlin Axis is dear to them for it gives an appearance of power. The possibilities are infinite, and there is no point in discussing them until the situation is clarified, but it may well prove that Germany's heel of Achilles may be found in her Italian boot.

BATAAN

Theirs was the hollow, the costly triumph,
Yours were the rage of gallantry and truth—
Honor is now where those flags were taken,
In that green island where you poured your youth.

Flames were your shrouds, your elegies thunder,
Death and disaster found you on your feet—
What remains is that immortal courage
Which held day after day with no retreat.

Battered, sore-beset, desperate, outnumbered
Brave handful who followed a falling star—
Lives are hard to give, but they were given
To that proud land which mourns you from afar.

This story is for the old to whisper—
And lights will gleam and dance in children's eyes
At the tale of loyalty and courage
Of that free breed which bleeds but never dies.

English Plays And American Playgoers

By SAMUEL MACHBANKS

IT IS the exception, rather than the rule, for a play which has been a success in England to please the American public, and vice versa. No one seems to be able to explain why this should be so. English critics say that it is because American plays have little literary quality, although it is clear to anyone with half an eye that this is not so; it is also quite false to assume that the taste of British playgoers on the whole is superior to that of their American cousins. American critics, on the other hand, say that American audiences do not like British plays because these lack vigor and masculinity, and this again is a contention which will not bear close inspection. British and American producers, until war broke out, continued hopefully to transfer their successes from London to New York and back again, and in nine cases out of ten they lost their tempers and their chemises in so doing.

This incompatibility of taste on the part of New York and London audiences leaves only one thing clear; a playwright who can please both is no ordinary writer, and those who can do it may be numbered on the fingers of one hand. Noel Coward is one, and his 'Blithe Spirit" is running in both centers now; Emlyn Williams is another and he has had great success on both sides of the water with his thriller "Night Must Fall" and more recently with "The Corn is Green"; this latter piece is playing this week in Toronto. But even Williams cannot be sure what will happen. In the spring of 1940 London flocked to see his play "The Light of Heart," and it continued to draw until quite recently; but last week it was produced by the New York Theatre Guild with the name "Yesterday's Magic," and it has fallen painfully and inexplicably flat. Why? Well, dear reader, if you or I know we could go to New York at this moment and set up shop as theatrical counsellors and smoke two dollar cigars for the rest of our lives.

EMLYN WILLIAMS is one of the most promising of the younger British playwrights. It is very necessary to say British in his case, for he is decidedly not English, but a Welshman, and his plays are no more English in flavor than are, say, those of the Scotsman James Bridie. Anyone reading a play of Bridie's would know it for the work of a Scot, just as he would know a play by Sean O'Casey for the work of an Irishman; so it is with Williams. His plays reveal him as a Welshman by their leaning toward the melodramatic, their fondness for poetic passages, and their peculiar humor. Welsh humor is apt to be sardonic and ironic more than the English variety, but it is very pleasing. In "The Corn Is Green," for instance, an English lady asks the Welsh hero about his family, and he shamefacedly admits that his father was 'a mongrel'; when his questioner asks for a fuller explanation he explains that his father 'had a dash of English.'

"The Corn Is Green" is, to some degree, a play based upon Williams' own life. It is about an English lady, a Miss Moffat, who settles down in the Welsh mining village of Glansarno and proceeds to teach the inhabitants, most of whom are illiterate miners, to read and write and to do many other things which they had not thought of doing before. The period of the play is in the latter part of the last century. Among her pupils she discovers one of great promise, and she drives him hard in order to develop his powers; in fact she drives him too hard, and he seeks relief from the unaccustomed scholastic grinding in the embrace of Bessie Wattie, a worthless girl who works for Miss Moffat. This very nearly upsets the whole scheme, but owing to some dextrous and decidedly feminine work by the teacher the young man is saved from the designing Bessie and is packed off to Oxford, where he has earned a scholarship.

THIS play delighted London and New York audiences for over a year. It would be hard to say why, for although it is a good play many another good play has failed to survive a similar test. It has novelty, of course. There is a good deal of singing in it, and it gives a charming picture of Welsh village life in the nineteenth century, rather like the film "How Green Was My Valley" which was similarly successful. The real secret may lie in the quality which Williams has of moving his audiences profoundly by scenes of strong emotions; few modern playwrights appear to have any skill in handling deep emotion and they try to substitute sentiment for it; the result is rather like substituting a vegetarian cutlet for a real one.

And yet Williams' "Yesterday's Magic" has failed to please. It is an interesting piece, about a great actor who has fallen into poverty through drink; at last he is given an opportunity to recover his fortunes and his reputation in a production of "King Lear"; his fate and that of his invalid daughter depend upon his success. But he gets drunk before the performance and fails to appear at all, and then, in remorse, he commits suicide. A good story, and Williams told it well. London liked it; New York does not. Why? No one can say. London is London and New York is New York, and the twain shall meet, it appears, no more than two or three times in as many years.

• The Commandos' Knives

EIGHTY-YEAR-OLD swordmaker Tom Beasley, who forged his first blade as a child of eight during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, is working 10½ hours a day helping to arm Britain against her enemies. Since war began he has lost only half an hour of working time—when his clock stopped one morning.

But today the skill Tom put into making the sword presented to Queen Victoria by the Indian Princes on her diamond jubilee is being used to show younger men how to forge the deadly black knives used by Britain's Commandos and parachute troops.

These knives, worn in a leather scabbard attached to the leg, have an interesting history. Of the finest sword steel, they were designed by Superintendents Fairbairn and Sykes, of the Shanghai police, who put their "rough house" experience to good account by teaching Britain's shock troops the art of swift and silent killing. But the pattern is really much older, for, in 1686, troops fighting at Bayonne thrust such daggers as these into the muzzles of their flintlock muskets — and gave the world the first bayonet.

The factory where Tom Beasley has worked for 50 years normally turns out not only the best swords but the finest hollow-ground razor blade in the world. Foounded in 1772 as gunmakers, they started making swords in 1832 and cut-throat razors in 1890, while ten years later they were one of the first steel forgers to take up the safety razor, which in peace time they send all over the world. Their swords go to the military and police forces in the Empire, South America, Abyssinia, Egypt and other countries, but war has put an end to this.

Now the company makes the commando knives and scabbards, armor-piercing shot for anti-tank guns and an automatic fire extinguisher, the Graviner, which is installed in every British warplane. Organized for war effort, the factory has doubled its staffs—now 50 per cent women—and quadrupled its output.—Belleville Intelligencer.

• Hitler Delaying in the South

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 23 (AP)—A striking eyewitness review of weather conditions on the Russian front by an Associated Press reporter lends emphasis to Moscow's contention that Hitler's long-heralded drive for Caucasian oil is definitely off schedule.

Henry Cassidy, in a flight over the Caucasus and up the Volga to Kuibyshev, found the winter snow-line retreating swiftly northward.

"The land now is fit for large-scale operations in the south," he said, with "the Caucasus hard and dry under a warm sun."

Hitler's last word as to when he would strike again in Russia styled it a summer, rather than a spring, campaign. That caused comment. For in the light of what happened to the Nazi "crusade" in Russia last year, every hour now lost in renewing the blitzkrieg has meaning.

Berlin spokesmen wave aside the question of a Hitler change from a spring to a summer campaign as inconsequential. But history shows that such changes are not to be regarded lightly.

FATAL MISJUDGMENT

Hitler's misjudgment by only a matter of weeks of the Russian capacity to resist and of the time it would take him to reach and enter the Rostov gateway into the Caucasus brought his armies close to disaster in the east year year.

Hitler turned his legions against Yugoslavia on April 6, 1941. It took him approximately ten weeks to achieve his Balkan victory, and on June 21 he turned on Russia.

Just five months later, on Nov. 22, Berlin announced the capture of Rostov. Seven days later on Nov. 29, Moscow announced its recapture, and the Nazi winter retreat was on. Hitler had lost his race with time, and the six-month Russian winter was upon him. His chance of a quick and conclusive victory in Russia was gone because of the delay caused by the Balkan campaign.

With the sorely needed oil of the Caucasus still Hitler's prime target, weather conditions again seem favorable for the launching of another Nazi stab at the Rostov gateway. Only a few score miles, not hundreds, need be taken to sweep around that corner on to the Caucasian plains. Yet there is every evidence that the lost winter months have resulted in tremendous Russian forces being massed on that dangerous south flank; and Red Army flanking spearheads being driven deeply into Nazi lines almost to the great lower bend of the Dneiper River.

SALIENTS FORCE DELAYS

Those factors, plus the Russian salients which threaten key rail and road junctions in the Donets Basin; across the Bryansk-Smolensk-Vitebsk-Nevel trunk line which serves the German "hedge-hog" advance bases in the centre, and on northward to the Poskov gateway to Leningrad, are forcing delays on Hitler in the south. These same salients make it difficult to say where Hitler will have to strike first, even though they may not change his main objective, the oil of the Caucasus.

The Russians' winter strategy was aimed largely at harassing German lines at crucial points to keep enemy forces so deployed on the defensive that they could not be massed southward for a spring march to oil. This march has not yet started, despite the firm ground and warm sun in the Caucasus. This strongly supports the Russians' thesis that the effect of their winter campaign has been far more important than the actual territory regained. It has cost Hitler a time loss he can ill afford.

GLAD TO SEE BOYS IN B.C.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Doubtless there are many Peterborough boys serving in the armed forces and located in and around the Victoria district of Vancouver Island. My wife and I should like to get word to them through the Examiner that we shall be happy to hear from any of them. Our rectory is 15 miles up the Saanich Peninsula out of Victoria. We are about 5 miles from the Air Stations at Patricia Bay and about seven from Sidney. The telephone number is KEATING 34 G.

If any of your readers care to pass this word along to boys from home now located out here we shall be grateful. Although gas rationing and tires are a problem, perhaps such co-operation would give us an opportunity to offer them hospitality and friendship.

When Fiorello Goes For Ride

MEN who are just boys grown up have more and more occasion to envy Mayor (Fire-fighting) Fiorello LaGuardia. His honor has a new thing in breath-taking, on-the-go treasures—a "war car," no less, with top painted white and body green.

And get a load of this, fellows: On the green hood are the initials "N. Y.C." and five white stars signifying metropolitan boroughs; one better than a full general's four regulation stars. In case of blackouts there are two red emergency lights protruding from the front fenders; and the front of the car bears the shield of the mayor of New York City and five more stars. On the white top there is a red panel which, when lighted, flashes "Mayor" in a red glow.

Thus the mayor's perfectly understandable craving for noise and excitement has found the last word in "outs" from the law's delay and the insolence of office crashers that Fiorello's patient merit might otherwise have to keep on taking. At the same time, he gives the public a thrilling treat and pedestrians a chance to see stars without getting hit. In the circumstances, any night—preferably about theatre time—would do nicely for a sort of Fiorello Revere's ride to rouse the Manhattan citizenry to the coming of the Germans; with some distinguishable horn-blowings to signify whether by land, air or sea. Inferentially, the car has a skyview top.

It would be just his honor's luck, though, to be slowing down somewhere in the neighborhood of the Y.W.C.A. and have some dear old lady wave her umbrella and call "Taxi!"—Buffalo Courier-Express.

Lakefield Organizes Salvage Push E. W. Bailey Donates Storehouse

LAKEFIELD, April 23—(ENS).—Village citizens took a long step towards a concerted War Salvage effort Tuesday night. Various speakers expressed disappointment in the poor showing in attendance but the fifty interested, in a two-hour session threshed out many of the campaign angles and elected a committee of five—Mrs. J. W. Ridpath, Mrs. Wes. Leonard, J. W. McKerchar, George H. Spence and Rev. S. A. R. Wood—to start the ball rolling.

One of the major problems, the question of suitable storage was quickly ironed out in the generous offer of E. W. Bailey, Canada Cement Superintendent, of a building 100 by 80 where several car loads of material could be kept under lock and key.

Reeve G. S. Tanner was elected chairman and after a brief lauding of the school salvage effort called on the Rev. S. A. R. Wood for suggestions.

Mr. Wood stated he believed the collection if taken seriously should be on a larger scale than the school children had been conducting it and proposed the town council take charge.

"Council No Salvage Body"

"The Council's hands are full," said the Reeve, "we have duties of our own, it would be an impossible task for the council. It would mean we would have to hire trucks to do the job and in that way spoil the whole idea of making it a community effort. We will assist but I do not intend to turn the Council into a salvage body."

In reply Mr. Wood pointed to the efforts of various city councils in other areas, and claimed the citizens couldn't very well hire trucks, but the council could—on behalf of the citizens.

Lack of a daily garbage collection in the village such as that in cities for and in salvage work was against that system here said Mr. Tanner. However, he believed there would be no trouble in getting volunteer trucks.

Principal J. F. Harvey of the High School spoke strong words of disappointment at the small number present and apparent lack of interest in such a vital effort—the idea seeming to be "let George do t."

He spoke of the school pupils' collections and the amount of hard work and time they had spent in the past year or so—as an example stating in the past week their roundup had netted five heaping truck loads. "This is a sample of what the children can do, and should spur the citizens into cooperation for a man-sized effort." "But," he warned, "it needs a live body in charge and the council behind it to pay collection costs, if necessary."

Some of the Pitfalls

D. L. Minshall of the High School staff differed with the reeve in the matter of getting trucks and told of his trouble as supervisor of the school campaign. He charged there was a definite lack of public spiritedness among the citizens that the boys were meeting all the time.

He related incidents of people outside the village phoning to have collections made, of 12-mile trips to pick up some paper—that 90 per cent of the paper was never tied.

The pupils are doing a great job for the Junior Red Cross, Mr. Minshal said, and it seems deplorable to think that they are having their efforts practically scuttled right in the village—and he told of two boys collecting allegedly for the Red Cross, some 1,000 or 1,500 pounds of metals—and selling it on their own hook. Another two lads had done the same thing the night before the monthly collection and sold it privately—the donors believing it went to the Red Cross.

In the first year of school effort the amount raised netted some $65—and since September, $81.37 for paper, $4.19 rubber, $7.82 rags, for a total of $93.38 and about $7 in metal still on hand. The past month's drive brought in $31.38—all of which goes to the Red Cross.

Mr. Minshal sought to disillusion an who would start a half hearted campaign, instancing 17 hours he had spent in the last drive and told of the sorting to be done, papers tied or baled, bones to pick out, etc.

Mr. Wood stated from Mr. Minshal's portrayal, it was plain the pupils need a rea hand and were to be lauded for a marvellous effort.

The reeve suggested some missionary work be done in the nearby townships for organizations there to bring their material to the village.

Clerk H. T. Hill said there had been some suggestion of using the rink for storage but believed there might be trouble with the insurance. He thought an organization working with the school would be able to get trucks offered but it might be in off hours.

How the Pupils Work

The system used by the pupils was explained by Mr. Minshal—each boy having a route covering from ten to twenty houses nearest his own home, with the town divided in three sections and one key boy in charge of each section. Night before the collection each householder was called on and told of the effort due next day when 28 boys made the rounds dumping materials at corners where a truck picked it up.

J. W. McKerchar, praising the pupils, offered to assist them or work with an organization in cooperation with them possibly handling the heavier materials.

Reeve Tanner opposed any setup that would exclude the school, Principal Harvey agreeing, but favoring some live committee to go ahead and carry on during the summer holidays, working out a system of their own, and one that the pupils could assist with.

Mrs. William Gilman and Mrs. Ed. Millage stated they had been under the impression the boys were collecting paper only and favored an enlarged effort to help in collection of bigger scrap. Mrs. W. W. Leonard expressed disappointment in the fact that apparently the citizens had very little idea of what to save or do with it.

Mrs. Leonard mentioned the fact that there were some materials that apparently had no market, and Clerk Hill mentioned the case of a Norwood man who had a quantity of fats that a dealer had refused to handle on the pretext there wasn't enough to bother with.

Reeve Tanner wondered if collection of fats would be worth while and promptly found out as Mrs. Millage revealed the Red Cross already had about 100 pounds with a ready market for it. Mrs. George Spence urged the stressing of more help by the householders the majority of whom give the boys little or no aid, for the most part letting the boys take away the papers in a loose mass.

A Big Hurdle Cleared

It was at this point that Mr. Bailey offered the use of a building for stroage. He complimented the school on their effort and believed they should be encouraged to carry on with the Citizens' Committee handling the heavier scrap.

Rev. Mr. Wood proposed the committee be composed of three men and two women and Mr Harvey, in seconding it, also seconded Mr. Wood's motion of gratitude to Mr. Bailey for his offer.

The five names, Mrs. Ridpath, Mrs. Leonard, Messrs. Wood, Geo. Spence and McKerchar were then proposed.

Roy Brown, former Warden, advocated adding Mr. Harvey and the council to the group but Reeve Tanner objected to inclusion of the council as a body, though again assuring individual assistance.

Councillor George Charlton stated the committee could be assured of full cooperation of the town officials.

Principal Harvey expressed the hope that the new committee would not drop the school from a share in the campaign. It is an education in itself for the pupils, gives them a feeling of accomplishing something toward the war effort,, he said, and the way the boys and girls pitch in and work is a genuine credit to them all. We shall be only too glad to continue our part and assist to the best of our ability in furthering the work of the Red Cross in this way.

The new committee met briefly following the session, laid plans for a full roundup of information during the week with a meeting scheduled for Monday night, April 27, when definite steps for real activity will be taken.

Mother Drugs Son 4, Escaping Hun 'Because He Kept Talking English'

By WILLIAM HUMPHREYS
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 23 —(AP)—Anthony Haden Guest, who at 4½ years is the youngest prisoner ever known to escape from the Germans, held a press conference this afternoon.

"Don't forget I speak English," Anthony stated at the beginning. His mother, Mrs. Peter Guest, interrupted to remark that he certainly did speak English — so constantly that in escaping from the Germans she had to keep him drugged for four days and nights to prevent his language from giving them away.

Anthony at this point disappeared under the table and laughed gleefully as he pinched the ankles of women reporters present.

Finally he came out when offered chocolate ice cream, leaving his mother to carry on.

Describing conditions in occupied France, she said the French are living for the day of liberation, and are hoping that Canadians will be in the forefront of those who invade the continent to throw out the enemy.

She said her husband was in New York and young Anthony was in Brittany when the German invasion started May 10, 1940.

By the time she could drop her work with the British-American Ambulance Corps in Paris and rejoin her child in Brittany, all escape routes were cut off.

6 Hours To Crawl Line

"It took us six hours to walk and crawl through the line of Demarcation into unoccupied France," she said. "Tony was very good about it. Because he speaks English all the time, I gave him drugs to keep him quiet on the train we took from Paris.

"Crawling through the lines, I had on a sort of harness. I was ahead, and when we had to turn to the right through the maze of barbed wire, I would give a little tug on the rein on that side and Tony would follow me.

"When I told him he never would have another Christmas tree or birthday cake, that there would be nothing but German soldiers unless he kept quiet, he promised he would.

"It was quite an ordeal to get him through.

"The half of him that wasn't drugged was normally curious and was always on the point of wondering out loud about such things as dogs barking.

"The Germans have lots of dogs on the Demarcation line, but a friend coated us with some smelly stuff that is supposed to throw them off the scent in case they pick up your trail.

"As for the sentries, well, there was nothing to it but to be extra careful.

"Each one patrols a stretch of 50 yards to and fro and you have to move when they are definitely fro."

Watched Invasion Troops

Mrs. Guest said she remained in Brittany until August, 1940, and watched Saxon regiments training for the invasion of England with "rubber boats and all that." Then she and the boy were taken to Dinan prison camp. In October they were transferred to Lemans at the edge of a German airdrome which was bombed by the R.A.F. Next they were shipped in bitter December weather in a cattle train to Besancon, a place of internment for dissident French.

"We women had to take off our clothes to keep the children warm on the train. At camp we had to melt ice and snow to wash them," she said.

Through intervention of the Red Cross, they were moved to Paris where "Tony and I managed just to step out of line and lose ourselves in the crowd."

Child Firemen

WASHINGTON, April 23 (AP)—The United States Office of Facts and Figures to-day quoted the German radio as reporting "German children of less than 15 years will henceforth be enrolled in the fire department." "Normally, children will not be called upon to work except during the day," the broadcast continued, "in order to put out incendiary bombs, or in emergency cases. But in cases of urgent public danger, they may be asked to work at night."

3 Die In Crash

NEW CARLISLE Que., April 23—(CP). — A Royal Air Force ferry command twin-engined bomber crashed near this Gaspe coast town last night, resulting in the death of the crew of three men. Earlier, it was reported that it was a Royal Canadian Air Force plane.

The plane, evidently in difficulties, circled the town for more than an hour while the pilot sought to make a forced landing. Then it crashed. The three occupants of the plane were killed almost instantly.

HASTINGS BALL LOOP ORGANIZES

Joe Mulholland Re-elected Club President

HASTINGS, April 23.—(ENS)—Joseph Mulholland was re-elected president of the Hastings Softball club at the inaugural meeting of the club Wednesday night.

Honorary presidents are: E. Jones, Frank Daley, A. J. McKenty, Aubrey "Dit" Clapper, W. H. Kumpf, and Harry Anderson.

Other officers named for the coming season are: vice-president, Lou Scriver; secretary-treasurer, Stanley Stevenson; executive, Nelson Scriver, Russ Jones, Clarence Gillespie, Iden Bonds, Clayton Radford, Gerard Scriver, Aubrey Clapper.

Although its operations will necessarily be diminished due to the scarcity of playing material the club hopes to carry on this season with a particular view to aiding the war effort as much as possible. Nelson Scriver expressed the opinion of those present when he stated: "We will either have to cater to the younger fellows and form a semi-juvenile league or there just won't be any ball around here this summer.

As matters now stand here are three sure starters, Hastings village, Tannery and Roseneath. Warkworth as a possible fourth entrant would round out a well-balanced loop.

No decision with regard to entering the Peterborough City League again this season was made at last night's meeting. Joe Jones, manager of the local entry last year, intimated that this matter would be discussed immediately.

According to the treasurer's report, as submitted by Stanley Stevenson, practically the entire proceeds of the activities of the club last season were donated to war charities. This same policy will again be followed to this season. In addition, the association has $150 in Victory Bonds and has been regularly sending cigarettes to the local boys overseas.

In connection with this it was tentatively decided to stage a monster war charity day on May 25.

This will be under the joint auspices of the Red Cross Society, War Veteran's Association, and Softball Club. Further plans will be completed at a later meeting.

A boxing boom is sweeping the Welsh valleys, comparable to the halcyon days of Cardiff's Jimmy Wilde. After dog racing, fight cards draw the biggest gates. So great is the enthusiasm that a promoter is considering signing Tonypandy's Tommy Farr, who has been shouting about a comeback, for a bout against an opponent not yet selected.

Eustace H. G. North, English International Rugby forward and Oxford Blue of other years, died recently at the age of 73. He shone for England against Scotland and Wales in 1891 and played against Cambridge the three previous years.

Two Holes-In-One

Not one, but two holes-in-one on successive days were scored by Frederick B. Snite, Sr., Chicago, father of the "Iron Lung" patient, during the Midwest amateur golf tourney at French Lick Springs, Ind. Snite scored the golfer's dream on a 142-yard hole with a No. 3 iron. The next day, on the same hole, he again made a hole-in-one!

Golf Principles Will Aid Allies

LONDON, April 23 — (CP). — Sir Noel Curtiss-Bennett said at a Warship Week meeting that "if we apply that fundamental principles of golf to our relations with our Allies, and more especially with the United States we cannot go far wrong."

"There are only three of these. They are: Keep your eye on the ball; follow through and don't press. I believe if we follow these we shall be able to defeat the Colonel Bogey of international anarchy which has brought us to the brink of disaster to-day. Both golf and Anglo-Allied relations may look easy, but both require cool tempers, good judgment, and the sense of fair play."

Lawn Bowling

Tonight all bowlers will be heading for our bowling club—either out McDonnel street or up Monaghan Road—it matters not, just so long as they get there.

It is the annual get-together and it is to be hoped that a goodly number will be in attendance. At this meeting, no doubt, there will be a big drive for membership and on top of that all chairmen will give an account of the work done by their committees, so far this season.

It is just about one month from opening day, May 24, and there is a tremendous amount of work to be done between now and then.

What the Board of Directors would like, would be this:

If each member or prospective member would attend tonight and bring along an application card and the necessary fee—or better still if the appointed skips would see to it that the members of their rink would sign cards and hand them in tonight. All this has got to be done and done smoothly and by somebody. It is a small matter for a skip contact three other men. If it is left for any one member to do, it involves a lot of work for that one person and the chances are some would be left out.

All that is needed to put over this big membership drive is co-operation, but it must be co-operation and from all quarters. Now let's all get behind the meeting. The ladies have gone over the top with their drive. Now it's up to the men.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

There is no change among the leaders in the American League as a result of yesterday's games. The three top teams, Boston Red Sox, New York Yanks and the Cleveland Indians all came up with wins, the first two without the least trouble and the Clevelanders after a tight struggle. With Oscar Judd grabbing off his first victory the Red Sox easily triumphed over the Washington Senators. The final count was 13 to 4 and the Sox hammered three Washington pitchers for a total of 17 hits, with Bobby Doerr getting a homer, inside the ball park and Dom DiMaggio setting the pace with four safe blows. Dominic was not the only member of the clan to have a big afternoon. Brother Joe, the Yankee Clipper, slammed a homer and two triples as the Yanks defeated the Philadelphia Athletics 11 to 5 to remain on even footing with the Red Sox. Beckman and Toronto's Dick Fowler were the victims of the Yank while Chandler was the winning pitcher.

* * * * * *

The tightest battle in the American loop yesterday was the Cleveland-St. Louis tussle in which the Indians were winners by 3 to 2. Just how close this argument was is shown by the fact that the Browns, only a run behind, filled the bases with nobody out in the ninth frame, only to be stopped cold by Vernon Kennedy who pitched himself out of the deep hole in great style. Losing hurler was Bob Muncrief. Another good pitching duel in the junior league yesterday had Bill Dietrich for the White Sox pitted against the veteran Tommy Bridges of the Detroit Tigers. Chicago won the battle 3 to 1 with each team making eight hits.

* * * * * *

Most exciting struggle in the National League saw the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Boston Braves fight through eleven scoreless innings before the Bums finally came through with four runs in the 12th to take the long drawn-out affair 4 to 0. Tobin went the route for the losers while Whit Wyatt started for the Dodgers and was succeeded by Casey who got credit for the win. Pittsburg Pirates with the former Brooklyn battery of Hamlin and Phelps had no trouble in rolling up the Chicago Cubs, winning by 9 to 1. Hamlin held the Chicago club to seven hits and was never in difficulty while Errickson, Eaves and Fleming were no particular mystery to the bothersome Pirates. Coslo, one of the Giants' few pitching stars this season, was just that yesterday, pitching a 3 to 0 shutout against the luckless Phillies who had Hughes doing the firing for them. Both pitchers allowed six hits each but they still pay off in runs and Hughes gave up three of them while Coslo kept the Phils from crossing the counting station. Meanwhile Elmer Riddle, who was a puzzle to National League clubs all last season was absorbing his second defeat of the current campaign at the hands of the St. Louis Cards who won 6 to 1. Harry Gumbert worked against Riddle and held the Reds to seven well spread out hits.

Will Be Popular

Engaging of Willie Spittal, well known professional, for a somewhat curtailed season at the Peterborough Golf and Country Club will be enthusiastically received. Spittal who begins his duties on May 1 and has been engaged for five months made a fine impression last season and was deservedly popular with the members of the club, many of whom declare that they learned much from the experienced Spittal who knows all the answers in the golf quiz. His record as a player and as a coach makes him a valuable asset to any organization. It is a matter for saitsfaction that although the need for economizing in every way possible is realized by the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club the decision has been made that it would be in the best interest of the club to secure the services of Spittal for another season. We imagine the vast majority of the Peterborough club players agree with that decision.

* * * * * *

Prexy Herb Bradburn in a letter to the members of the club has stressed the desirability of securing new members and all old members have been asked to co-operate in a drive for reinforcements. The membership committee is headed by an enthusiastic young golfer Stan Payne. Ald. Bradburn in his bulletin also deals with the vexed question of golf balls. "We have been advised" the letter states, "that 80 per cent of old golf balls can be reclaimed irrespective of make or condition, at a cost of approximately $2.80 a dozen and members are urged to turn in old balls to the professional." At the same time, he adds, the club has been successful in securing a supply of new balls and a limited supply may be obtained by the members.

* * * * *

In appealing to his fellow members to co-operate in the drive to conserve tires and gasoline Mr. Bradburn quotes a statement from George S. Gray, newly appointed transit controller to the following effect: "It becomes the duty of automobile owners to make every mile a useful mile. Cars must be made to last as long as possible. Let neighbors and workers pool their private car resources and travel in groups. Use one car instead of five." That is advice that not only golfers but other sportsmen might well follow under the unusual transportation conditions that exist at present. It only requires a little planning to save a lot of gas and prevent considerable wear and tear upon tires.

Tie Up The Series

That fighting bunch of speedsters from the head of the Great Lakes, the Port Arthur Bearcats tied the Allan Cup series up tight last night by coming from behind to defeat the Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers 4 goals to 3 in the fourth game of the final round. The teams are now on even terms with two wins each and the championship hinges on the fifth game which will be staged in Toronto on Saturday night. The result is a tossup. Flyers had the edge in scoring chances last night but when it was all over the Bearcats had hit the mesh four times as again three for the much-touted Ottawa team and after all these things have to be settled by goals. Flyers took the lead in the second period with a goal by Wood Dumart on a play set up by Bobbie Bauer and the lone counter looked big as the team skated off the ice at the end of the middle session. However the Bearcats came through with a determined rally in the early part of the third period to score three goals inside the first ten minutes and lead 3 to 1.

* * * * * *

Then the courageous Port Arthur team battled like wild men to hold off a blistering counter-attack led by the Kraut line with Milt Schmidt as the spearhead, an attack that saw Schmidt, individual star of the game drive home two goals. Fortunately for the Bearcats they managed to sandwich a counter for themselves between the two Schmidt efforts and that marker ultimately turned out to be the margin of victory. It was a great win for the battlers who represent the west and the fight and determination they showed makes the result of the final game a matter of doubt. Probably the pro moguls are pulling for an Ottawa win. It would look bad if a team featuring one of the greatest lines in modern N.H.L. history failed to carry off the amateur crown. Might start folks wondering if they have not been paying too much for hockey that at its best is nothing more than a glorified senior brand and at its worst is not as good as the amateurs dish out.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Lefty Judd who once beat the C.G.E. team out of an intermediate championship won his first major league pitching victory yesterday on the mound for the Boston Red Sox against Washington Senators....Incidentally Lupien played first base for Boston yesterday in place of Jimmy Foxx....The Reds used 20-year-old Ewell Blackwell, fresh from High School to relieve Bucky Walters yesterday and he stopped the Cards in good style....Toronto Leafs lost a tough one when they were beaten 2 to 1 by Jersey City in a 10-inning affair yesterday....Joe Gordon of the Yanks is now leading the big league hitters with the huge average of .467....Coach Bill Touhey of the Ottawa Flyers used the Kraut line continuously for the last seven minutes of last night's Allan Cup game and they came very close to winning for him....The pros would shudder at the idea of leaving one line out there so long but after all if you are under a full head of steam why not use the best you have when you need goals....Those two-minute changes are more a habit than anything else....Lou Boudreau's Cleveland Indians are just a game back of the leading Red Sox and Yanks.

BEARCATS FLOOR FLYERS FOR SECOND STRAIGHT TO TIE UP SERIES

3rd Period Rally Wins 4 to 3; Flyers Aim Off

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 23. — (CP)—Reasons for completion of Port Arthur Bearcats amazing comeback against Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers in the Allan Cup final are twofold—one for each shade of opinion among the fans.

To supporters of the Bearcats, who won their second straight victory over Flyers here last night, the answer is quite simple: Port Arthur is a better hockey team. To Ottawa fans, the reason is just as obvious: Flyers have lost the deadly marksmanship with which they won 21 straight games before Bearcats took the third game of this best-of-five series.

The actual case is a combination of both. Port Arthur came from behind ot beat Ottawa 4-3 last night and had to be a great team to do it. But in the game, Ottawa shots hit the Port Arthur goalposts the astounding total of five times. Never has the incalculable value of a spilt-inch been demonstrated with such force.

Bobby Bauer hit the post twice last night, Jack Cain twice. Another shot out of a scramble hit the top bar of the goal. Flyers didn't beat Hamilton Majors and Quebec Aces with shots that hit goalposts. Their shooting is definitely off.

Laprade Sets Pace

Cancel one reason off against the other, and Edgar Laprade emerges as the game-winning factor. His leadership in the third period after a fluky goal tied the score was of a nature seldom seem in hockey, amateur or professional. He dominated the game while Port Arthur was building its third-period lead. He dominated the backchecking which held that lead.

Edgar didn't score in the game. He set up the play for Port Arthur's tying goal and fluky or not, on the run of the play Bearcats were certain to tie it up in the first few minutes of the third. He made a great play to his brother Bert for the goals that sent Port Arthur ahead for the first time. Norm Wright got credit for the first goal, which seemed to have been pulled in by Milt Schmidt. Al Kelly and Bill McKenzie scored Ports' other goals.

Schmit played brilliant hockey, despite the one error. He scored Ottawa's two third-period goals, one from Dumart, who had scored in the second from Bobby Bauer. Schmidt was the driving point of Flyers frantic attack late in the third—an attack that had Bearcats hanging on desperately at the finish.

Fifth game of the series will be played here Saturday night and prospects for a ful house are good. The crowd last night was 10,705, and it went wild at Ports' blazing third-period offensive. Ottawa won tne first game of the series, 7-4, the second 8-7. Ports took the third 3-1.

Some Sport Shorts From Britain

LONDON, April 23.— (CP).—Vic Oliver, actor son-in-law of Prime Minister Churchil, must be the most unusual race horse owner in the Empire. He neither wagers nor sees his horses run.

"Horses are my hobby," he says. "I don't believe in betting and I've been unable to see my string run because I've been in shows continuously for more than three years in London. There have been no afternoon to spare."

Probably the hardest hit by war casualties of all British Rugby football teams is the Bedford club. Of the backs who played in the club's last match before the war, four have been killed on active service, another is a prisoner of war in Italy and a sixth suffered such injuries in a plane crash he never will play again.

Pirates Shift Elliott To 3rd Whips Cubs 9 to 1

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

The prize experiment of the year in the major leagues may turn out to be the transfer of Irving Elliott from the outfield to third base by Pittsbugh Pirates.

Manager Frank Frisch is a fellow who shuffles his lineups almost every day "just for luck." But the shift that brought the Frisco Kid in from the outfield was one born of necessity.

Last winter Lee (Jeep) Handley was in an automobile accident and apparently suffered more seriously than scratches. But when he reported at training camp in California he suddenly discovered his arm was "dead."

Onkel Franz canvassed his squad and came upon the 25-year-old Elliott, who six years ago, when he was breaking into organized ball, played part time third base for Savannah in the South Atlantic League.

Observers remained skeptical on Elliott until the season actually was under way. Since then he has made everybody sit up and take notice. In nine games he has hit three home runs. to lead the league, and two triples, to tie for the lead.

His batting average is a gaudy .342 and he has knocked in eight runs. Moreover his fielding and throwing have bordered on the sensational after a nervous debut when his throwing was erratic.

Yesterday he contributed a two-run homer to Pittsburgh's 9-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs. In beating the Cubs the Pirates received seven-hit pitching by Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin, the former Dodger star.

Braves Humbled 4-0

However, Brooklyn Dodgers retained their grip on the National League by beating Boston Braves 4-0 in 12 innings. Whitlow Wyatt made his first start of the season after only seven innings of exhibition work. He kept the Braves scoreless for nine innings although touched for 10 hits. Then Hugh Casey kept them hitless and spotless the rest of the way.

St. Louis Cardinals riddled Cincinnati's Elmer Riddle with 11 hits in seven stanzas and triumphed 6-1 on the seven-hit hurling of Harry Gumbert, who allowed no runs till the ninth.

Rookie Dave Koslo, a southpaw, shut out the Phils 3-0 for New York Giants with six-hit pitching.

The American League saw some more big hitting. New York Yankees collected 13 safeties including a home run and two triples by Joe DiMaggio, to overpower Philadelphia Athletics 11-5 and Boston Red Sox rolled up 17 hits in walloping Washington Senators 13-4.

Cleveland Indians captured their fourth straight victory 3-2 from St. Louis Browns, who were held to five safeties by their former teammate, Vernon Kennedy, and Chicago White Sox muzzled Detroit Tigers 3-1 with Don Kolloway getting a double and two singles to figure in all Chicago's scoring.

Eveready Squad Trundles 3731

TORONTO, April 23.— Evereadys closed in on the pace set by A. R. Clarke & Company as the full shift of thirty-two teams swung into action in the third night of the Canadian Bowling Association tournament at the Olympia-Gerrard Club last night.

Evereadys turned in a total of 3,731 to move into second place just 19 points behind the leaders, while Eaton's Factory team pushed its way into fourth place behind the Dunlop Tire and Rubber squad.

Turner and Godwin maintained their lead at the top of the doubles parade with a 30-point margin.

H. Donaldson climbed into first place in the singles section with Buck Whally of Roselands in next spot, 16 points behind. Ed. Reany of Roselands took over the grand aggregate total with 2,248.

Rise In Defence Of Soccer Stars In Different War Services

By ALAN NICHOLSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 23.—(CP)—Managements of professional football clubs throughout England rose as a body in protest against the suggestion of a London sports writer that salaried players have not shown "any special patriotism" and that the "overwhelming majority are on non-combatant service."

The article was by Frank Carruthers in the Daily Mail. It noted a ban had been placed on service men travelling during the Easter period and said "I have no sympathy with clube who squeal because their players will be absent."

"They are in anti-aircraft batteries on searchlights, Royal Air Force stations, in the army, navy and police, and in hundreds of places where they have been and are exposed to danger. It is not their fault if they remain in this country while on duty and many professionals already have lost their lives on active service."

S. F. Rous, league secretary, charged the "inference in the suggestion cannot be substantiated by facts." Manager C. Paynter of the West Ham club said 28 of his players, both professional and amateur, joined the territorial army a few months prior to the outbreak of war. "During the heavy raids our lads went through hellish experiences in the course of duty," he added. "There were no soft jobs for them and they didn't want them."

Charlton Manager James Seed, member of the Royal Observer Corps said most of his players also joined the services prior to war's start and "faced all the perils of the severe raids, as police, etc." The Chelsea management said it had 14 players in the army, five in the R.A.F., two in the police and one in the navy, and that many of these were volunteers. At least two others are engaged in war work. Three Arsenal gunner officials said, had been on an expedition to Bruneval in Commandos; two others and the club trainer hold R.A.F. commissions and another is an army captain. Several Blackpool players are in the R.A.F.

Carruthers' article recalled that Col. W. Parkinson, chairman of the Blackpool Club, had protested to the Under-Secretary of State for Air against the ban in declaring that "it penalized those clubs which have been patriotic and whose players have entered the services." Blackpool players in the R.A.F. were not allowed to travel to Manchester for a Cup Tie match during the Easter week-end. Blackpool then withdrew from the competition, forfeiting the home-and-home series to Manchester.

"I am not aware that the professional footballer has shown any special patriotism," Carruthers wrote. "The overwhelming majority are on non-combatant service. Why should a few footballers be allowed leave and thousands of men be compelled to spend the holidays in their camps?"

New Frick Idea Fizzle As Ump 'Saver'

WINNIPEG, April 23 — (CP). — Coach Reg. Threfall expressed confidence today that his St. Andrews quintet will take the measure of Victoria Dominoes, former Dominion men's basketball champions, when they tangle in the final game of a best-of-three Western final here tonight.

After the Andies defeated the highly-touted British Columbians 43-39 last night, their coach, famed for his master-minding in football as head of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, had this to say:

"My boys fought well. They were more sure of thmselves when things got tough . . . but don't underrate the great Victoria club."

Manager Dave Nicol of the Dominoes was critical of the officiating of Doug Whittle and Don Kerr, both of Winnipeg. He said that his players were being called in the first half while the Winnipeg men were being passed up.

While Dominoes capitalized on almost every free throw Monday, they only made seven in 17 tries last night. Leading 21-15 at half time, the Manitobans fought off Dominoes' rally and at the three-quarter mark the held a 34-27 advantage.

Jack Tomes of Winnipeg was the high scorer with 12 points while Baker and Art Chapman of Dominoes each got 10.

Four Colts Out In Blue Grass

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 23.—(AP)—Although Keeneland's customers were offered an abbreviated field of four colts today in the Blue Grass Stakes, the track's premier Kentucky Derby test, they were looking forward to an interesting duel between the two top contenders.

Named for the $10,000 added mile on a furlong event, the feature of Keeneland's closing day, were Col. E. R. Bradley's Bless Me, Hal Price Headley's Equinox, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Devil Diver and Shut Out.

Of this quartet of Derby hopefuls Bless Me and Devil Diver were getting the big eye. Colonel Bradley's only Derby nominee this year handed in a good performance last week in the only previous outing at Keeneland when he was fourth to Sun Again, Whirlaway and Harvard Square in a six-furlong race.

That event, however, couldn't be called an adequate sample of his capabilities and the fans are eager to see his showing in a longer race.

Devil Diver which in his previous outing at Keeneland bested Whirlaway and Sun Again over six furlongs kicked up more than a little excitement the other day by working a mile in 1:38.

TORONTO, April 23 — (CP). — General attitude of professional athletes toward strenuous sport in the off-season is strictly one of lofty detachment, if not downright revulsion. Among the exceptions have been Bucko McDonald of Toronto's Hockey Leafs and Pat Egan of Brooklyn Americans.

Bucko's active participation in Ontario lacrosse—the game that led him to professional hockey—was terminated recently but he continues as a hard-running referee. Word from Vancouver is that Egan will try for a spot in British Columbia lacrosse with Norvans. Pat was with Nelson in 1936 campaigning.

The Colville brothers, Mac and Neil, dabble in amateur baseball around Edmonton in New York Rangers' dormant months. Gord Drillon of Leafs is a good softball pitcher. Many others are fair golfers, but none can approach McDonald and Egan in the strenuous nature of their off-season choices for exercise.

The Expert Says

Jim (London Free Press) Burns, on attempts to pick a hero and a goat for the Detroit-Toronto Stanley Cup final: "Hap Day would make a small hero for benching his veterans in favor of youngsters and Jack Adams a lovely smelly goat for his fist-swinging outburst against referee Mel Harwood."

Incidentally

Ralph Allan, former sports columnist with the Winnipeg Tribune and Toronto Globe and Mail, is a sergeant in the 30th Battery, R.C.A. His promotions came fast. Almost before his pals had stopped arguing about whether he would rate a salute as a bombadier, after being plain Gunner Allan for three months, he turned up with three stripes.

Pat Aitken, C.A.H.A. representative from Nelson, B.C., played junior hockey with Calgary Canadiens before moving to the professional Pacific Coast League and later to Buffalo Bisons in the (new) American League. Sweeney Schriner, then a green kid, was only a sub on the Canadians the season Aitken played. Lorne Carr was on the same team.

Frank Sargent, the new C.A.H.A. president, played lacrosse in Hamilton as a youth on the same team as Hap Day, Toronto Leafs' coach.

Chiefs Bolster Lead-Lace Red Wings 3-2

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse Chiefs, who lined up with the Cincinnati Reds after finishing sixth in the International League last year, are setting a sparkling example for their stumbling major league relatives at the end of the first week of the 1942 season.

The Chiefs strengthened their grip on first place yesterday by defeating Rochester Red Wings 3-2. The new blood supplied by Cincinnati paid dividends as Charles (Red) Barrett set down the Red Wings with five hits.

Eddie Lukon, who also came from the Reds, provided the punch that won the game when he hit a home run in the eighth inning.

Bill Johnson and Henry Majeski hit home runs the latter with two on, but it was George Stirnweiss' eighth-inning double, scoring Larry Guay, that gave Newark Bears an 8-7 triumph over Montreal Royals.

Jersey City Giants defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1 in a tight 10-inning game, and replaced Rochester in second place with the help of Syracuse's defeat of the Red Wings.

Johnny Wittig outlasted three Toronto pitchers in turning in his second victory of the year. Hugh Poland scored the winning run on Sid Gordon's long fly to left field with Jim Davis, third of the Maple Leaf hurlers, being charged with the loss.

Baltimore Orioles came up with five runs in the eighth inning to defeat the last-place Buffalo Bisons 7-3.

Germans Looting France Systematically

LONDON, April 22—(CP).—The economic spoilation of France was carried out in two stages. The first was taken up with measures for the maintenance of German armed forces, Nazi civilian personnel and police. The second was occupied with the export of all classes of merchandise to Germany.

The German authorities bought on credit only when they had to, otherwise, they merely requisitioned what they wanted.

After the start of the war in Russia, the size of the occupying forces decreased. For nearly a year before, some 60 Nazi divisions had been based in occupied France. The cost to the people of France was 400,000,000 francs daily, reduced after a time to 300,000,000.

Reason for the reduction was that there were more francs than goods and services to pay for and the 100,000,00 involved in the cut not only was no good to the Nazis but was dangerously inflationary.

Luxury For Troops.

The Germans indulged in an orgy of domestic requisitioning to provide comforts and even luxuries for their troops. For months, foraging parties made house-to-house inspections on the pretext of looking for hidden arms, deserters and former servicemen.

The entire contents of homes abandoned by refugees were taken to adorn the quarters of Nazi officers or the messes of their regiments.

There were minor impositions on the French people such as house-to-house collections of sheets and blankets. Generally, a pair of sheets, two pillows and as many blankets as could be obtained were requisitioned from every family.

Housewives failing to produce the articles within a specified time subsequently had to hand over four pairs of sheets, four pillows and all their blankets but one for every person in the house.

In some cases, even the Nazis' regular requisitioning organizations were outdone by some of the more grasping local military commanders, most of whom had a press for printing reichmark credit notes in whatever quantities were needed.

Nazi lorries after visiting some French townships came away crammed with merchandise taken from shops and paid for with credit notes on which the ink was barely dry.

House will take up second reading of the vocational training and veterans land bills so that they can be referred to special committees for study at once.

Favors Fatigues.

An old soldier himself, Col. Ralston expressed a little disappointment that some old-time practices in the army have been forced out of use by the tempo of modern war and the need for intensified training.

He referred particularly to fatigue duties and the training of men in complete units in their own home localities. He contended that fatigues, the odd jobs of peeling potatoes, scrubbing and cleaning around camps and barracks, have a definite value in training.

In the modern training centre, however, the men were kept so busy on actual training, running through courses of lectures and drills, hour after hour that there was barely time to get them through the syllabus without making them do odd jobs around the centre.

Col. Ralston said that the system followed in the first Great War of training battalions as such had the advantage of building up an esprit de corps, particularly when the battalions were in their home areas.

He liked it but he had to agree with the training experts that the training centre method now being followed is the only one for present conditions. Under it the men are trained in the permanent centres, in classes gathered from all parts of the country and not by units. When their training is completed they go to their units.

Wants Units Kept Near Home

The minister made his comments on the training centre method in answer to T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) who asked if Toronto battalions could not be quartered in the buildings of the Canadian National Exhibition, all of which are to be taken over by the government. Mr. Church objected to soldiers from Toronto being dispersed all across the country, necessitating payment of high railway fares to visit their homes and criticized Camp Borden as too cold in winter and too hot in summer.

Col. Ralston said he was sorry he could not give Mr. Church much assurance on the point. The army proposed to use the Exhibition Grounds as a district depot, something which was badly needed in military district No. 2. The Air Force had a considerable part of the Exhibition buildings and the Navy proposed to carry on a good deal of training on the waterfront there.

More Land for Borden

Camp Borden, he said, was an old-fashioned camp and the government is acquiring more land there. It was very suitable for tank training and good results had been obtained there.

"I am very much enthused about the west coast militia rangers," the national defence minister said.

The term "guerilla" was not a correct one to apply to these troops. Their training would be much the same as that given "commando" troops.

The Rangers now were being asked to furnish their own rifles but as soon as sufficient arms were available it was hoped to provide them with army rifles and possibly with some machine guns.

Col. Ralston told the house that seniority was not an important factor in the promotion of officers to high commands. The choices for the joint commands on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and in Newfoundland went to the officers who happened to be senior among those on the ground but that was because they were considered the best men available.

He referred to Maj.-Gen. R. O. Alexander, commander in chief on the Pacific, Maj.-Gen. W. H. P. Elkins, on the Atlantic Coast, and Maj.-Gen. L. F. Paige in Newfoundland. He said he had every reason to believe the selections would be satisfactory.

"I do not regard seniority as being a governing factor in connection with appointments to commands," the minister said.

The department had followed the practice of giving commands to men with overseas experience in the present war as far as possible. At least two out of three of the brigade commanders appointed to divisions in Canada were men with overseas experience.

"We are trying to keep an integration between the activities in England and the experience gained there and the training and operational activities here," said Col. Ralston.

"I am really gratified that we have been able to make such an exchange as we have effected. I consider that our friends in England did us a good turn when they found it possible to accede to our request to send 1,000 or more officers and men here to assist in connection with training this summer."

Night Raiders

near the shore and moved seaward. In a flash the sky was filled with green stripes of tracer bullets and other colored lights. Gunfire started hammering from shore batteries and the two German trawlers which had spotted our ships.

I flopped to the bridge deck and ground my nose against the boards, certain that each shell and machine gun bullet was tagged with my name. I soon recovered from the initial shock, however, and starting watching the show through an opening in the bridge plating.

One Sentry Challenges.

The short party meanwhile landed apparently unobserved until some of its members encountered a solitary German sentry. "Halten," the German called, just once. Tommy-gun slugs silenced him quickly.

The row they created tipped the enemy off and spasmodic machine-gun fire swept along the beach. It was still too dark for accurate fire, though, and most of the German stuff was too high to do any harm.

The men advanced inland along an 800-yard front cutting communications so that the Nazis could not signal inland for help. They tried firing Very lights into the air. Whether their friends inland saw them or not, they did not get help to the shore in the two hours our men were on land.

There was little to be seen from where we steamed around. We could hear the firing ashore, though.

After they had finished their job the commandos came back—with all their arms. They had suffered some light casualties and completely bewildered the enemy.

As one patrol leader said: "The pillboxes hadn't the foggiest idea where we were and what we were doing." Some of them probably did have a fair idea of what they were doing, however, as the commandos shot them up.

The men and their commander, the 30-year-old Lord Lovat, were surprised by the feebleness of the reception.

The stiffest opposition was encountered by the Navy, but its losses were slight considering the scope of the operation.

Terrifying Shore Fire

From the bridge of one vessel I watched the operations. Little could be discerned of what was going on ashore in the early morning darkness, but the fire from Nazi coastal batteries and patrol boats was terrifying indeed to one uninitiated in this type of surprise action.

Gradually the black-faced Britons drove back the Germans opposing them.

From my shipboard vantage point the only way of telling that the Britons were advancing was from the silencing of Nazi machine-gun posts as the Britons moved forward, armed with every type of weapon from Tommy gun to sheath knife, and then withdrew after two hours ashore.

Casualties were very light, said the official communique.

This foray was just the sort of raid for which selected men from many Canadian units have been training. Some of the British soldiers who took part are helping to school Dominion soldiers in these hit-and-run tactics at commando centres in Britain.

"They are among the keenest men we have ever had on our courses and are just itching to come with us on one of these shows," said an officer who spent some time with the Canadians.

No weakling himself, he described the Canadians as tough and told this story of a young lieutenant from Saint John, N.B., to prove the Canadians' ruggedness.

Eight Lives Left

During the lieutenant's training a live hand grenade due to explode in about three seconds' time struck the New Brunswick youth on the head, bounced over a high stone fence and blew up with a terrific blast. Had it not gone over the fence the Canadian would have been killed for certain, but he merely grinned, shook his head and said, "Well I guess I've only eight lives left now."

I joined the Commandos several days before the raid. A combination washroom and ammunition dump was my sleeping quarters. Bumpy tick on a broken spring stretched across two benches was my bed. Boxes of bombs and rows of Molotov cocktails lined one wall of the room. Another Molotov served as a wash basin.

Despite the discomforts, which increased soon after my arrival when someone sent a burst of Bren-gun fire through the hot water system, the British never lost their high spirits and sense of humor.

Lord Lovat, highland-bonnetted raid leader who looks every inch a gay, hard-fighting soldier, slept and ate with the men. There were no parades or drills. The time passed quickly, with tale spinning and sleeping the chief occupation. Someone had a pack of cards and a squeaky gramophone provided orchestral background for sing-songs.

Preparations for the raid itself kept the men busy. Rifles constantly were being greased and knives honed. Identification tabs were removed from clothing and equipment, and the fire in a corner of the barracks square was heaped high with letters, papers and name patches which might reveal information to the enemy.

No Identification Marks

A burly sergeant de-identified his troops personally, cutting off tabs with a huge sheath knife. When he came to a couple of privates with tatooo marks on their chests, he almost convinced them he was going to carve out his pound of flesh, but warned them they had better not be taken prisoner or else.

The attack plan was reviewed again and again until every man and officer knew by memory just what he was to do. Maps, photographs, and even a model of objectives in the area proved just how careful and detailed are preparations even for the smallest raids.

Security was 100 per cent for this show. For the trip from London to the place where I joined the commandos, I became a second lieutenant of the British Army, doffing the green and black correspondent's shoulder patches for shiny gold pips.

I arrived at my destination at 4 p.m. and until 11 p.m., when I was driven to the barracks, I was kept under guard in a cosy cottage beside a crystal-clear stream, with the only reading material a few outdated picture magazines, a copy of Who's Who and the Police Almanac.

of St. George, the Patron Saint of England, and the 24th anniversary of the British naval raids which temporarily blocked the Zeebrugge entrance of the Bruges Canal to Kaiser Wilhelm's Flanders submarine flotilla in the First Great War.

Different Story To-day.

Newspapers stressed the commando raid on Boulogne and carried many pictures of St. George's legendary fight with a dragon. A year ago Britain was being attacked night after night by powerful German squadrons; Plymouth and London were hard hit.

The Daily Express commented editorially on the change.

"Not so long ago we gazed with anxiety at the French coast, so near and so bristling with threatening German invaders. Now we look at the same coast and brandish our fists. We are full of the spirit of attack instead of defence."

There were traditional services by the Royal Society of St. George.

"This is going to be a St. George year," said the man in the pub, grinning over his heavily-taxed beer.

The attack of two British naval squadrons on the Zeebrugge and Ostend entrances of the Bruges Canal the night of April 22-23, 1918, was a forerunner of the commando raids of 1942.

Naval and landing parties commanded by Vice-Admiral Roger Keyes, head of the Dover Patrol then and head of the commandos for a time in the second great war, struck simultaneously at the U-boat haven. The cruisers Intrepid and Iphigenia and the submarine C-3 were manoeuvred in, sunk and blown up at the Zeebrugge end.

The combination of a smoke screen that blew back upon the British forces and shifting of a channel buoy thwarted the Ostend effort and the two vessels assigned for destruction there ran aground three-quarters of a mile short of their foal. The crews, however, tried again 17 nights later and sank the cruiser Vindictive at the Ostend entrance.

Both U-boat operations and German morale were affected.

Sun Fined $300

VANCOUVER, April 23—(CP).—The Sun Publishing Company, Limited, to-day was fined $300 by Police Magistrate H. S. Wood on a charge laid under Section 16 of the Defence of Canada Regulations to which it had pleaded guilty Monday.

The charge was laid in connection with the recent publication by the Vancouver Sun of an article dealing with the Pacific coast defence. Five other similar charges under the Defence of Canada Regulations were withdrawn when the guilty plea was entered to the first.

130 Township School Areas Replace 666 Rural Sections

The number of township school areas in Ontario at the end of last year had increased to 130, involving the dissolution of 666 school sections, Reeve P. J. Mather of Otonabee told a reporter today. As chairman of the committee on education of the county council he attended the recent convention of the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto.

Prior to 1938 only fifteen township school areas or boards were formed in the province. They were substituted for 83 school sections. In the years 1938, 1939, 1940 and 1941 the number of additional school areas established was, respectively, 15, 43, 26 and 31, representing 583 school sections.

The most important area of unity in Peterborough county is in Otonabee township whose organized group is throughly established.

As a preliminary to organization of such an area, the council of a township may pass a by-law on or before the first day of July in any year, setting apart the whole or any part of the township as a township school area. This bylaw requires the approval of the Minister of Education before it is finally passed, and it takes effect on December 25th of the same year.

Township school area trustees are not paid for their services, but the board may pay to each trustee a mileage allowance not exceeding seven cents each mile necessarily travelled by him in going to the meetings of the board from his home and returning to it, providing that this allowance is not paid for more than eight meetings in any year.

The report on school areas which Reeve Mather heard at the convention affirmed that they are now found in all parts of the province and that public opinion has grown more favorable to the larger unit for rural school administration.

The Act provides for the adjustment of all rights and claims between the school sections of the township when amalgamation takes place, and when the by-law goes into effect all school properties and other assets become vested in the new board which also assumes all liabilities. The local school inspector is usually the referee appointed by the Minister to value, adjust and determine all rights and claims. His report is made to the Minister within three months of the passing of the bylaw and is subject to the Minister's approval for final effect.

Advantages of Union

Some of the advantages of the larger school area include a more equal school privilege for each rural pupil and more equitable distribution of school costs. The raising of the level of the unsatisfactory schools in the community to the level of the best.

Saving in expenditure for text books, library books, school supplies, etc., by purchasing in larger quantities at wholesale costs . . . More local interest in the needs of the schools and more efficient school boards meeting regularly to discuss ways and means of improving the schools . . . Less local jealousy and prejudice in school matters . . . The possibility for the better placement of teachers, a more healthy competition among rural teachers of the same area, closer association of rural teachers in helpful groups . . . more frequent joint conferences of teachers and trustees.

Clean out the Poisons

The liver and kidneys are so closely associated in their work of filtering poisons from the blood stream that both are likely to become deranged at the same time.

Hence the advantage of using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which, by reason of the bile salts they contain, increase the flow of bile from the liver and arouse the action of the bowels. By their diuretic influence they help to increase the quantity of liquids and solids for the kidneys to act upon and so enable these organs to purify the blood of disease laden poisons.

To get quick results use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills—the popular family regulator.

WAR does a PINCERS MOVEMENT on Telephones

ON the one hand, demand for new telephone installations — especially in residences — has been greater than ever before. On the other, the materials which go into telephone equipment and the equipment itself have both been largely diverted to military and emergency use. Result: a serious shortage of facilities to take care of civilian requirements—of wire, cable, switchboards, instruments. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has charged us with the responsibility of rigidly restricting telephone installations. We have no alternative. From now on, new installations can be made only where they can be justified in the light of the war emergency and to the extent that facilities are available.

In appealing for your cooperation, we urge that you ask for a telephone only where such recognized essential service is involved. And to all telephone users, we again stress the need for consistent practice of "Wartime Telephone Tactics"—your contribution to keeping telephone lines clear for urgent war business.

WARTIME TELEPHONE TACTICS

- BE SURE you have the right number, consult the directory.
- SPEAK DISTINCTLY, directly into the mouthpiece.
- ANSWER PROMPTLY when the bell rings.
- BE BRIEF. Clear your line for the next call.
- USE OFF-PEAK hours for Long Distance calls: before 9.30 a.m., 1-2 p.m., 5-7 p.m., after 9 p.m.

These things may look trifling, but on 6,500,000 daily telephone calls, they are very important.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

REMINDER TO EMPLOYEES

Some of Peterborough's employers have been tardy in returing their employee registration books to the Unemployment Insurance Commission, G. K. Fraser, M.P., told the Examiner today, quoting information from Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor. The Commission is conducting a registration of workers for the most effective mobilization of manpower. "At the same time Insurance books for the last fiscal year must be returned to local Employment and Claims offices in order that new books may be issued. It was said that employers owe it to their workers to attend to this duty at once.

ELEMENTS OF HAPPINESS

First, health, then a satisfactory position, love and hope, shake well together and let them jell and they should turn out happiness, says M. S. Rukeyser, a financial writer after browsing through a book by Lajos Egri on "How to Write a Play." Health in itself is not enough; nor a job that provides a comfortable living. Warm human affection is a requisite, and finally the bright horizon of hope, probably always for something better.

The young officer is Pilot Officer Frank O'Heron, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Heron, Mark street, and the coastgardsman is his first cousin, Apprentice Seaman Ed Lightbody of the U.S. Coastguard Reserve now on active service. He is stationed at an east coast town in Rhode Island.

CATCHING PERCH

Perhaps the game warden would not exactly approve of this but these things hapen. Two men are reported to have motored to a point on the Trent River south of Hastings on Wednesday and using a small dip net secured a quantity of perch. They picked out the large ones tossed the others back and plan a big fish dinner today. The perch are running in the Trent and the Otonabee but how to catch them is a poser for the regulations in this county do not permit fishing of any kind until May 1.

CALLING FOR BIDS

Eight contracts have been invited to submit prices on the staff house for single men, which Wartime Housing Ltd. plans to have built on the west side of Monaghan rd. just north of the Waddell property. Bids must be in by April 30 and it is understood that the only Peterborough bidder is the Eastwood Construction Co. Ltd.

WAR INTERFERED

It is reported from the Collegiate students this week that the new manpower mobilization act hit one of their number rather hard. In Special Commercial there were about 40 girls, and one boy, and the boy was all set to take a job when the new ruling came through and as he was over 18, he could not enter a restricted occupation. He can enlist, go on a farm, into a food industry or into a war industry, but some one else less capable of handling a gun must do the office work.

WE NEED CITIZEN-POLICE

A reporter spotting a youth on a new job, in the restricted category, asked the boy how it was he could take the job, when he was over 18. "I told the boss I was 17 when I applied." Even then the "boss" could not have hired the boy without a permit but he did, and under the act this boy and the employer are both liable on conviction to fines of $500 or more. A restricted category means an unessential industry.

MILK FOR BRITAIN

Three donations for the Milk for Britain fund are reported today by J. A. Macdonald the treasurer. Program Calls For $30,000 For Red Cross

A community appeal for $60,000 for the Peterborough Red Cross and Community Chest will be launched between May 11 and May 22, according to an announcement from the local War Services committee on Thursday.

The program calls for $30.000 for the Peterborough Red Cross and $30,000 for the Community Fund. Agencies participating in the Community Fund are the Navy League, National Institute for the Blind, Children's Aid Society, St. Vincent's Orphanage, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Salvation Army and Victorian Order of Nurses. The monies to go to the Salvation Army and the Y.M.C.A. are for their local war work, as they participate in the Government appropriations from canteen revenues for the national war work.

The War Finance Committee has rented the offices formerly used by the Dept. of Agriculture on George street, opposite the old Grand Opera House, and R. E. Layfield has already taken over this place, using it as office for his work in War Savings Stamps and Certificates.

The campaign committee is as follows: Honorary chairman, C. A. Salmonsen; chairman, Mayor James Hamilton; vice-chairman, Ross L. Dobbin; chairman of Special Names, Gordon S. Matthews; Industrial Division, Ian F. McRae; Retail Division, W. C. Hughes; Ladies' Division, Mrs. Paige Rowell; Publicity, Harold L. Garner; Statistics, W. A. Richardson.

C. A. Salmonsen has been named honorary chairman in tribute for his fine work while he was in the city, and in view of the fact that he is expected to visit the city during May.

Fire Destroys Lovesick Lake Cottage

Fire destroyed a large furnished cottage on the east shore of Lovesick Lake, about a quarter of a mile from the Lovesick Lock at dusk on Wednesday evening.

The cottage was owned by John Millage of Lakefield, and Mr. and Mrs. Millage had gone up to the property on Monday to prepare the cottage for the season. Mr. Millage had raked and burned some rubbish, and had extinguished the fire, but a breeze sprang up, and in some manner the roof took fire, and it spread fast, destroying the cottage and contents. Loss is estimated at $1500.

Lieut. G. Duffus Sails For India

"My next address will be Bombay, India," Lieutenant Gerald Duffus, wrote on March 19th on the eve of his departure from England, in a letter which his father, Senator Duffus, received recently.

"We did not have any word from him, except three brief cables, between December 6 and the middle of March," Senator Duffus remarked this morning. "He worked his way on a freighter in a convoy to England, and not long after his arrival there he settled down to work on the course for his commission in the Ordnance Corps of the Indian Army. That explained his long suspension of correspondence. In his letter he said he had the satisfaction of being one of four candidates who rated at the top in the final standing for commissions."

Senator Duffus said his son "must have plugged hard through the winter months to get up his required work, and his mother and I are delighted with his success."

"I have no idea where Gerald will go in India. His letter simply said that he was leaving for Bombay, and we all know that India has become in the last month or two an exceedingly important centre of British plans and hopes."

Guilty Of Parading As Police Officer

Pleading guilty in police court this morning to representing himself as a police officer Edward Pinch was allowed to go on suspended sentence, after Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., had suggested that such a course would meet the ends of justce.

John A. Bradshaw who appeared for Pinch said that the accused had visited one house and had told the inmates that he was a police officer.

"Did he call at more than one house?" asked Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

"No, just at one place," replied Pinch, "and I just made inquiries about one particular person."

Cattle Supply Ample To Fill Market

Fred A. Eason of Otonabee attended the conference in Toronto Wednesday of representatives of the Federation of Agriculture and the Ontario Cattle Breeders' Association with Hon. J. G. Taggart, Food Administrator of the Wartime Prices and Control Board, regarding maintenance of the quota of cattle for export to the United States.

The brief presented by the producers contended that the supply of cattle has been, "and apparently will be ample to supply our home market and at the same time fill, or nearly fill, the quota for export."

Lower marketings of beef cattle in recent weeks were alleged to be the result "of actions taken by parties other than the Canadian cattle producer."

Quotations from the brief submitted to Hon. Mr. Taggart follow:

Adjust Ceiling

"If ceiling prices on beef cannot be maintained, under the present competitive prices and market conditions for cattle, ways and means should be found at the expense of the public as a whole for such maintenance, or the ceiling price on beef should be adjusted so that Canadian slaughterers may compete on the basis of competitive markets.

"The establishment of ceiling prices on beef occurred at a time of the year when the supplies of cattle are greatest, and cost of production and prices usually lowest.

"Unless something is done, from where will come the supply of beef during the winter and spring months of 1943 and 1944" asked the brief.

The memorandum also suggested a flexible ceiling to take care of varying seasonal costs and "doubtless" increasing farmers' production cots.

It said Ontario conditions should not be ignored as Ontario supplies the home market with the greatest tonnage of beef; that beef cattle prices should bear a reasonable relationship of the prices of other farm products—hogs, dairy products, eggs, cash crops; that Ontario supplies the market with beef in the most orderly manner.

The brief resented recent press comment in some quarters that "implies that Canadian farmers have deliberately withheld cattle from stockyards and packing plants, thus creating a shortage of beef, and that home market supplies are being shipped to U.S. markets at higher prices."

It reports that inspected slaughterings of cattle in Canada were: 1941, 999,130 head; 1940, 883,883 head; 1942 (14 weeks), 260,771 head; 1941 (14 weeks), 220,812 head.

Exports to U.S.

Beef cattle exported to the U.S. to April 9 1942, were 58,302 head, while during the same period in 1941 only 26,506 head were exported to United States.

Comparative figures for export of dairy cattle to U.S. are 4,442 in 1942 and 3,500 in 1941; calves total 13,643 in 1942 and 12,232 in 1941.

The memorandum declared that the Wartime Prices and Trade oard already had recognized some of the beef cattle producers' suggestions in its action regarding the winter feeding of lambs and the practise followed by the board relative to prices of onions and potatoes.

The brief is signed by Burton B. Warnica, president, and L. E. O'Neill, secretary, Ontario Cattle Breeder' Association and by H. H. Hannam, president, Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

Training Given Soldiers Is Well Planned

From "bending buckles" to "push-ups" in six easy lessons, with a few imitations of windmills and men hurling the javelin — that's what P.T. seems at the beginning, and every man treats it as a bit of a joke. Yet really it's good fun even if it has a serious purpose and at the end of every period there is a shower and a plunge into the Y pool, and every few days basketball in the gym or softball on the parade ground.

It's not from bending buckles to push-ups in six days but from office worker to first-class fighter in six months, that is the real idea and this is what every recruit wants. Captain Jim Morley, fresh from training in Brockville and Three Rivers, who directs this training for the officers and senior N.C.O.'s of the Rangers, explained the methods and purposes of the course. Work starts so gradually that there is scarcely a stiff muscle—at first only fifteen minutes a day of jerks carefully planned to give balanced development and to avoid boredom. Then the time increases to an hour and the movements are more strenuous, route marches grow longer, equipment becomes heavier and respirators are worn, sports take up a full part of every day, rifle drill and really strenuous bayonet fighting toughen every man until he is fit for all-night marches over rough country with complete equipment. This program is carefully planned in every detail; food, for example, is always well-balanced and gradually increased in energy content to fit the expansion of P.T., drill and battle manoeuvres. It has proved most successful in training hundreds of thousands of men in the British and Canadian armies. It will be equally successful with the Peterborough men who join the Prince of Wales Rangers.

Recruiting Continues.

Recruiting continued moderately Wednesday and today at the Armories. In Part II Orders six men were added to strength and several promotions were made. Of the many men boarded during the early part of the week, it is expected that more will be added to strength after they have had a few days in which to wind up their private affairs.

Andy Jackson, the popular Regimental Sergeant-Major of the Rangers, leaves tomorrow for Long Branch Small Arms Training School for a four-weeks' course in platoon weapon training. He has announced his intention of visiting every sergeants' mess in the Toronto area, especially those "foreign" ones with a Scottish background, and to introduce all the improvements he sees into the Rangers' Mess. During his absence, C.S.M. George Weir will be acting R.S.M.

LONDON, April 23—(CP).—Field Marshal Gerd Von Runstedt, commander of German forces in occupied France, was reported today from Stockholm to have held important military discussions in the Netherlands, presumably mapping defence measures to be taken in case of an Allied invasion of France.

Gift For Fund Honors Memory Of J. J. Turner

April 23 is St. George's Day, the patron said of England, and since tradition gives the story that St. George was the defender of the weak, there would seem every reason why this day above all in the calendar should be celebrated in these times for all that it symbolizes, and probably no more appropriate way could be found to do so, than by giving aid to those who suffer from air raids in Britain, not only for the practical help it gives them, but also as a tribute to the splendid courage they have displayed through it all.

During his life-time, the late J. J. Turner rarely missed a St. George's Day celebration, being a real patriot of the first order, and this undoubtedly led him to the public service which he rendered in abundance in this, the city in which he lived, and so it would seem very much in order that in today's list for the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, tribute should be given to his memory by a contribution, every cent of which will go on its mission of mercy to assist the distressed in England, just as much as what tradition tells us St. George did in the days long past.

To make it still more appropriate, this contribution comes from those amongst whom he labored during his life-time, and therefore from those who knew him best. A worthy tribute from them to a worthy man, in whose name goodness will go to those afflicted through the misfortune brought about by as ruthless a dragon as ever lived on this earth.

Then, as if to add further significance to this day, the Churchill Club, a Patriotic group formed in the city to pay tribute to Prime Minister Winston Churchill, with R. L. Dobbin as chairman, makes its 18th contribution in an amount of $27 to specially mark the day itself, in which Lakefield division shares to extent of $6 to carry succor to the people of Britain. This brings the total they have given to the fund up to $978.10, and this particular donation comes in as the result of memberships secured by Mrs. J. G. Wharry, Harold Coleman, C. V. Elliott, J. McKerchar and Miss M. Rodney. An echo of the recent very successful dog show appears in a donation of $2.15 from Dr. C. A. Temple of Millbrook, who through pressure of professional duties was unable to attend, and thus gives his support to both the fund and the show in this manner.

Tonight, the Sons of England, Lansdowne Lodge, is celebrating St. George's Day in the Lodge Rooms at 8 o'clock, to which they invite all their friends, and all proceeds from the evening will come to the fund. Any unable to attend, could if they so wish, be associated with this in a financial way, by sending their contribution to W. G. Shiner, 311 Frederick Ave., who is also the secretary for the lodge.

Another great Englishman is recalled today, for this is the birthday of Wm. Shakespeare, whose works will last as long as the British Empire stands.

White Lake Man Is Missing

Search is being made in the district around White Lake, Dummer township, today for Fred Armstrong, 70-year-old resident, who disappeared on Sunday and has not been seen since.

Armstrong, who wandered away from the home of George Forbes, at White Lake, at noon Sunday, is described as 5 feet 8 inches in height, and weighing around 150 pounds. He was wearing a light felt hat, a black coat, blue overalls, low shoes and rubbers when last seen.

Provincial Police here were not notified of the man's disappearance until this morning.

Savage Agrees To Direct Kinsmen Show

Alan Savage, well known master of ceremonies on outstanding radio programs in Ontario has volunteered to act in that same capacity at the mammoth radio variety show which is being staged by the Kinsmen "Milk for Britain" committee over radio station CHEX on Friday, May 1, using the Collegiate Auditorium as a studio.

The show is shaping up as one of the outstanding entertainment offerings from this city in years, and no effort is being spared to give listeners and the visual audience a show that will warm their hearts. Frank Oldfield, noted baritone is coming to Peterborough to be on the program, and other stars include Patricia Bailey, blues singer on the CBC chain, and Jimmy Namarro, top ranking zylophonist. The cream of Peterborough musical and vocal talent is being approached to assist in the show, and already Jessie Spencely, Adam Hawley, Joey McMahon, Walter Farr, Leahy Bros., and Jimmy Duffus and his orchestra have offered their services and been accepted.

The object of this variety show is to raise funds for the "Milk for Britain" fund by announcing contributions from listeners to the show. Agents with cars will be placed in various sub-divisions throughout the city, and it will be their duty to drive to the addresses announced over the radio and receive the donations. To add more zest to the undertaking, ten cents tickets are being sold on a list of draw prizes, and the names of winners will also be announced over the air. Draw tickets may be obtained from any member of the Kinsmen Club, Elliott's Drug Store, Ken Smylie, of York Trading, or at the Examiner office.

891 Nazi Planes Downed 25 Days

MOSCOW, April 23—(AP).—The German air force lost 891 planes in the period, March 22-April 18, on the Russian front, the Soviet information bureau said today.

In the same period, it said, Russian losses were 239 planes.

A communique of the day before put German plane losses at 1,500 in the March 1-April 14 period.

The new figures gav this chronological account of the pace of destruction of enemy air power:

March 22-28—161 planes destroyed.

March 29-April 4—296.

April 4-11—322.

April 11-18—112.

Red army units killed 250 Germans and occupied an important stronghold on the central front and repulsed Nazi counter attacks on the Kalinin front, to the north, in fighting during which 465 invaders were slain and prisoners were taken.

"Two enemy transport planes were shot down by rifle and machine gun fire," the information bureau said.

Rail Shipments Of Oil Increase

WASHINGTON, April 23 (AP).—Rail movement of petroleum to the East set a new record of 586,350 barrels daily in the week ended April 11, supplying close to half the seaboard's daily oil requirement of 1,500,000 barrels, Petroleum Co-ordinator Ickes reported.

Approximately 43,500 rail tank cars were used in the unprecedent haul. Pressed into service to fill the breach caused by war diversions and sinkings of tanker ships which normally supply the East, the railroads in the week handled the load equivalent of approximately 115 ocean tankers.

The haul was 11.5 per cent. over the seven-day period ended April 4, when the previous rail record, a daily movement of 525,697 barrels, was set.

Oil shipments by rail from California to the Pacific Northwest increased in the week by about 12 per cent., the average daily movement amounting to 18,200 barrels. In this movement, 1,250 tank cars were used.

Visiting Masonic Head Urges United Effort

MARMORA, April 23 — (ENS).—Right Worthy Brother Frank D. Pringle, D.D.G.M., of Prince Edward District, was greeted by a goodly attendance of brethren of Marmora A.F. and A.M. No. 222 on the occasion of his official visit on Monday evening the number being supplemented by several visiting brethren from Stirling, Havelock and other lodges. A sumptuous banquet was served in St. Andrew's Hall by the Women's Association.

Wor. Bro. W. G. Chrysler, Master of the Lodge, as toastmaster called upon Right Wor. Bro. C. H. Buskard, P.D.D.G.M., of Prince Edward Dishtrict to propose "Grand Lodge." In addition to remarks appropriate to the toast, the proposer referred to the fact that the representative of Grand Lodge was a member of Craig Lodge, Shasnonville, and first of that lodge to receive the honor. In response the D.D. G.M. gave a very inspiring address in which he touched upon the place of Masonry in present world conditions. Speaking generally he said that the most important thing for us to consider today was the state of our own will. Even the civilized will, will become individualistic unless we are taught the other way—that we must all depend upon Someone greater than ourselves. This is a time to reorgnize the economy of life. It is also the time for the reorgnization of life. In summing up his remarks as addressed to Masons, he said "We have a great duty to perform and a trust to fulfil in world conditions as they face us today."

Next on the toast list was Visiting Brethren, humorously and graciously proposed by Wor. Bro. J. F. Baker. Reply was made at the session of the Lodge in the Masonic Hall, which followed adjournment, when Bro. H. C. Barlow submitted the Junior Warden's oast.

Before leaving St. Andrew's Hall the Worshipful Master tendered a vote of thanks to the ladies for the excellent meal which they had served.

During the Lodge session, the D.D.G.M. again addressed the Lodge and with visiting brethren responding to their toast, a pofitable and enjoyable evening was spent.

Writer Denies Tirade Charge

LOS ANGELES, April 23—(AP).—Upton Close, writer and lecturer, said in a statement last night that "the implication made by a Canadian Parliament member that I have made broadcasts offensive to the British people is without substantiation."

T. L. Church, Toronto Conservative, asked in the Canadian House of Commons Monday whether the attention of the government had been called "to the offensive broadcasting for the National Broadcasting Company of one Upton Close and his tirades against Britain." A return by War Services Minister J. T. Thorson said the NBC has taken action "which, it is believed, will be effective" in dealing with the broadcasts.

"I have never offended the British people or cause," Close added. "The British cause stands for human freedom as exemplified in the British Commonwealth of Nations, which I believe to be the working model for the coming world government.

"But attacks such as this seems to be do not greatly perturb me, since it has been my experience for 20 years that when one Englishman accuses you falsely, 10 Englishmen will rise to your defence."

Sidney N. Strotz, vice-president in charge of the western division of the NBC, said Close would continue to broadcast each Sunday.

Suggest Altering Salvage Methods

HASTINGS, April 23.—(ENS)—If the salvage which is gathered is manipulated by some dealer whose sole interest is a big "haul" for himself it is not in the general interest of the Canadian war effort to collect it, was the opinion expressed by several members of the Hastings Red Cross Society at their meeting Monday night.

The matter of the disposition of the war memorial guns, released by the local council several months ago to be used as salvage, is still hanging fire.

"These guns are not going to be handed over to any dealer who will make a huge profit on them," declared the president, Reeve L. A. Kelley. Several members commented that the government could feasibly alter its present salvage disposition methods so that they would be not only simpler but more profitable.

Notwithstanding these varied criticisms, Friday, May 15, was set as the date for a salvage campaign in the village.

Grant Sine, public school principal, who has directed his school pupils in several such drives, was appointed chairman of the campaign committee. Also appointed to work in conjunction with him were: Arthur Orr, Iden Bonds, Earl Clarke, A. J. McKenty, Harry D[illegible]d, F. Pantling, William Wellman and Lynn Hill.

Hastings quota in the Dominion-wide Red Cross drive for funds to be staged May 11 to 18, is $500, it was revealed by the secretary, Mrs. W. M. Fowlds. Coming on top of the recent Victory Loan, members were a little dubious about the ability of this village of 750 to raise the requested amount. It was decided to request the surrounding districts which are aiding the local branch in their quilting projects to aid in drive also.

Canvassers appointed for the village were: Dr. W. E. Wilson, Russ Jones, Joseph Mulholland, R. Burnham and L. E. Kelley.

A tag day for the home fun will be staged on May 24.

Main object of this fund is to look after the welfare of the local boys overseas. Recently 8,500 cigarettes were sent to the local boys through the medium of the fund.

Following is the financial statement as submitted by the treasurer, W. H. Kumpf: Balance, March 16,, $186.25; receipts: euchre, $20; Cobourg Red Cross, donation, $10; disbursements: euchre prizes, $2.03; Everatt and Malcolm, supplies, $2; Canadian Red Cross Society, $131.94.

Torpedo Victim

WASHINGTON, April 23 (AP)—A United States navy spokesman said today that the nature of the explosions which damaged the Argentine Motorship Victoria 300 miles off Cape Hatteras indicated beyond doubt "that the ship was torpedoed by an Axis vessel."

The Victoria incident was announced by the Argentine government yesterday and in Buenos Aires it was said the vessel had either struck a mine or been torpedoed.

Leaders Drum For Yes Vote

By The Canadian Press

M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. leader in the House of Commons, Revenue Minister Gibson, Premier A. S. MacMillan of Nova Scotia and Lt.-Gov. J. G. Bowen of Alberta made speeches or statements yesterday favoring an affirmative ballot in next Monday's manpower plebiscite.

Onesime Gagnon, acting leader of the Union Nationale opposition in the Quebec Legislative Assembly, urged a "no" vote.

In an address over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's national network, Mr. Coldwell said "We are either for our cause or we are

Take 2 Leaders

"If we are for it," he said, "then we must do everything in our power to further the war effort.

"We must not leave either ourselves or the parliament we elect to carry on this war any excuse, any loophole of escape from the responsibility to prosecute this struggle with every resource at our command."

A 'yes' vote, by serving notice to the government and parliament that Canadians mean business, and by serving notice to the enemy that Canada is united, would raise morale and the will to victory. A 'no' vote would have the opposite effect.

Maximum Production.

Manpower was not the vital issue, Mr. Coldwell said. Once the plebiscite has been disposed of, "the true issues of maximum production and equal sacrifice should be faced by parliament." After an affirmative vote in the plebiscite, the C.C.F. would insist that "industry must forego its profits, accumulated wealth must be placed at the service of the nation without interest, incomes must be restricted, and a national minimum standard of living assured in town and on the farms for all families, in order to maintain efficiency and morale."

Addressing a plebiscite rally at Hamilton, Ont., Mr. Gibson said arguments advanced by those favoring a negative vote were inspired by enemy agents.

"We must expect all kinds of arguments as to why a vote against the plebiscite should be polled," he told women of Hamilton West constituency. "These are inspired originally by enemy agents. The enemy doesn't want the plebiscite passed; he doesn't want a total war effort in Canada."

Premier MacMillan, in a statement issued at Halifax, urged a 100-per cent "yes" vote in these words:

"Let us see to it that every voter reaches the polls; let us show to the people of Canada, and the rest of the world that, while Nova Scotians may take their policies seriously, in a matter of this kind our patriotic duty far and away transcends our politicals beliefs, and we will poll a bigger vote on Monday next than every before in our history."

No political, religious or sectional bias should influence judgment. Only one thought should guide voters—"what is in the best interest of our country?"

Asking Reprieve For 20 Held After St. Nazaire

VICHY, April 23—(AP). — German authorities in Paris announced to-day the execution of a number of Frenchmen described as Communists, Jews and "persons responsible through solidarity" in reprisal for alleged assassination attempts against German soldiers on April 2, 8 and 20.

Additional hostages will be shot unless the so-called 'terrorists' are turned into the authorities within a week, the announcement said. Failure to do so also will result in the deportation of an additional several hundred persons to forced labor camps in Eastern Europe, it added.

(Foreign diplomatic circles in Switzerland were informed that the Vichy government is seeking a reprieve for 20 hostages taken by the Nazis in reprisal for co-operation by some of the townspeople in the British Commando raid on St. Nazaire. They first were sentenced to be shot but the executions were not carried out pending negotiations, according to this report.)

The penalties announced in Paris apparenty fell under the heading of the "further measures" which Lt.-Gen. Ernst Von Schumburg commander in the Paris area, reserved the right to take after notifying the city's population yesterday that all of Paris would be placed under strict curfew for three days.

Girl Employees Enjoying Their Lunch At Bren Gun Plant

Girl employees in huge Bren gun plant in Toronto enjoy lunch in one of the plant cafeterias. In a great many war factories, full course meals are provided at cost. In the Dominion Arsenals, girls can secure a wholesome lunch for fifteen cents. Several plants employ full time dietitians to make sure girls get needed vitamins.

Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Chopped Creamed Spinach
Shredded Leaf Lettuce and Radish and Green Onion Salad, with French Dressing
Rhubarb Upside Down Cake.

Note.—For a family of five we made a half of a "tenderized" ham weighing nearly 6 lbs. "do" for five meals, one of which was for guests. For the first meal we sliced off three slices ¾ inch thick and rubbed them with mustard and corn syrup placed in shallow pan, and covered them with milk and baked them 1 hour, or until milk had nearly evaporated. Two days later we baked the ham, adding some parboiled sweet potatoes half an hour before ham was done—it needed only 1 ½hours in oven. I forgot to mention that before I baked it I sliced off 5 thin slices to fry and serve with waffles for Sunday morning's breakfast. Fourth meal it was sliced cold; fifth - meal minced in sandwiches for lunch.

MONDAY

TUESDAY (Hasty)

Tossed Salad of Sliced Tomatoes, Sliced Head Lettuce, Shredded Carrots, Mayonnaise
Mixed Canned Pears and Peaches

Note.—I am trying to use whole wheat flour in all my baking and find that waffles made with it are delicious. Two cups whole wheat flour, ¾ teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1½ tablespoons corn syrup, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ cups sour or buttermilk, 2 eggs beaten separately, 4 tablespoons salad oil or melted butter. Mix and sift dry ingredients, adding the bran siftings that remain in the sifter to the mixture, add milk slowly, then egg yokes which have been beaten and the shortening, fold in stiffly beaten whites. A little more milk may need to be added to some whole wheat flours to make it thin enough to pour. Bake on waffle iron when indicator is at "bake."

This Week's Wartime Recipe

By MARY MOORE'S READERS.

Dainty Chocolate Pudding

Contributed by "Mabe of Windsor"

One and one-half cups hot milk, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/3 cup cold milk; ½ cup corn syrup, 1/8 teaspoon salt, 1 oz. unsweetened chocolate, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup whipping cream. Mix salt, cornstarch and cold milk, and add to hot milk, add syrup (see note) and cook in top of double boiler stirring until thick, add the melted chocolate and cook about 10 minutes, add vanilla and cool. When ready to serve whip ½ cup cream stiff and fold in chocolate mixture. Pour into sherbet glasses and top with ½ teaspoon red currant or crab apple jelly or a cherry.

Note on Above Recipe.—Corn syrup should not be added until after cornstarch and milk mix has cooked at least 20 minutes for the corn syrup has a quality in it which surrounds each cornstarch granule and prevents it swelling and cooking. Mixtures of cornstarch and corn syrup must be mixed only after cornstarch is cooked.

Honey Icebox Cookies

Contributed by "Mabe of Windsor"

Two and one-third cups flour, 1/8 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup butter, ½ cup honey, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup chopped walnuts, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cream butter, add honey and brown sugar and when well mixed add the beaten egg. Sift dry ingredients and add gradually to butter mixture. Then stir in the nuts and vanilla. Shape into a roll, wrap in wax paper; chill in refrigerator; slice and bake in moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for 10 or 12 minutes.

Honeyed Baked Apples

Contributed by "Mabe of Windsor"

Select McIntosh apples, wash, wipe, then core and pare half way down. Place apples in baking dish with a little boiling water. Put 1 teaspoon honey, ½ teaspoon butter, and a dash of cinnamon in the core of each apple. Bake in hot oven of 375 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes, basting with syrup in pan occasionally.

DOROTHY DIX

FATHER SHOULD DEMAND HIS RIGHTS AS HEAD OF FAMILY.

Disciplining Children Is Within His Jurisdiction—If Mother Interferes She Should Be Put in Her Place.

Dear Dorothy Dix.— The young father who wrote you not long ago about his wife not permitting him to discipline his son is a pitiable figure, the more so since it is his own fault. He lost his position as head of his home through his own weakness right at the start of his married life. If he had then firmly assumed is rightful place, he would not face this trouble now.

However, the past is past, and he has only two courses of action left to him now. He can either meekly sit back and watch his son's life being ruined, or he can take back by force his place as head of his home. Here is one method which, though drastic, has the advantage of surprise and speed of action. The next time his son needs to be punished let the father do it. He may have to lock himself and the boy in a room to keep the child's mother from interfering. Then, if she raises hell, as she probably will, let him take her across his knee and use the same strap on her until she is thoroughly mastered and no longer fighting.

Then, and this is most important, let her husband take her in his arms, no matter what she says or does, until she has cried out her shame and pain and humiliation; and when she can listen to reason let him tell her how much he really loves her and that he has been driven to take this course in order to save their home, their marriage and their child, all of which are being ruined by her folly. If she doesn't love him, it will probably mean divorce. In that case he should fight for custody of the child and try to save him from his mother.

These suggestions are not theory. They are the result of experience, for I was one of the fool mothers who was ruining her child, but who was saved by her husband who had the courage to teach her her error by force hen she refused to learn the kind way.—A Woman Who Knows.

Answer.—I publish this letter in full in the hope that it will brace up some weak father, who sees his children being ruined by their fond and brainless mother, into at least making some effort to save them from her before it is too late.

In all the world there is nothing else so strong as that men who are brave enough to meet the other trials of life without flinching, and wise enough to deal intelligently with the other problems of existence, turn into cowards and quitters before a silly woman's tears and hysterics, and do not even make a fight to preserve their own personal liberty, nor to protect the children they have brought into the world.

Life Disciplines With a Hard Hand.

There is hardly a mail that does not bring me a letter from some desperate man telling me his wife is spoiling their children rotten; that she is letting them grow up without morals or manners; that she indulges their every whim and lets them do just as they please. He can foresee the hoodlums these brattish children are going to grow up to be, the wrecks and failures they are going to make of their lives. He knows life disciplines with a hard hand those whose parents have not disciplined them in childhood.

But he says he can do nothing about it, for his wife interferes in his every effort to control them and makes such scenes when he tries to punish them that the only way he can keep peace in the family is to take no part in the rearing of the children, but leave them entirely in her hands.

The father's heart breaks over the fate their mother is preparing for his children, but he feels that he is helpless. But that is not true. Individuals as well as nations can revolt and throw off the yoke of their tyrants, and there isn't a henpecked husband and father in the length and breadth of the land who couldn't regain his freedom and establish himself as head of the house if he had the intestinal fortitude to put up even one good fight against his wife. And his wife would love him and respect him more for doing it, for every woman has a contempt for the man who is afraid of her.

No father would stand idly by and beat his breast while he watched his beloved child being murdered by its crazy mother, but that would be a kinder thing to do than to watch a silly mother ruining a child's life and slaying its soul without making an effort to save it.

Mixed Marriages

Dear Miss Dix.—I am very much worried about my young daughter, now in college, who is becoming quite serious about a boy who has an entirely different religion from our own. His parents are also opposed to this friendship on the same grounds, and they are doing everything they can to stop it. There is no talk of marriage as yet. Do you think such a marriage could be a success? Should I try to prevent it? How should I go about breaking up the friendship? What should I do?—Mrs. S. E. C.

Answer.—Do nothing. Keep your hands off of the young couple. Let them work things out for themselves. Parental opposition even beats propinquity as a matchmaker.

So far, you have no indication that your daughter and the young man are in love with each other or have the slightest intention of ever getting married.

In these days when boys and girls go to school together from their kindergarten days up and play together and work side by side, they are far less sentimental than they used to be in Grandma's time when the two sexes were segregated almost from the cradle, and every boy was expected to have serious intentions when he paid a girl any attentions. Hence, many boys and girls nowadays are able to enjoy a friendship based upon long association and similar tastes and interests, without ever having any romantic yearnings towards each other.

Of course, a difference in religion can ruin a marriage if either the husband or wife is fantatical about his or her creed. But nowadays most young people are more liberal in their views about such matters than their grandparents were, and there are thousands of happy marriages in which husbands and wives grant each other the right that even the Constitution guarantees, of worshipping God according to the dictates of their own consciences.

Get He Some New Clothes

Dear Miss Dix.—L have a discontented and broken-hearted daughter who is very melancholy because the young man to whom she was engaged broke his promise to marry her. This has upset her very much and she takes it out on the family. Is there anything we can do about it?—A. B. C.

Answer.—Not a thing, unless you can make the girl see how lucky she is that her boy-friend found out that he was tired of her before marriage instead of aftewards. Tell her to buck up and get some new clothes and go out and hunt up another beau. There is just as good fish in the sea, you know.

FRANTIC WEEKEND

By EDMUND FANCOTT

THE STORY: Peggy Mack, 17, arrives for her first weekend party with her sister Myra and brother Michael at the country place of Ferdy Lorton, near Montreal. Other guests are the beautiful Fay Ransom and her new but already devoted escort, Lieut. Nigel Monkhouse. Peggy starts an all-out glamor campaign and makes quite an impression.

A MUSICAL EVENING

CHAPTER VII

That evening, after their swim and a delicious supper, Ferdy's guests sat on the wide-screened veranda overlooking a magnificent view that formed sharper and still sharper shadows as the new moon rose over the horizon. Vying light streamed softly to them from the room, behind, almost full open to the broad porch through a system of sliding panels of Ferdy's design.

His Aunt Belinda was knitting for the Army. The two sat together sharing the same light from the lounge room behind them, the industrious click of their needles strikingly out of place in the lazy night.

Both the soldiers had brought tropical shorts and shirts of khaki, and were as cool as the tall glasses by their sides. Ferdy was irrepressibly untidy, faithful to a very old and worn pair of flannel trousers, and breaking in a striped cotton jersey that for him was comparatively new, having been faded by only one summer of sun.

Peggy, with one leg flung over the arm of a low wicker chair, was playing her Bohemian part well. She wore a frock with a bright bodice shirred at the waist and a full peasant skirt not overly long, even in a short-skirted season. The dress was loosely open at the throat and striking in color—a rust-red background splashed with bold colors in a native design. Her dark hair tumbled in waves about her neck and her green eyes flickered to and fro over the company. She was enjoying herself and was being very frank about it.

Fay, by comparison, was cool and reserved. She wore a white cotton dress sparsely patterned with blue navy motifs, neatly collared and high-buttoned to the neck. In comparison, too, she was very quiet.

The men smoked and the evening promised to pass as a quiet prelude to a placid weekend until Peggy's leg swung like a storm warning over the arm of her chair.

"Let's do something," she said suddenly.

"We are doing something," said Myra.

"Knitting!" exclaimed Peggy and there was a world of contemptuous expression in her voice.

Ferdy grinned. "I've got a surprise for you."

Peggy's face broke into an anticipatory smile. "Goody!" she said.

"Fay," said Ferdy. "There is a piano in there. Why not sing to us?"

Fay smiled at him. "Must I?"

Ferdy nodded. "Hardly must, but I think we'd all like it."

* * *

Fay looked around at the others and there were signs that everyone else was about to join in the persuasion. To avoid it she rose.

"Can I tell them?" said Ferdy.

Fay looked down at him and smiled. "I thought everyone knew."

"Not in Montreal," said Ferdy. "I gathered you had kept it fairly quiet."

Fay Ransom left the veranda and went into the room with the eyes of the two soldiers following her.

"Fay Ransom," began Ferdy, "is her real name. Her stage name is Gay Randall."

Peggy sat up as if shot. "What? Is she honestly Gay Randall?"

"Exactly," grinned Ferdy.

Myra looked at him calmy. "I knew there was something about her that didn't fit into that office."

"But . . . but . . ." exclaimed Peggy. "I've got records by her! She was singing with Johnny White's band at the Astor in New York. What's she doing here?"

At that moment the soft notes of the piano drifted out to the veranda. Then a song by Grieg began to float from the room on a voice that held those who sat outside quiet and still. It had a low, gentle quality, as though each note of the song reflected perfectly the will and feeling of the singer.

After the song was finished there was a silence.

Then Peggy cried out irreverently: "Swing something!"

A laugh came from inside. "Sorry. Not here."

Peggy relapsed in disappointment and the voice began again, this time a song by Schubert.

The audience listened quietly. The two soldiers appeared to be deep in thought. In both their minds there came the same thought. Before she was Fay Ransom, a very attractive girl and accessible to any man who could hold her. Now she was a celebrity, who had sung in New York with one of the best-known dance bands, who had had radio contracts on famous programs, whose name was a legend among that vast number of girls who envied her success. In other words, she had suddenly leapt to some impossible pedestal where ordinary Question.—Please send me your sheet of corn syrup recipies. I would also like to have the recipe to make "Quince Honey" if you have it. I heard about this, but no one around here knows the recipe. I am a newcomer in this part of the country and fine that people eat very much differently out here than they do out where I came from, so I would appreciate these recipes very much.—Mrs. M. B.

Answer.—

Quince Honey.—Five large quinces, 5 pounds sugar (OR 2 lbs sugar and 2 lbs. honey), 1 pint boiling water. Pare and grate the quinces. Dissolve the sugar (or sugar and honey) in the water over low heat, add quinces, and cook 15 to 20 minutes. Turn into sterile glasses and seal with paraffin. When cool, it is about the consistency of honey.

Question.—Would you please send me your sheet of corn syrup recipes. I am a mother of a large family of nine children. Two of the boys are working and take their lunches. Could you give me some sandwich recipes, too?—Mrs. Merkel.

Answer.—I'm hoping you saw our article of last week giving nutritious lunch box menus and suggestions for combinations.

Good Combinations for Sandwich Fillings

(1) Hard-boiled egg, chopped pickle, mayonnaise; (2) peanut butter, cream cheese, salt and lettuce; (2) flaked salmon, chopped celery, mayonnaise; (4) minced ham, minced tomato, mayonnaise; (5) watercress and chopped bacon and mayonnaise; (6) chopped peanuts with cottage cheese; (7) minced cold roast pork with chopped sweet pickles; (8) mashed liverwurst with dill pickles sliced; (9) thrice-minced pork liver with minced green onion OR bacon; (10) minced roast beef with mustard pickles. All sandwiches should be made of Whole Wheat Bread except when rye or cornmeal or other whole grain bread substitute is used. "Enriched" white bread is better than plain white, but not enriched nearly enough to compare with the neutritious qualities of whole wheat bread.

Answer.—I have been keeping your directions for making a fireless cooker and am following them. However I cannot find a soapstone or any one who knows anything about one. I have tried hardware, drug and paint stores. Can you tell me where I can get one. Thanking you, Mrs. W. Bolton.

Answer.—No wonder you had a hard time locating a soap stone—the only source I can locate is the mine! owned and operated by James Haywood and Co., of 23 Scott street, Toronto. Write to them, telling them your need and it is possible they will sell you a piece or suggest where you can buy some in your district. The soapstone is not a necessary part of the fireless cooker, but is a good thing to have for it does hold the heat in the cooking compartment.

Spring Tea and Draw For Quilt Held By Chapter

The Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. held a very successful tea at the home of Mr. A. E. Edmonds, 191 Sherbrooke street, on Wednesday afternoon.

The sunny spring day brought many guests who were received by the hostess and Mrs. F. L. Robinson, the Regent. They were shown by Mrs. D. Fleming to the spacious living room which was beautifully decorated with flowers. The tea-room was breath-takingly beautiful in the exquisite loveliness of its color harmony. The table, covered with a beautiful madiera cloth was centred with a bowl of snapdragons, stocks, and tulips in shades of pink and orchid. Candles of pink and orchid in silver candelabra almost, but not quite, completed the picture. You just had to have a cup of tea poured by Mrs. H. W. Darcy, Mrs. D. W. Harvey or Mrs. W. Comstock, dainty sandwiches and cake served by Mrs. G. A. Borland. Mrs. B. MacLean, Mrs. A. Archibald, Mrs. F. Mowry, with plate arrangement by Mrs. A. E. Dryland and Mrs. C. M. Cox; and mints specially made to carry out the color design.

The Dresden plate quilt made and donated to the chapter by Mrs. P. J. Wolstenholme, was drawn for by Mrs. F. L. Robinson and won by Mrs. F. Mowry, Charlotte street.

Mrs. A. McWilliams was in charge of the draw. Mrs. A. E. Edmonds and Mrs. B. W. Harvey were conveners for this delightful tea. Mrs. W. A. Davern was treasurer for the afternoon.

Proceeds of the tea and draw, held to aid war work, will be announced.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

We human beings are funny. Take taxes, for instance. You'll have to face 'em sooner or later. We all grouse and grumble at having to pay taxes; we look with profound suspicion on the way the government spends our money; and generally we find it rather unsatisfactory. Yet if we are asked to contribute to charity most of us do so willingly, and as generously as our circumstances permit. Very seldom does the average contributor to charity inquire into the spending of the money he has donated. Now, taxes are just as important and just as necessary as charity. We all admit that, and most of us understand that taxes, like charity, must be heavier in wartime. Then why this attitude There are probably several minor reasons. Public opinion is notoriously a more powerful persuader than logical common-sense; the bestowal of charity imbues the giver with a god-like sense of power; if you are in business, it is good publicity to give generously to charity. But the real reason probably goes a good deal deeper than that. We don't like to feel that we have to do something. Even the fact that, in any government, good or bad, taxes are a logical necessity, doesn't make us feel any better about having to pay them. The feeling of legal as well as moral, compulsion hampers our sense of liberty. And so we grumble—thank God we can . . . Sprinkle sugar on the surface of cookies, muffins, cakes etc. before baking and you won't need to use an icing . . . Don't forget to save your husbands old socks for the Kinettes. Why should all that good wool go to waste when somebody can make such good use of it . . . A ladies church group has dispensed with its annual tea to raise funds in order to co-operate with the government on the sugar restrictions. When that decision was made the meeting adjourned and the hostess served refreshments. Wonder if they had tea or coffee and how many took sugar? . . . The Kinettes will be having another Bingo soon to help the Milk for Britain Fund. You won't want to miss the fun, or the grand prizes . . . Don't forget to go and vote Monday, April 27. Even if you toss a coin to decide, though that method is not recommended, please go and vote.

Calling All Knitters!

"Oh, my daughter, twice have I said unto thee, and thrice have I said the same that you mustest cast off LOOSELY such garments as turtleneck sweaters, body-belts and small boys' suits; and that thou absolutely mustest cast off IN RIBBING, or the garment will bite the neck and body of him that weareth it."

"Be diligent, Oh my daughter, in cating ON loosely such garments as socks, amputation covers, gloves, mitts, etc., or verily the edges thereof will bind him that weareth the same. And that is no joke, but is as bitter smoke in the eyes of him that weareth it, or like unto salt in his tea."

"Accursed be she who knotteth her wool, but diligent women that splice the same shall be praised."

"Oh my daughter, cause not thy brother to have ridges in the heels of his socks. Thou mustest slip the first stitch of each row when making the heel. Do not knit it, as is the custom of many; else will thy brother limp into the battle."

"Do thou, Oh my daughter, leave open one shoulder of little children's sweaters, closing the same by buttons and loops. Thy little brother hath a large head and yes, a small neck. So shall he go neatly clad."

"If thou, Oh, Sophonisba, my daughter, shouldest soil thy delicate knitting, be not ashamed to wash it tenderly before hand in. But, Oh, my daughter, in washing thy handiwork avoid using pins that rust. Thus shall thy knitting be pure and free from nasty yellow marks."

"She that observeth all these precepts shall be admired by all men, and of all Unit Conveners, and of all inspectors of garments. And verily, she shall be blessed of them that wear her handiwork."

From "Vancouver Calling."

"Yes' Vote Urged By C.W.V.S. On Plebiscite

The following is the result of a resolution passed by the Provincial Executive of the Canadian Women's Voluntary Services, Ontario Division, in which all members of the C.W.V.S. are urged to vote "Yes" in the plebiscite to be held on Monday, April 27.

To members of the C.W.V.S.:

As an enrollee of this organization, you are urged to cast your ballot in the affirmative in the coming plebiscite. Use your influence to urge everyone you know to do likewise. This is not a party tissue but a national emergency and whatever may be our private views or preference, our Allies and our enemies would construe a negative vote as an expression of Canada's unwillingness to co-operate in all out effort to win the war.

Owing to the gasoline shortage it may be difficult for people in rural districts to get to the polls. It is therefore all the more necessary for city dwellers to vote in full force and vote "Yes."

Provincial Executive C.W.V.S., Ontario Division.

TOWN AND COUNTRY

By PRUNELLA WOOD

MADE of pure wool, this beige and brown plaid is trig as a reefer coat, but generous enough to slip over a suit. Note pocket design and brown wool inlayed on lapels. Broad self-fabric belt.

It's every woman's duty to see that she has at least one sturdy wool coat which covers her completely. Get a becoming and fashionable model, by all means . . but don't look on it as an indulgence to your vanity because of that. It's up to every mother's daughter amongst us to guard our health for the troublous times we must go through. And wool is a great health protector.

As priorities are planned, you'll have to assemble your own layers of wool for extra wardrobe warmth. No "wool on wool" models will be legal buys. Your three-piece suit... skirt, jacket, topper . . will be out. Jacket and skirt are not rated "wool on wool," since a blouse comes between the items.

Maytime Desserts To Give Spring Menus A Lift

By MARY MOORE

If you have been over-generous with your canned fruit supplies, desserts are a problem to you this month.

My little niece of twelve discovered the magic she could create out of mixing about eight ingredients together in a certain orderly way and presto; she had a beautiful cake.

She has mastered chocolate and white cakes and wanted something different from me. One day she breezed in (there seems to be a perpetual zephyr around her) and I had just finished making an upside down cake for our dinner (the one I gave you a few weeks ago using pineapple or peaches and cherries), so she wanted that recipe; and so did her mother who said, "We just need some new desserts at our house."

This week's mail brought requests from quite a few readers for desserts, too, and that number of hints constitutes a demand to me.

Since we all try to do our best with what is at hand, I decided to try something different than pie and "stewed" with rhubarb and here's the answer:

Rhubarb Upside Down Dessert

Cottage Pudding Batter.—¼ cup shortening; 2/3 cups sugar OR 1/3 cup corn syrup; 1 egg, ½ cup milk, 1¾ cups flour OR 1 cup flour and ¾ cup hole wheat flour; 3 teaspoons baking powder; ½ teaspoon salt. Cream the shortening and add the sugar (or sugar and corn syrup) and cream very well, then add the egg well beaten. Mix and sift the flour, baking powder and salt, and add it alternately with the milk. When "bottom" is ready pour this matter over it.

"Bottom" Fruit Syrup.—3 tablespoons butter, ¾ cup brown sugar or 1 cup corn syrup, 2 cups finely chopped red rhubarb (unpeeled). Put the butter into a cake pan about 9" x 9" or into shallow round baking dish. Add the sugar or syrup and stir over low heat until mixed an dmelted. Add rhubarb (raw of course), and pour over batter and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 30 minutes. Invert for serving on large cake plate, garnished with whipped cream. Rhubarb, cherries, strawberries, strawberries and peaches could be used raw; pineapple or apples, or plums if used to replace the rhubarb would need a little precooking or should be from cans.

New Refrigerator Dessert

One and one-half cups heavy cream for whipping, ¼ cup honey, 8 marshmallows, ½ cup chopped dates, ¼ cup chopped nut meats, ¼ cup chopped cherries (maraschino or candied), 3½ cups boxed rice cereal. While the cream until still; divide in halves. Fold honey into half the cream. Cut the marshmallows into small pieces and combine them with the dates, nut meats and cherries; fold into the honey and cream mixtures. Roll the cereal into fine crumbs (any crisp cereal may be used). Add 1 cup of the crumbs to the first mixture, stirring until well blended. Line a pan with waxed paper. Sprinkle some of the extra crumbs in bottom of pan and pour in cream mixture. Press down slightly and sprinkle top with remaining crumbs. Chill overnight. Unmold and to serve cut in squares. Serve with sweetened whipped cream and garnish with cherry or nut meat or a spot of red currant jelly.

Wartime Cherry Cobbler

One cup flour, 1 cup whole wheat flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 4 tablespoons fat, 2/3 cup milk. With these 7 ingredients make a biscuit dough by sifting together the flours, baking powder, salt and sugar, then cut in the fat and work in with the fingers, and just stir the milk into this enough to mix. Mix together 2/3 cup corn syrup and 2 tablespoons flour, and add 1/3 cup cherry juice from can of unsweetened pie cherries and stir over low heat until it thickens, then add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, and 2 cups unsweetened pie cherbaking dish and cover with the bisbaking dish and cover wit hthe biscuit dough either cut out in rounds or patted on and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 20 minutes.

Note.—Biscuit dough may be used to line the baking dish and cherry mix poured in, and edges of dough brought roughly over it, leaving some of the cherries exposed. Bake it at 450 deg. Fahr. if this method is used. If you can manage it this is nice with heavy cream.

AFTERNOON HEADLINES

By ALICE ALDEN

WITH THE spotlight turned full on dressy afternoon and informal evening things rather than on evening clothes, milliners everywhere are concentrating on little hats to go with the new frocks. Looking toward late Spring and Summer evenings, John Frederic has designed this white organza sailor held on by a crocheted chin strap in pink. The soft shirred crown is emphasized by a lacy navy blue veil cascading over the brim.

Frantic Weekend

men could not reach her.

Then came Peggy's irrepressible whisper. "But why is she here?"

"Why shouldn't she be?" asked Ferdy, to whom it was quite immaterial whether his guests came from the pinnacles of show business or from an office desk.

"But, I mean, why isn't she in New York?"

"Shut up," said her brother abruptly.

She subsided again in ferment of curiosity. She leaned over to Ferdy. "I can sing!" she whispered.

"Can you?" said Ferdy's eyebrows.

She nodded eagerly. "I'd give anything to get into show business!"

The song ended, a lovely song fitting perfectly into a summer evening with the air already cooling over the tree-tops.

A moment later Fay came though the door. Both Michael and Nigel sat up suddenly. "Please sing some more," they said almost in unison.

She shook her head. "Someone else's turn."

Ferdy laughed. "Peggy sings."

"Who said so?" asked Myra.

"I can so," replied Peggy quickly. Then she turned to Fay. "Remember the 'No' song you recorded last year—the one Sherwin wrote specially for you? I can imitate you in that."

"Come on then," said Fay. "I'll play it for you."

The two soldiers slumped into their seats and resigned themselves to it. The piano broke into a ripple of notes. Then came a husky, slow voice swinging one of last year's most popular songs.

"They're kidding," said Myra. "That's Fay!"

"Not at all," said Ferdy looking into the room. "That is your little sister."

The two gloomy soldiers sat up with new interest. A look of amazement crossed Michael's face as he looked across to Myra.

"That's a new one on me," he said.

"Wait until you've heard it as often as I have," said Myra. "She puts that record on up in her room about 60 times a night and practices with it. We've all been looking for it for weeks to break it, but she hides it too well."

"How was that?" asked Peggy unabashed.

"Pretty good," said Ferdy, "in spite of what your family thinks about it. Has she got a voice, Fay?"

Fay laughed. "She has," she replied.

Exhibition Board Holds Euchre Party

PORT HOPE, April 23 —(ENS)—The Agricultural Society held a successful euchre and dance on Wednesday night at the Town Hall. The orchestra was exceptionally good and added much to the success of the dance.

The euchre was also much enjoyed by many with the high ladies' prize going to Mrs. Marvin while the second high ladies' prize necessitated a cut between Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Lowes.

The gentleman's high euchre prize was won by Mrs. Mulvey playing on a gent's card while second high went to Mr. Staples.

Dainty refreshments brought a most successful evening to a close.

Earnings at Home Help Buy "Extras"

Crocheting Earns $195 A Year

Tantalizing to want new furniture or new clothes, knowing you can't afford them—unless somehow you can earn the money at home.

But that's an idea! Why not? Other women earn at home in all sorts of ways, pleasant ways that take little of their time.

There's Mrs. J., who crochets potholders. Because she follows the rules of home business success she manages to earn $195 a year.

First of all, her potholders stand out. Instead of the usual square shape, hers are shaped like teapots, cups and saucers!

Second, she was smart about getting her market. She gave several acquaintances each a unique gift potholder; they were so enthusiastic they ordered in quantities and told their friends.

And she knew just what her outlay was. She figured each potholder cost her 10 cents, so she sold it quite profitably, at 25 cents.

If you don't crochet, you may choose one of many other ways to earn at home. Our 32-page booklet tells how to earn by sewing, knitting, cooking, typing and by just being useful. Explains the five rules of business success.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of "21 Ways to Earn Money At Home" to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

JUST A SINGLE DANGER

SUCCESSFUL play for a No Trump contract often depends upon protecting yourself against a single danger which threatens. Usually that consists of not letting the menacing defender gain the lead, whereas allowing his partner to have it would not entail any risk whatsoever. One such occasion comes when a particular defender has a set-up suit, ready to be run, and another when you have a guarded honor which is a stopper if led up to, but worthless if the lead comes through it.

North: ♠ Q 7 5 2 ♥ 10 6 3 2 ♦ J 6 4 ♣ J 9

West: ♠ 6 4 3 ♥ A K J 4 ♦ A 10 5 ♣ 8 6 3

East: ♠ A 10 9 8 ♥ Q 7 ♦ K 9 8 3 ♣ K Q 4

South: ♠ K J ♥ 9 8 5 ♦ Q 7 2 ♣ A 10 7 5 2

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT

This contract really should have been airtight, plus a possible extra trick, but one declarer, in the tournament where it was dealt, found a way to get himself beaten. After the club 5 lead to the J and K, he ran four hearts, discarding two spades from his own hand, and then took the diamond A and K. When he next led the diamond 9, North took it because South had shown foresight enough to put his Q on the K. In the lead, North put forth the club 9, and it was all over, for East's guarded Q was captured and four tricks scored in the suit.

Other declarers played the diamonds correctly after the same lead of the club 5 to the J and K. One of them went to work on the suit immediately, leading the 3 to the A and then the 10, which North ducked and East allowed to ride to the Q. South could not do any damage now. Hoping desperately that North had the heart Q, he led the 5, but East had that important card.

Consequently, four tricks in hearts, three in diamonds, one in clubs and one in spades made the contract perfectly safe, and still another one was taken because South got the next trick with his spade K and could cash only the club A before leading up to the club Q for the last trick. South could have prevented the extra trick by putting his spade K under the spade A, to make North's Q good, but would you have done that?

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ K Q J 4 ♥ 7 5 3 2 ♦ K J 8 5 2 ♣ None

West: ♠ A 9 6 5 2 ♥ 9 ♦ Q 10 6 3 ♣ A K 4

East: ♠ 10 8 7 3 ♥ 10 6 4 ♦ 9 7 ♣ J 10 8 6

South: ♠ None ♥ A K Q J 8 ♦ A 4 ♣ Q 9 7 5 3 2

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

If South gets into 4-No Trumps on this deal, doubled by West, who had bid spades and finally leads the club K, A and 4, how can South make his contract?

7,000,000 Voters Qualified To Mark Ballot

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, April 23 (CP)—Nearly 7,000,000 Canadians are expected to hold the necessary voting qualifications to cast ballots in the manpower plebiscite April 27, Dominion election officials estimate.

Between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 ballots are being printed on orders of Jules Castonquay, chief plebiscite officer. Provision has to be made for adequate supplies for all polling stations, and names appearing on lists prepared by enumerators may not represent the total who vote.

A qualified voter whose name does not appear on lists prepared by enumerators may cast a ballot after being vouched for by a voter whose name is on the list, and taking an oath.

As an indication of how Canadians turn out to vote, election officials said that the names of 6,588,888 electors appeared on the voters' list for the 1940 election. The total number of ballots cast was 4,672,531.

The civilian Canadians who will place their "X" after the "Yes" or "No" on the plebiscite ballot must have the following qualifications:

1. Be at least 21 years old.
2. Be a British subject by birth or nationality.
3. Have been a resident in Canada 12 months before polling day.
4. Have been ordinarily resident in the polling division on March 30, 1942.

Exceptions to Rule

The general rule is that all with such qualifications may cast a ballot, but there are 12 exceptions.

Among those who may not vote are judges appointed by the governor-in-council, Eskimos and Indians ordinarily resident on a reservation and who did not serve with the forces in the First Great War or the present war.

The term "Indian" includes any person of whole or part Indian blood entitled to receive any annuity or other benefit under any treaty with the crown.

Inmates of prisons, persons denied liberty of movement because of mental disease and those detained or interned under the defence of Canada regulations at the date of the vote may not cast ballots.

All Japanese, except about 40 who served with the Canadian forces in the last war, are disqualified because of a British Columbia law which denies them the vote.

The regulations set forth that a person cannot vote if he is disqualified by reason of his race from voting in a provincial election and did not serve in war with the Canadian forces.

A further section provides disqualification for a person whose racial origin is that of a country at war with Canada, if at the time the plebiscite regulations were made effective he or she would be disqualified by reason of race in any province from voting in a provincial election and had not served with the Canadian forces.

Exemption Claimants

The vote is not available to those who have been exempted or claim exemption from military service because of doctrines of religion making them averse to bearing arms, and who, by provincial law, cannot participate in provincial election voting.

Persons who have applied to national war services boards for exemption from compulsory military training under sections covering Mennonites, Doukhobors and conscientious objectors are also disqualified.

Inmates of institutions maintained by the government or a municipality for the poor are also disqualified if they are unable to vote in provincial elections, and did not serve in the armed forces.

Voting privileges are not enjoyed by those who have been disqualified under any law relating to the disqualification of electors for corrupt or illegal practices.

PIGEONS IN INDIA

NEW DELHI—(CP).—The Indian Government has issued an order, intended to prevent use of pigeons for communicating information to the enemy, forbidding personal control of pigeons except under a permit issued by a district magistrate.

Chosen As The Typical Employee In A Bren Gun Plant In Canada

Because she is an attractive, industrious girl, Ronnie Foster was chosen as a typical employee in the Bren gun plant where she is shown at work cleaning her machine.

New machinery developed for munitions work has made it easy for any girl to operate even the heaviest type of machine by merely pressing a button or pulling a lever.

Miss Foster, shown working at the left, appears above in her "best bib and tucker" ready to leave for a party held by the employees in one of the cafeterias of the factory.

Extra Gas Taboo Plebiscite Day

OTTAWA, April 23 — (CP). — Munitions Minister Howe told the House of Commons yesterday no special concessions can be made on gasoline rationing to get out voters for the manpower plebiscite on April 27.

The suggestion that some such concession be made had brought immediate repercussions from the Oil Administrator in the United States, Mr. Howe said. Canada was heavily dependent on the United States in respect to fuel. The loss of tankers had been heavy and the Canadian tanker fleet had suffered along with the rest.

Mr. Howe believed those who appreciated the plebiscite's importance would provide from their ration the gasoline needed to transport themselves and others to the polls.

Conservative House Leader Hanson regretted the decision. In many rural areas transportaiton would be a problem and he doubted if people would walk to the polls.

169 TeletypeMachines In War Departments

OTAWA, April 23 — (CP). — The Army, Navy and Air Force operate a total of 169 teletype machines, it was reported in a return made in the House of Commons on Tuesday for G. K. Fraser (Con. Peterborough West).

The Air Force has 119 machines with 187 operators, the Navy 46 machines with 61 operators, and the Army four machines with no personnel particularly designated as operators.

"Back Hurt–Arms Ached" Felt Tired Out; Run Down

Condition Followed Years of Troubles With Stomach and Constipation; Gets Wonderful Relief Taking Syntona.

"I am sure feeling a lot different from what I was a few weeks ago, and it's all due to taking a few bottles of Syntona," says Mr. Thomas Gawn, well-known resident of Wilton Grove, Ontario.

MR. THOMAS GAWN

"I had a sharp pain in my back that certainly did hurt me and, too, my arms were full of aches and pains. This trouble followed a long time of suffering with bad digestion. There seemed no end to the troubles I had with gas, bloated feeling and belching up of hot, sour liquids. Constipation was a daily worry to me. Whenever I moved quickly I'd get dizzy feelings with little black spots coming before my eyes. I had been this way for so long that I was badly rundown, felt tired all the time and just seemed to have no energy.

"But what a wonderful difference a few weeks on Syntona have made. For the first time in years I am rid of gassy stomach, sour acid risings, and all that misery after meals. My bowels are regular every day. The dizziness has cleared up and best of all those back pains and aches in my arms do not trouble me now. I sleep the whole night through and instead of being tired, nervous and fatigued, I get up in the morning feeling fully rested. It is great to feel so good again and I cannot recommend Syntona too highly for helping me so much."

If you, who read this, suffer as Mr. Gawn did, come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and get yourself a treatment of this grand herb and root Compound. Find out how Syntona can help you, too. Ask for the Syntona Representative. He will gladly tell you all about this great Herb and Root compound that is helping so many local men and women.—(Advt.)

Soviets Intern U.S. Crew In Tokyo Raid

"International Law"; Forced Down Limping For China

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer.

KUIBYSHEV, April 24—(AP). — Russia announced today that a United States bomber which raided Japan last Saturday and then lost its way has been int ned with its crew in the Russian maritime province on the Sea of Japan.

It appeared to be an already completed test of the year-old Japanese Russian neutrality pact but United States Embassy officials here said Ambassador William Standley had asked Washington for instructions.

The plane was said to have carried five men, one a captain. The short dispatch announcing the internment said that the airmen, "losing orientation, committed a forced landing on Soviet territory."

Loss of "orientation" was taken to mean that the plane was trying to make a landing in China.

(The Japanese, identifying the attackers as medium bombers, carrying crews of five, had said that apparently some planes flew on to China).

The only official account yet made public was circulated by Tass, official Soviet news agency, under a Khabarovsk dateline.

The dateline indicated the general locale of the forced landing, although none was specifically given. Khabarovsk is about 1,000 miles northwest of Tokyo and 400 miles due north of the main port of the maritime province, Vladivostok.

Tass said the fliers are held "in accordance with international law."

The United States consul general at Vladivostok, Angus Ward, was handling affairs for the Americans from that end.

Tip To Joyriders

OTTAWA, April 24—(CP). Oil Controller Cottrelle of Toronto was quoted today by the Munitions and Supply Department as saying that "So long as there is one joyrider wasting gasoline and rubber it cannot be said that Canada is engaging in a total war effort."

The Controller said some motorists seem to regard the rationing plan as an excuse to forget about conservation. "The ration is not intended to provide transportation for young men who flit from one night club to another, and such young men will do well to remember that their gasoline licence can be withdrawn at any time," he said.

Jap Troops Now 100 Miles Off Mandalay

NEW DELHI, India, April 24. — (CP).—The Japanese are within 100 miles of the important Burma city of Mandalay, it was disclosed today by a British communique which said new attacks were developing in the Taunggyi area.

This point 80 miles north of fallen Loikaw, is the deepest penetration in any of the three major thrusts of the Japanese.

It was not clear whether the advance was from Loikaw, which fell Tuesday, or from the Thailand border in a westward flanking action.

Reports of engagements in the Taunggyi and Shwenyaung areas were said to be meagre but the communique reported that fighting appeared to be progressing satisfactorily.

On the western flank the Japanese were reported digging in south of Yenangyaung, the oil town which was recaptured for the Allies by a British-Chinese counter-attack.

Mandalay itself and the neighboring area came under renewed enemy air attack, but the communique said no new damage or casualties were reported.

There was no report on action in the central sector of the front.

British Shift To Hold Line

LONDON, April 24 (CP)—Chinese withdrawal from Pyinmana, less than 150 miles south of Mandalay, under heavy pressure from Japanese land and air attacks, forced British and Indian troops under threat of encirclement to retire from Taungdwingyi, 40 miles farther northwest, a military commentator said today.

The British and Indian forces pulled out of their positions "most skilfully," to straighten the sagging Allied line, he declared.

Japanese forces, reinforced by fresh, rested troops and using planes and tanks, were reported throwing all their strength into the Burma battlefield in an effort to break through to Mandalay before heavy rains begin.

Chinese, British and Indian troops all of whom have fought for weeks without relief and rest, are battling all along the Burma front from the Shan States near the Siamese border westward to the Yenangyaung sector on the Irrawaddy to hold the

US To Double Its War Programs

Concentrating on Ships Now Says F.D.R. Only Line Lagging

WASHINGTON, April 24—(AP).—President Roosevelt declared today that the United States war production program is working out extremely well and hinted that another might be piled on top of the one which was called fantastic last January.

In his annual message to Congress on Jan. 6, the President set forth a schedule calling for a production in 1942 and 1943 of 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 anti-aircraft guns and 18,000,000 tons of commercial shipping.

The intimation that these tremendous goals might be expanded to assure a United Nations victory came when he was asked at a press conference whether he thought steel plants now being built or expanded would raise capacity sufficiently to meet all requirements.

No, he replied, he couldn't say that because there might be another program by the time the expansions and new plants are completed.

The president expressed a personal view that there still was too great civilian use of steel, but said that war production board officials had taken a contrary position. He said that this is being checked.

To an inquiry as to whether anything was being done to "revitalize shipbuilding," Mr. Roosevelt said that everybody was working on that at the present time. Referring to the difficulty of obtaining enough steel, he added that you can't make bread without flour.

He was informed that the ship construction program was regarded generally as the only portion of his January production plan which was lagging seriously behind.

Reminded About Loafers.

And he was reminded that Rear-Admiral Emory S. Land, defence shipping administrator, had testified that there was "'to damned much loafing" in shipyards on tre part of both labor and management.

The President commented that was a good burr under the tail of both management and labor. But responding to further questioning, he advanced the view that probably a shortage of steel plates was more responsible than slow downs for the lag in the shipbuilding phase of the war effort.

Admiral Pound Arrives By Air In Ottawa

OTTAWA, April 24 (CP)—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, ranking officer of the Royal Navy, arrived by United States Navy plane from Washington today for conferences with officials of the Royal Canadian Navy.

The First Sea Lord, accompanied by Admiral Sir Charles Little, chief of the British Admiralty delegation in Washington, and Capt. W. W. Davis, flag officer, landed secretly at nearby Uplands airport during the morning.

Newspapermen were advised at first that the visit was to be kept secret but some time later the navy's information branch announced officially that the British party was in the capital.

Vice-Admiral Percy W. Nelles, chief of naval staff, and other Navy officials met the visitors at the airport. Sir Dudley spent most of the morning at a meeting of the defence council and later attended an official luncheon with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, and Navy Minister Macdonald.

During the afternoon Sir Dudley was to meet the chiefs of staff committee headed by Admiral Nelles, Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of general staff and Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of air staff.

Late today he was to leave by plane for what the naval information branch described only as "another Canadian destination."

Sir Dudley has been in Washington for several days.

Subject of his discussions here was not made public.

Report Finns Bolstering Kalinin Front

New Type Fighters Aiding Soviets; Thaw Uncovers Booty

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer.

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, April 24—(AP).—Red Star said today Russian forces had captured "the Golden Range," a menacing German stronghold in the Crimea, but there were reports that some Finns had moved south to bolster Nazi divisions on the Kalinin front.

The Golden Range, not specifically located in the Soviet account, was said to have been taken after four days of sharp fighting. The Germans lost 300 killed, several big guns, 50 machine guns and dozens of trench mortars, said Red Star, the Russian army newspaper.

The Germans were said to have routed the Russians once from freshly-captured positions before finally capitulating.

With the main sectors of the German-Russian front still slushy, fighting flared spasmodically in the deep south and the north, where the battlefields were respectively dry and still frozen.

Russian advices said the Red army broke through a sector the Finnish front before Leningrad last week and knifed through the Finnish lines in Karelia this week. There has been nothing here since to indicate a lessening of the Soviet drives.

Hopkins Clears Plane Tangle

LONDON, April 24—(CP).—One result achieved by Harry Hopkins on his recent visit to London was elimination of the tangle over plane modifications which at one time nearly caused United States manufacturers to refuse British orders, Daily Mail said today.

F.D.R. Agrees

LONDON, April 24—(CP). —Prime Minister Churchill has received a message from President Roosevelt that he agreed with all the conclusions reached by U.S. Chief of Staff, Gen. George Marshall, after his visit to Britain, an informed source said today.

The remainder of this dispatch on the Roosevelt-to-Churchill message was stopped by the British censor.

Upon his arrival in London the United States chief of staff told reporters the United States wants "to expand over here."

Norse Teachers Herded Off To Arctic Labor

STOCKHOLM, April 24.—(AP)—The Oslo correspondent of the newspaper Social Demokraten reported today that 500 Norwegian school teachers, jammed below decks in a small ship designed to accommodate half that number, have been shipped to a Nazi work camp in the Arctic zone under circumstances so bad that some became insane.

The correspondent estimated 1,100 teachers have been arrested for their revolt against the Nazi-sponsored regime of Vidkun Quisling and shipped to labor camps in the far north, where they presumably are being forced to work on Nazi defence installations.

The dispatch said police "acted brutally" in herding the latest contingent aboard ship at Trondheim, while once under way the teachers suffered from hopelessly inadequate water and food supplies and sanitary facilities.

In answer to protests from clergy and even members of his own party, Quisling was said to have announced: "These teachers are guilty of criminal offences. Clergymen should try to persuade them to come to their right minds."

Great Assault Sees Bulk Of Night Raiders Concentrate On Town In Crippling Blow, German AA Gunners Run Out Of Ammunition

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, April 24—(CP Cable).—Canadians helped the R.A.F. in a smashing night attack on Rostock, Nazi supply base for the Finnish front, it was revealed today.

Officials said that returning Canadians, part of R.A.F. formations, reported Rostock was "really blasted."

Authorities professed to see a tieup between Rostock and the raid on Luebeck March 28 in which Canadians participated, as both are key points in the Nazi supply system. However, the authorities were loath, on the basis of preliminary reports, to term the night's attack as severe as the Luebeck operation.

"All we could see of Rostock was a square of fire as we headed homeward," said a Canadian. "The town was lit up from end to end. The flames were visible for 60 miles."

It was stated in London that the Rostock attack was part of a new British bombing strategy to concentrate the bulk of aircraft in operation on a single night on one town and wipe, at least for the time being, one target from the list of objectives.

The flying distance from London to Rostock is about 530 miles, 50 less than to Berlin.

"Greyish smoke rolling up from the fires of Rostock was insufficient to blot out the town completely," said Sgt. R. W. Taylor, Victoria, B.C., navigator aboard a Whitley bomber.

Great Feeder Outlet.

The Germans had been reported sending streams of war supplies from Rostock to the Russian-Finnish fronts.

"Four of our aircraft are missing," the Ministry reported.

The attack was "heavy and quite successful," authorities said.

British observers were quick to link the thrust with the mass assault March 28 on Luebeck which, like Rostock, is a vital base in Germany's war transportation routes.

Rostock lies between Luebeck and Stettin, another major Baltic supply port which has been a target of the R.A.F. offensive aimed at doing all possible to aid Soviet Russia.

A shipbuilding and seaplane factory centre as well as a supply base, it is situated on the estuary of the Warnow River eight miles from Warnemuende, a seaplane base. It is linked with Denmark by a train ferry.

Two German bombers were shot down over Britain in the night. A Dornier crashed in flames in an isolated area. Crew members baled out before the plunge and were captured.

More than a dozen Britons were reported killed in the German attacks, and there was considerable damage to dwellings.

In one southeast English town five persons, including three firewatchers, were killed and three were seriously injured. A high explosive

Scalp Operation On Corvette Get Stoker OBE

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX, April 24 (CP)—Florent Morin of Sherbrooke, Que., claims he is "just a dirty fireman" aboard a harbor craft here, but to fellow merchant seamen he is the iron-nerved chap who last November used the pitching deck of a Canadian Corvette as an operating room and, with fish hooks and curtain clasps as surgical instruments, saved the life of a Norwegian sailor.

Incidentally, he won the Order of the British Empire for the feat, but the 23-year-old French-Canadian doesn't think that is half as important as the fact that his emergency patient lived.

Morin and the Norwegian were thrown together in a lifeboat after their ship had been torpedoed off Iceland. "The chap was sitting there, not saying a word, with his scalp ripped off and hanging down his back like a hood," Morin said.

For three hours they drifted while the French-Canadian attempted to ease the Norwegian's pain by feeding him some sleeping tablets he had stored away in his waterproof seaman's kit. Finally a Canadian Cor-

Attacker Named By 56 Women

NEW YORK, April 24—(AP).—A swarthy, 30-year-old man, six feet tall and weighing 240 pounds, sat in Brooklyn's Parkville police station yesterday as 56 women came in—one by one—to look at him.

Three of the women, with blind fury, beat him with their pocketbooks until police intervened. At the sight of him other women burst into tears. Some became hysterical.

All identified him, Acting Captain James Dowdell said, as the man who had robbed and attempted to attack them in apartment house elevators.

Dowdell quoted the man, booked as Eugene Levine of Brooklyn, as estimating that he had attacked at least 88 women in the last four months. He was charged with assault, robbery and attempted rape.

Showdown Fast Nearing in Indian Ocean

Hint Allies About To Jump Madagascar—Fleet Shortcutting To Aid Somerville

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

Events seem to be developing rapidly towards a major showdown between Japan and Britain in the Indian Ocean, and that means a great Naval battle.

Japans control of the Eastern Indian Ocean, and the danger that this domination may be extended throughout the vast sea, is one of the grave hreats to the Allied cause. The Middle East, whose shores are washed by the Indian Ocean, has been designated by Hitler as the possible meeting ground of the Axis forces. Should the Japs and the Nazis manage to join hands there it mihgt mean a 30-year war.

There are two new signs pointing to a possibility major engagement in the Indian Ocean. One is the indication that the Allies may be preparing to take over the strategic French Island of Madagascar, which dominates the shipping routes around the Cape of Good Hope into the Indian Ocean, to keep the Japs from occupying it. The second is a tiny news item which is cryptic, but suggests huge possibilities.

This latter is the report in Vichy that a powerful British flotilla, including a battleship, has passed through the Strait of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean. There is no satisfactory explanation of where these fighting ships are going, and it must be admitted there are several missions on which they might be bent. Still in view of the emergency in the Indian Ocean one can't help feeling this flotilla may well be taking a short cut through the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal to help deal with the Japanese fleet.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons April 13 that the Nipponese had in the Bay of Bengal at least three battleships, five aircraft carriers, a number of heavy and light cruisers and several flotillas of destroyers. And that is a formidable fleet.

We have no exact check on the British naval force under the famous Admiral Sir James Somerville in those waters, but it's smaller than the Japanese. However, should the mystery flotilla now plowing through the Mediterranean be on its way to reinforce Somerville, it might mean a sufficient levelling off of relative strength so that the British would challenge the Japanese.

British reinforcements also would be necessary in event the Allies do occupy Madagascar. Most Allied military experts have been praying the operation would be carried out before the Axis could take over this great island.

If it were in the hands of the Japs they could play havoc with the supply routes to India and to the Middle East, which in turn feeds Russia. A filip has been given to the hope of Allied occupation by the fact that South Africa, the dominion near Madagascar, has suddenly severed diplomatic relations with Vichy. The union may have been assigned the job.

A glance at the map will show how Madagascar dominates the shipping lane as it swings round the Cape of Good Hope and enters the Indian Ocean.

MAYMYO, April 8 (Delayed) — (CP). — Japanese bombers heavily raided Maymyo, temporary capital Burma to-day, killing or wounding 100 persons and damaging civilian property. The attack was confined to civilian areas.

A Hamlet Declares War

1st Bombs Waken Welsh Village From 2-Yr. Peace

LONDON, April 24 — (CP). — A sleepy, remote village in the Berwin Mountains of Wales has just gone to war officially with Germany—more than 2½ years after the rest of Great Britain.

The village, whose name is being withheld, always has been strongly Nationalist. Everybody speaks Welsh and the war was a "foreign" one declared by the English in London and the villagers would have none of it.

The other night, however, a German bomber dropped a stick of bombs on the mountain nearby. The roof of the village chapel was riddled. The windows of many houses were blown in and slates flew from the roofs.

Anger flamed in the village. The elders held a meeting and made a formal declaration.

Every man, woman and child has a personal responsibility to defeat Hitler and help the United Nations win, they proclaimed.

1 U.S.-3 Jap Planes Enough

Good For Air Rule, Halt Land Push Says Pawley

CAIRO, April 24 — (AP). — If the United Nations can get one-third as many planes as the Japanese into action in vital theatres of the Pacific, they "can knock them right out of the air and hamper if not stop altogether their land advances," William D. Pawley, co-founder of the American Volunteer Group now fighting in Burma, said to-day.

He emphasized, however, that a steady flow of replacements and spare parts is essential in any circumstances.

Pawley, who erected the first American airplane factories in China and India as founder-president of Intercontinent Aviation, is en route to the United States. He expects to return to India in several months.

From observations, Pawley said the average Japanese fighter pilot is distinctly inferior to United Nations fliers but Japanese bomber pilots—with 4½ years of practice in China—are excellent.

Chinese fliers, when sufficiently trained, are more than a match for the Japanese, he added.

Turning to the situation in India, Pawley said:

"It is inconceivable to me that the Japanese will make the mistake of trying to invade India. If they do I am convinced the Indian people will put up much greater resistance than is believed possible almost anywhere."

LORD BEAVERBROOK SEES SECOND FRONT AS KEY TO VICTORY

Paints Nazis' Finish In Russia

Demands Red Theory Of Attack Be Used In Fighting NY Speech

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP)—By holding the Germans in check, "possibly even by defeating them," the Russians may be the means of bringing down the whole Axis structure, says Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's former minister of production.

"Russia may settle the war for us in 1942," Lord Beaverbrook declared last night before the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Calling for a great offensive by Britain in the west, he said:—

"This is a chance, an opportunity to bring the war to an end here and now. But if the Russians are defeated and driven out of the war, never will such a chance come to us again.

'Strike out to help Russia. Strike out violently. Strike even recklessly. but in any event such blows that real help will be our share and contribution to the Russian battlefront."

The British publisher, who recently left Prime Minister Churchill's cabinet to come to the United States on a government mission, said that he believed in the Russian theory that "the best form of defence is attack."

Lord Beaverbrook made no effort to minimize the misfortunes Britain has been surviving on her present home front, and he also made an ardent defence of Joseph Stalin and his generals.

"We know that the Russians kill more Germans every day than all the Allies put together," he said. "We know they destroy more enemy tanks, bring down more enemy planes than any of us or all of us. Russia is the fighting front...Communism under Stalin has produced the best generals in this war."

Use the Russian Slogan, 'Attack'

In elaborating upon his advocacy of the Russian system of attack, Lord Beaverbrook told the editors that it was his opinion that "Britain should adopt it (the Russian attack idea) by setting up somewhere along the 2,000 miles of coastline now held by the Germans, a second front in Western Europe."

Detailing British losses with utter frankness, Lord Beaverbrook

vette—commanded by a Vancouver man—loomed up out of the night and took aboard the survivors.

"I never saw anything like the manoeuvring that chap did," Morin said. "The submarine that sank us launched two torpedoes at the Corvette while we were being picked up and each time the commander swung his ship out of range, yet never once left us."

So He Operated.

Aboard the corvette Morin found no doctor — instead there was a sick boy attendant who was only too glad to have the courageous survivor operate on the injured Norwegian. "I studied some medicine while at college in Paris and Montreal," he said, "so had a vague idea of what to do.'

First he washed the wounds and carefully placed the bleeding scalp back in position.

The next step was infinitely more difficult. The scalp had to be clamped in position so it could be sewn properly. "I used fish hooks and curtain clasps as clamps ' Morin said, "and horse hairs ripped from seamen's coats as thread. I had a needle in my seaman s kit.'

For the entire three hours—the duration of the operation — the Norwegian was conscious. "He smoked cigaret after cigaret during the time,' Morin said, "and I told him every funny story I knew. He winced only when the needle dug too deeply and swore occasionally. He was the bravest man I ever saw."

Several days later they arrived in Iceland and the patient was placed in hospital. "The doctors said I had done a good job, but I felt embarrassed when the Norwegian insisted on kissing my hands in front of everybody."

As for Morin's feelings during the operation, 'well,' he said with a typical Gallic shrug, 'it was repulsive but necessary.'

ATHLETE'S FOOT GOES QUICK

Or Money Back

If you have Athlete's Foot, with itching and burning of the feet and raw, sore cracks between the toes, you should not neglect immediate treatment because this may become a very serious ailment. Go to any Tamblyn Store and get a bottle of Coristol. Just one application will stop the itching and burning and a few days' use will completely kill the germ causing the infection. Easy and pleasant to use, not expensive. Cortisol is a real formula for Athlete's Foot. Money back if you are not satisfied.—(Advt.)

Bestard Corner Long Known As "Toll Gate"

To the survivors of that generation whose boyhood saw the accomplishment of Confederation and the first Hun humiliation of France in modern times, the Bestard corner on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway is still the "Toll Gate."

"A man amed Jason Lundy used to live at that corner where Robert Bestard resided for so long," one of the elders told the Examiner last night. "Lundy was the man who used to collect the tolls from those who drove along that road from Peterborough south and west to Springville and further on.

There was another toll gate at Scotts Corners. I understand that these roads were laid out and gravelled by private groups. You might say they were owned by companies. That was one of the beginnings of our highway system. Well, these men spent their money on improving these macadam roads and they had the right to collect tolls to meet their expenses and perhaps there was some profit, too. The toll used to be five or ten cents.

Farmers who were unwilling to pay the road tolls went by longer routes. If they were going home to North Monaghan they'd go down the boundary, Monaghan Road to No. 7 Highway, Lansdowne street, then westerly over Harper's Hill.

If they were going further down the road and wished to avoid the toll gate at Scott's Corners, they simply drove on down Monaghan Road to Crawford's Grove and then turned west, going out past the old town hall, and so on until they came to the present highway.

At one time there was a school house opposite the Jason Lundy place; you might be able to find some of its bricks around there yet. I dont know what happened.

What kind of gates were used at these toll spots? Just big gates similar to those used at farm lanes.

There have been many cases in which British and German fliers came down in neutral Eire. The Irish held that their position was clearly dictated by international law—the fliers were interned for the duration. The indications in the present incident were that Russia likewise was following international law to the letter.

"No Cause for Quarrel"

TOKYO, (from Japanese broadcasts), April 24 — (AP). — Tokyo morning papers printed articles today reviewing Japanese relations with Soviet Russia and expressing belief they would remain harmonious despite the world situation.

(There was no reference to Russian dispatches reporting that a United States plane which participated in the raid on Tokyo last Saturday had landed on Soviet territory and had been interned.

Tomikazu Hori, Japanese information bureau spokesman, said at press conference the U.S. government had not yet issued a communique on last Saturday's air raids in Japan because "it has no way of communicating with the American warplanes which attacked Japan."

Domei said that Hiri, answering a with respect to this comment, implied that none of the raiders had question by a neutral correspondent returned to their bases.

Excess US Wheat May Cut Prices

WASHINGTON, April 24—(AP)—Although much of the world is starving, war curtailment of foreign trade and a record surplus of wheat in the United States soon will lead Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard to advise American farmers they must reduce production further or be content with lower prices.

The forthcoming bread-grain crop and the carryover from previous years are expected to provide a supply greater than this country's transportation and storage facilities can handle. Officials predict the supply will be sufficient to meet the normal needs of the country for two years.

On the other hand, virtually the whole of Europe—particularly German-occupied Belgium, France, the Netherlands, Greece and the Balkans, as well as Italy and unoccupied France, and Spain — are on short bread rations. Germany itself is running short of supplies. Europe normally depends upon overseas sources for much of its wheat.

U.S. To Double

He said he doubted that on the whole a great percentage of the slow down was due to loafing, although the percentage might be high in an individual yard. But there is a shortage of steel plates all over the country, he said. Mr. Roosevelt remarked that it must be remembered that both the Maritime Commissions program of building cargo vessels and the Navy's program for constructing warships had been increased, resulting in a shortage of both steel shapes and plates.

To a question on whether priorities were delaying the shipbuilding efforts—he was informed of complaints that others were getting the steel which shipyards wanted—the President said that of course anybody who does not get what he wants shouts about priorities.

Plenty Of Scrap

Something is being done, Mr. Roosevelt said, to increase the capacity of the steel industry, but he was unable to supply a definite figure. It takes about a year to build a new plant, he said.

The president, under questioning, said he had not had any reports that because of bottlenecks some aviation plants had had to lay off men.

He voiced the opinion that there was not great problem involved in scrap iron and steel as there is plenty now.

The president said he had never heard of a proposal that laborers take up old street car rails now buried under asphalt where cars have been replaced by buses. But he said that was a good idea and he would pass it along.

Lawn Bowling

In order that all schedule rinks may be completed by Friday May 1, there will be a special meeting on Monday night of the board of directors and of the skips who have not yet completed the personnel of their rinks. The move was brought about after it was disclosed that many of the rinks still need members and many of our last season's members have not yet signed up with any skip.

President Fred Dearborn accepted the chair and he briefly outlined the object of the meeting. It was mainly for the purpose of boosting the membership of the club, and before the meeting was over several of the boys who have the interest of the club at heart, offered their services to act as a membership committee.

Howard Clegg, chairman of the Games Committee, reported that his committee is all caught up with their work and have gone as far as they can and are not waiting for the membership committee to hand in the personnel of all rinks.

It was suggested—and a good suggestion it is—that if the players would please sign their cards and send them along with the usual fee to Secretary Fred Brown it would help an awful lot. It would save time and the board of directors would know exactly 'who's who."

Sergeant Major Of Today Must Be Psychologist

Why did so many warrant officers and senior NCO's from the Rangers keep early morning vigil at the railway station this morning as the Toronto train pulled out Had they gone to bed too early, the night before, did they really want to give Andy Jackson a sendoff to his course at Long Branch, or were they making sure that he was out of the city before they began trying out their own rules and regulations? Ask his successor, acting RSM George Weir, or those other members of the Sergeants' Mess, Gramp Fields, Gar Poole, Skeats Walsh, Curly Curtain, Whitie, Bruce Rollins, Tom Mason or Bill Sunderland—they were all there. They made sure Andy got as far as Monaghan road. Although they left him in the safekeeping of Max Comtock, it was obvious from his farewell to "Alec"—in deepest Scots accents—that he was not dead to sentiment. It was a fine sendoff for a fine Ranger. But his early rising did not curb the enthusiasm if Andy's successor, and for a moment it seemed as if the days of the hard-as-nails Regimental-Sergeant-Major were back. Scarcely an hour later George boomed to the whole regiment, "once I too had beautiful hair," and doffed his cap to show them the tonsorial sacrifice he had made for his country. He made so forceful a plea for similar patriotism from his men that many suspected collusion with the regiment barber.

N.C.O.'S COURSE

For most of the N.C.O.'s of the Prince of Wales Rangers rifle regiment, yesterday was the first day they actually saw a Bren gun taken apart and put together again. Sergt. Instructor Griffin explained the intricate details of the most easily carried of guns with which members of Canada's armed forces will be equipped. The gun may be operated by one or two men and may be carried by one man who will be relieved at intervals by other soldiers.

Major J. R. Bolton, acting officer commanding, in the afternoon explained that three Bren guns form part of the fighting equipment of each platoon in a rifle regiment—in other words for each ten fighting men, one Bren gun in addition to each man being furnished with a rifle.

Members of the N.C.O.'s class are drawing to the close of the first week of an intensive course in which it is planned to rapidly present to the class most of the essential information with which an N.C.O. must carry on. Lectures by Major Bolton, R.S.M. Andy Jackson and Capt. J. Morley being highlights of the course so far but sight must not be lost of the invaluable information given to N.C.O.'s by Capt. Dawson, medical officer in the matter of the care of one's self that he may be able to give the best that is in him for the common cause.

Mutual instruction in the squad and rifle drills are favorites with the N.C.O.'s for it gives each the opportunity to stand up in front of a squad, give commands, and thus prepare himself for the day he will stand before a squad or platoon and move them without the assistance of a kindly sergeant or C.S.M. to check him on the errors he will make. Voice culture is most essential and for this purpose, N.C.O.'s are spread many yards apart and must give commands that will be heard clearly by those to whom the commands are given.

Must Be a Psychologist

Gone are the days when a "hard boiled" regimental sergeant major, possibly with a waxed moustache adorning his upper lip, would order his men with the dignity of a roaring lion. So declared R.S.M. Andy Jackson of the P.W.R.'s in one of his lectures. The Regimental Sergeant Major of today must be a psychologist of the first order—he must understand men. No man is expected, when he changes over from civilian life to that of a soldier, to know all the rules right away that he will eventually come to know as daily routine. N.C.O.'s and officers in the army of today must be understanding. Discipline is rigid but it does not seem nearly so "tough" when the soldier understand why it must be stiff.

Knowledge of the rifle, the basic weapon of an infantry regiment is fast becoming less of a puzzle to most N.C.O.'s. The army rifle is something that few civilians have a chance to study and it is unlike most rifles used by hunters. C.S.M. George Weir's lectures have proved most instructive and comprehensive and in another few days N.C.O.'s will be ready to hie off to the Range.

SIMPLIFICATION OF DRILL

In Part 1 Orders which were published yesterday by the Prince of Wales Rangers appeared a district order eliminating many complex exercises and movements which were the joy of the drill sergeant and the bane of the man in the ranks—marching in slow time, forming platoon or squad, and many rifle movements. In the words of the order:

"Drill is to teach and maintain discipline. It is essential that it should be done extremely well. Quality matters far more than variety and quantity. No more time should be spent on it than is absolutely necessary to achieve its object. Thus while the standard should be higher than ever before it is necessary to reduce the time devoted to it. Accordingly the number of movements in close order and arms drill will be reduced."

This simplified training goes on daily in the Armouries and on the parade ground. Each day the improvement in the smartness of the men becomes more apparent and their ability to act as a unit increases.

Fresh Dressed Poultry Market Quiet

TORONTO, April 24 — (CP). — The fresh dressed poultry market is very quiet, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports.

Receipts are practically nil with the exception of small lots of broilers and a few fowl. There is a good demand locally for these.

The demand generally is being taken care of from storage holdings with stock of fowl here very light. There are no offerings from the West of this class of poultry. Out-of-town movement of chicken (frozen) has been good, one car going forward to Montreal and a further 12,000 lbs. being shipped to northern and eastern points.

There is only a fair demand for chicken locally. One car of chicken arrived from the west, consisting of Grade A milk-fed and Grade B milk-fed costing 28¼ cents lb. and 27½ cents lb. respectively, at Toronto. There were very few boxes of B milk-fed in this car.

Some dealers are not sending out quotations, and what prices are available are purely nominal.

Broilers.—Grade A milk-fed, 29c lb; Grade B milk-fed, 28c lb.

Fowl.—Grade A, over 5 lbs. 24c lb.; 4½ to 5 lbs. 23c lb.; 4 to 4½ lbs. 22c lb; Grade B, over 5 lbs, 22c; 4½ to 5 lbs. 21c; 4 to 4½ lbs, 20c.

$186,000 Co-Op Business Years Volume

Co-operative Services reported a business volume of $186,000 in 1941 at their second annual meeting last night.

The year's operations were reflected by the advance from $5,000 in January last year to $31,000 in the following December. Assets on December 31 last amounted to $55,000 with $58,000 liabilities.

The deficit of $3,000 at the end of the first two years of operations was regarded by the members as a satisfactory beginning for this farmers' co-operative enterprise in the face of competition which they recognize as having been accentuated since their entry into this endeavor to set up an institution of farmers, for farmers and conducted by farmers.

The financial statement showed $12,000 unpaid accounts, and to encourage more prompt payment a new bylaw forfeits patronage dividends in bills are not paid by the 20th of the month succeeding that in which they were incured.

The members retained their board of directors for another year: Ralph Staples, C. E. Moore, Willard Waterman, Vernon Campbell, Albert Armstrong, Clarence Mann and Carman Seymour.

Herb H. Hannam and Howard Clemes, general manager, Toronto, attended the meeting.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, April 24 — (CP). — Prices on the local cattle market yesterday closed out the week on a steady note as the week's fair volume of offerings was absorbed. Only forty-eight head arrived yesterday, which number was added to the previous day's holdover of 100 head.

Now that packers have returned to the market, livestock men here expect another fairly good cattle run for next week's trading. Substantial shipments are still going to the States and, if the present volume of exports continue, it is expected that the export quota will be filled in another three weeks, a month and one half ahead of time. Should beef prices be adjusted as hinted at Wednesday by Hon. J. G. Taggart, Dominion Food Controller, the movement of cattle across the border, it is felt, will slow down.

In other classes of livestock yesterday, hogs ruled firm and veal calves steady. No sheep or lamps were offered.

Last Minute News

BIRMINGHAM—(CP).—The next few weeks "may be more fateful for the future of the world than any since Dunkirk," L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India and Burma said today. "They will decide whether our enemy has shot his bolt and the end is in sight," he told the Unionist annual meeting here.

LONDON. — (CP) — There is a growing belief in Ceylon that the Japanese battle fleet reported in Indian waters has withdrawn from the Bay of Bengal, probably to Singapore, the Colombo correspondent of the London Daily Mail said today. The correspondent cabled that British naval forces had been ranging the Bay of Bengal in search of the fleet without success.

Fighting Yanks Outwit Japs In North Burma

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WITH THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEER GROUP IN BURMA, April 16—(Delayed)—(AP).—Driven out of Mingaladon and then Magwe, the fighting Yanks of the American Volunteer Group, with the colors of China and Britain on their plane wings, now are braced against the inevitable heavy Japanese assaults on their new base defending Northern Burma.

Already they have cracked down on the enemy's numerically-superior forces. In two dogfights spaced 48 hours apart, ranging 100 miles over the Green Mountains of China's Yunnan Province and Burma's Shan states, the American pilots broke up a swarm of Japanese air raiders and blasted 15 out of the sky for certain. Five other enemy planes probably were destroyed in the combat.

The Japanese planes were on a special 1,000-mile mission, equipped with extra gas tanks, and were out to catch the A.V.G. aground. Twice, however, the heavily-gunned Japanese Zero fighters fell into an ambush in the clouds.

The waiting Yanks raked them with a savage fire and Japanese planes hurtled from the skies, trailing clouds of white smoke, to plunge flaming into paddyfields and verdant jungle growths.

A Texan, who was a Royal Air Force sergeant pilot in Canada after washing out at the U.S. Air Corps Training School at Love Field, Dallas, Tex., had the closest call of the American pilots. During the course of the melee he got on the tail of a Zero fighter and, because

Disgrace, Debar Quebec Lawyer

MONTREAL, April 24 — (CP).—Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure to-day passed suspended sentence on Jean L. Tarte, 36, former Montreal lawyer, who pleaded guilty on March 16 to charges of conspiring to help prospective trainees escape compulsory military training.

In pronouncing sentence, Mr. Justice Lazure said: "Your disgrace is the hardest sentence I can pronounce. I am giving you a suspended sentence for three reasons.

"You have saved considerable costs to the province in pleading guilty....I have before me an order of the Bar of the District of Montreal depriving you of the right to practice your profession for the rest of your life....You wished to repair the harm you have caused to the Army by enlisting yourself."

Tarte was formerly a captain in a reserve regiment but resigned his commission on March 17. Ten days later he was accepted as a private in the St. Hyacinthe Regiment.

He appeared in Court of King's Bench to-day wearing his uniform.

WHO OWNED THE COW.

Mrs. Ken McCannan was warned when she moved to Peterboro that strange things happen in this neck of the woods but she was hardly prepared for a sight which she saw this week. A two year old steer was cantering along the street in the west end, nibbling grass when it felt like it, and generally enjoying that quiet atmosphere which pervades the residential section. Suddenly a car came zooming down the street, stopped beside the steer, and the driver, collared the beast opened the rear door of the sedan and proceeded to stuff the hefty animal into the back seat. After a struggle the cattle rustler or whoever he was succeeded in the unusual task, and drove off with the steer. Mrs. McCannan just let it go, and figured that carting beef steers around in nicely upholstered automobiles was probably one of the quaint customs of this district.—McG.

Youth Is Fined For Failing To Attend Drill

COBOURG, April 24.—(ENS). — "This is the most flagrant case we ever had. He refused to attend parades even when a personal summons was sent to him," stated Captain C. Atkinson of the Midland Regiment, when Reginald Gordon of Cobourg, appeared before the magistrate on a charge of failing to attend the drills of the militia unit to which he belonged. He was fined $5 or ten days.

Gordon said that he didn't like "this Home Guard stuff." His age is 21. The accused said further that he intended to join the navy and get into active service. Something always turned up to prevent his attending drill, the youth stated. Captain Atkinson stated that Gordon was absent off and on from drill for about a year. On one occasion he sent a sergeant and a guard to locate him and found him at the movies.

Mrs. Thomas Fry Adresses YPU

CAMPBELLFORD, April 24. — (ENS).—Mrs. Thomas Fry gave the topic "Consecreation" at the weekly meeting of Zion Young People's Union which was held Wednesday evening. She spoke before one of the largest gatherings of the season and in her remarks stressed the importance of "acquiring the spirit to live as the Master would have you live." Mrs. Fry, who also had charge of the devotional service, stressed this same theme in the scripture reading and prayer by F. W. Barnum. Other items included a vocal solo by Mrs. Aylmer Petherick, a reading by Mrs. Elsie Walker, a quartette comprising Miss N. Arkles, Mrs. Thos. Fry and Mr. A. Petherick. During the business period, for which Vice-President Norma Arkles presided, Mrs. E. Irwin and Mrs. E. Walker were appointed devotional anld recreational conveners respectively for the next meeting. At the close F. W. Barnum conducted a geography match and teams were selected by Mrs. A. Petherick and Mrs. John Simpson with the latter group winning the contest by a narrow margin.

First Aid Class Attracts 90 People

PORT HOPE, April 24—(ENS).—A class of over ninety members turned out to the Emergencies in War Classes held in the Library Hall on Thursday night. This class was conducted by Dr. Tucker on haemorrhage—consisting of causes, classification and signs of haemorrhage. Correct approach to patient; the general care of a haemorrhage patient; how to elevate the patient and how to use a tourniquet.

Dr. Tucker explained the most important arteries and the treatment to be used in each case. In many instances he gave personal illustrations of cases and the care that had been given in each.

The class was told that this lecture was one of the most important and one that must be put into practise immediately a haemorrhage occurs, for a patient is apt to bleed to death in twenty minutes or less if not given the proper treatment immediately.

Next Thursday night's lecture will be a review of the lectures so far and the answering of all questions. Mrs. Britton will be in charge of this class.

Economy Hints Feature Talk

PORT HOPE, April 24.—(ENS)—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Association of the United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday with a good attendance, the devotional period was conducted by group four with Mrs. W. Deer presiding. Mrs. William Elliott read Rev. Duncan McTavish's Easter sermon which he had used in London, Ont., on Easter Sunday. Mr. McTavish having been a former pastor of the Port Hope United Church made this doubly interesting to this group of ladies. A delightful solo was sung by Miss Evelyn McBride, "In An Old Fashioned Town." Mrs. Deer then introduced Mrs. J. W. Foote as guest speaker.

Mrs. Foote chose as her subject "Business As Usual." In England if a business place has been bombed at night the following morning a card appears in the window "Business as Usual" which shows the marvelous comeback the English have made and how their whole routine of living has been changed and how the Canadian women will have to change their routine of housekeeping and apply themselves to other more important war work. The rationing of sugar, cheese, bacon and gas and many other things depend entirely on the housewife.

Mrs. Foote stressed the point of how important it is for the women of today to read, to attend lectures is not of as great importance as reading, for it is of the greatest importance that the women of today know the history of war industry and munitions.

Mrs. Foote stressed the importance of the co-operation of the housewife in the collection of salvage, merchandise delivery and a "yes" vote on the plebiscite.

In conclusion Mrs. Foote quoted an article written by Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin entitled "The Slogan for Canada:

Eat it up
Wear it out
Make it do.

Miss Beth Thompson favored the group with a piano solo "L'Avalance."

Mrs. Deer then moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Foote for her most interesting talk and to Evelyn McBride and Beth Thompson for their delightful solos.

The president, Mrs. Bruce Hyne, then conducted the business meeting. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read.

It was unanimously decided to cancel the strawberry festival for this year and a group collection will be taken instead.

The Land Settlement Plan

The Honorable Ian Mackenzie has laid before the Dominion Parliament a scheme for settling soldiers on the land after the war which will be of interest to all Canadians. The country has already decided to make provision for men who wish to do other kinds of work when they return, and it is only fair that agriculture should have its chance. Canada needs farmers, and the Pensions Minister tells Parliament that 33,000 out of 200,000 men who have been questioned in the matter have expressed a desire to go on the land. The plan as it stands makes provision for the settlement of 25,000 men.

Canadians are bound to regard such a scheme with a jaundiced eye, for the plan to settle men on the land after the last war did not work out well. There were many reasons for this failure; for one thing, the soldier-farmers were given equipment and stock when prices were high, and they had to sell their produce when prices were low, involving repeated revaluations of their farms with loss to the Government every time. As loss to the Government simply means loss to the people as a whole the scheme was soon unpopular and was regarded as a failure. It also appeared that many men were put on the land at their own request who did not have the makings of farmers in them. This is understandable; a man who returns from the horror, excitement and stimulation of war may honestly believe that he wants the peace and security of rural life, with its daily routine and little change save the continuous round of the seasons. A year on a farm, however, changes his views; he discovers that farm work is hard, that it is as insecure as any other occupation, and that its daily routine and the unpredictable behavior of the weather drives him melancholy-mad. It would be a good thing if no returned soldier went on a farm of his own until he had worked for six months on a farm belonging to somebody else; in that time he could learn whether he was temperamentally fitted for farm life.

The Minister of Pensions has attempted to avoid the mistakes of the previous plan and the main points of his present scheme are these: (1) The soldier who wants to become a farmer must show the Government board that he is fitted to do so, and if he needs training, he is to have it. (2) He must pay 10 per cent. of the value of the land which he takes up before he does so; this is to give him an immediate personal interest in it. (3) He will receive a grant from the Government of one-third of the cost of his land, and a further grant of the full cost of his stock and equipment, which will be furnished to him. (4) The result of this financial arrangement will be that he will have fixed costs each year of his taxes and $100 in addition. This figure has been reckoned as a fair one, payable without hardship and without reducing the soldier-farmer's standard of living below a decent level.

At its introduction this plan evoked some fairly hot debate, the opposers basing their attacks chiefly upon the failure of the previous plan. Perhaps they spoke too hastily. It cannot be expected that, when this war is over, the financial position of this country will be rosy, but the system of price control which we now have should do a great deal to prevent inflations, booms and depressions. Price control will have to be eased off gradually; a sudden removal of its influence would create an impossible state of affairs. As the system applies to agricultural produce as well as to everything else, there seems no reason why the soldier-farmers should be pinched as they were last time.

No scheme which deals with human beings will ever work perfectly, and there can be no doubt that Mr. Mackenzie's plan would have its proportion of failures. And of course all such plans hang upon the circumstances under which we gain the victory. But without the ability to see into the future it seems as good a plan as can be evolved now, and if circumstances demand, it can be altered after the war. Meanwhile it serves as a skeleton, and is better than no plan at all.

No C.N.E. For Duration

After sixty-three years of regular appearance the Canadian National Exhibition will be missing this year. Its buildings and grounds are being used by the armed forces and to remove these for the two weeks of the Fair and for the time taken in preparing for it would mean a great deal of avoidable disturbance and loss of training. Therefore the directors of the C.N.E. have decided not to hold the exhibition this year, and probably not again until times of peace. Canadians everywhere will recognize the sensible and loyal nature of their action.

But we shall miss the Fair, all the same. It was the greatest annual show of its kind on earth, and we were very proud of it. Over the years it took on a special atmosphere, a curious aura, so that a Canadian who was blindfolded and whisked round the world several times by a djinn would know at once if he were set down in the Exhibition grounds, even before his blindfold was removed. It might be the smell of pink wool taffy, or it might be the sound of three bands playing at once, or it might be the sound of voices agreeing to meet at the Fountain which would tell him where he was, but certainly he would know.

The C.N.E. had a pleasant quality of being always different while remaining essentially the same. The Motor Show, the Industries Building, the Midway, the Grandstand Show—they varied a little from year to year, but not very much; particularly was this true of the Grandstand Show which made no noticeable progress in twenty years and became rather a bore in consequence. The directors apparently felt that pageantry stood still while industry marched on. The Horticultural Show was always a delight and the exhibitions of prize farm animals remained, very properly, one of the best things in the whole C.N.E. There was something at the "Ex" for everybody, the artist, the farmer and the business man, and not the least entertaining part of the fair was the crowd which attended it.

But we are not singing a dirge for the C.N.E. It will rise again, and better than before. The pause will give those responsible for it an opportunity to revise the plan of the Exhibition somewhat, cutting off dead branches here and there and encouraging new growth. Our Victory Exhibition should be a splendid one, and all the better and all the more appreciated for the sacrifice which the C.N.E. makes now in order to help us win the war.

What Of The French Fleet?

Now that Pierre Laval is in the saddle at Vichy, with Darlan as his right-hand man, the problem of the French Fleet is again exercising the news analysts. At present the superiority of the United Nations over the Axis on the sea is a slim one, and if Germany were to be given the French Fleet our situation would be dangerous indeed. The best comment which we have seen on this subject is that of Hanson W. Baldwin, in the New York Times; he feels that although the problem is a real one it would involve considerable expenditure of time and trouble for Germany to take over the French ships as they are at present.

Although Laval is now the most powerful figure in France and an out-and-out collaborator it is unlikely that he would be able to hand over the fleet if he were seriously opposed by Petain and Darlan. The latter does not want the fleet to escape his direct influence and the former still has scruples about handing over so valuable a property. And if the Germans did get the fleet they would be faced with the ticklish business of manning it with sailors who would be faithful to them. It is not unlikely that French sailors would get themselves in United Nations' ports if they should put out to sea alone, and the Germans could hardly spare the time to man the French ships with German sailors who were unaccustomed to the difference equipment and fighting gear. A compromise, with German officers and French sailors, would be the quickest way of putting the fleet into action, but it could hardly be expected to work smoothly; battleships do not fight well when the men are the virtual prisoners and slaves of the officers.

There is the further complication that the French fleet is scattered and that most of it would need reconditioning before it could be used. The Richelieu is at Dakar, and the Jean Bart is at Casablanca; the Dunkerque and the Strasbourg are at Toulon, as is the older Provence; the aircraft carrier Bearn is at Martinique and other ships are scattered abroad at Gaudalupe, Oran and Bizerta. Months of inactivity will not have improved the morale of the crews, who would scarcely be overjoyed by the prospect of taking up the fight again—this time on the other side.

The danger which is implicit in the French Fleet is real, but the Axis difficulties in putting it to use are real too. Germany must get the fleet diplomatically if she can; a snatch would imperil its usefulness and the whole French situation, which is bad enough now. All that we can do is wait and see, and hope that the persuasions of Admiral Leahy may prove stronger than those of Hitler.

Maintaining Discipline In School

An interesting and rather unusual case was tried recently in the magistrate's court in Ridgetown, when a father brought an action for assault against the principal of the public school who had strapped his son. The magistrate ruled that the boy deserved the punishment, that discipline had to be maintained in schools, and that parents should help teachers in this work; he dismissed the case.

If the magistrate had allowed the charge against the principal a difficult situation would have arisen, as the principal would have lost face in the eyes of his pupils and would not have been in a position to punish any child again without first asking the consent of the child's parents. Such a situation is ridiculous and bad for discipline, and discipline must be present in a school before anything can be taught. Discipline does not mean the perpetual doling out of punishment; it is, rather, a system of good conduct agreeable to pupils and teachers, with the understanding that serious violations of the code will be punished with corresponding severity. Children understand this system and accept it, as a usual thing; the majority of children go all through school without ever incurring severe punishment, not because they fear it but because they realize that good behavior is simpler and more comfortable than bad behavior.

Public school pupils are punished by strapping on the hands, and no one can say that this is brutal or dangerous; when we went to school the punishment for grave misconduct was a caning on the appropriate spot, which was more humiliating and painful than a strap can ever be. Teachers must be permitted to resort to the strap when they think it necessary; moral suasion and argument can go only so far, and after that point has been passed there must be physical punishment or the teacher must lose face. The number of teachers who use the strap unwisely, we venture to say, is very small, and where they appear the School Board is the proper court of appeal, rather than the civil authorities.

We cannot understand why anyone should be expected to control large groups of children without occasional resort to physical punishment; the civil authorities do not attempt to rule adults without fines and imprisonments and the situations are analogous. Nobody likes punishing children, but often it is the shortest and cleanest way out of a difficulty, and it clears the air amazingly. A teacher, as a rule, tries to be as polite and friendly as her situation allows, for this is the easiest and pleasantest way for herself, but unless she is in a position to make a show of power now and again she is, like it or not, at the mercy of her pupils.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is wrong to say that Germany has had no Spring Offensive. What else can you call what happened to Vichy?

Says the Vancouver Sun: "Women spent nearly a billion dollars for hosiery last year—and many got a run for their money."

The Edmonton Journal has a suggestion for a name to suit this war. It says: "Why not be done with it and call it the Japanazi war? The little 'i' in the middle could stand for Italy and Mussolini."

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has ruled that parcels valued at less than a dollar must be carried by the purchaser. Even a dollar's worth of bricks?

THE UNCONQUERABLE

In Spring there come the daffodils,
Gold flocks between the trees,
Where pale blue mist blows smokily;
And who shall vanquish these?

Ah, well we love the nightingale;
His flute runs high and sweet
In moonlight at the edge of dark,
He shall not know defeat.

In russet autumn solitudes
Warm arches hold the sun;
On gentle slopes of forest lawn
The little rabbits run.

Along the ringing frosty lane
The holly berries shine
In scarlet, joyous bravery,
And these shall be a sign—

Brave, unforgotten, happy things!
Dear loves of field and bough,
Think you our English hearts and hands
Could ever fail you now?

Frenchmen Hate Their Betrayers

THE strongest feeling among the French people was to be expected against the shoving of Marshal Petain into the background and giving Pierre Laval control of the government. The change was forced by the Nazis and they knew exactly how it would be received. Hence the appointment of a German military supervisor over unoccupied as well as occupied France, at the same time that Laval was made civil supervisor for the whole country. This is the iron fist and the threat of of merciless suppression of any revolt against complete Nazi control.

Already there have been violent demonstrations in Paris against Laval who hopes to profit by being the willing tool of the conquerors of France. The feeling is sure to grow as the French people see better what the change of government really means, first from the refusal of the United States to have anything more to do with France, and then in the important steps in aid of Germany that the Laval government will undoubtedly take.

"Collaboration" has had no attraction whatever for the great majority of the French, and now they will think only of their liberation and pray that the United Nations will win an early victory.

THE aged Marshal Petain has been held in the highest respect, amounting to veneration, by most of the French people, and they have had nothing but hatred for false leaders like Laval and Darlan who were playing into the hands of the Nazis and betraying their country. The state of feeling in unoccupied France before the present change, is well described by Frank Koster, a refugee journalist, who reached this side of the Atlantic a few weeks ago and whose story is given by the Overseas News Agency. There has been nothing but superficial co-operation by the French population with the Nazis, he declares.

Collaborations is scarcely more than an empty catchword, he says, a euphemistic designation for a condition under which the French, with suppressed fury, do what they are told by the Germans. Are we to say that the French police official "collaborates" with the German Gestapo? Is the industrialist, who has to surrender his well-guarded trade secrets to the German engineer forced upon him, a "collaborator," or the merchant whose business correspondence is revealed by his own employees to the German command? Would you say that the victim "collaborates" with the gangster who demands his wallet at gun point

In so far as "collaboration" means voluntary co-operation with Germany, there may perhaps be collaborators among the big business men who were originally of a fascist mind and today are making enormous profits out of German orders, while the public suffers. Perhaps there are collaborators among the high-placed officials at Vichy who are lured by the prospect of a speedy success.

THE majority of French officials—to say nothing of the lay population—assist the Nazis only against their will, and miss no opportunity to do them a bad turn, where it can be done without running too great a risk.

Koster's estimate is that the number of "honest" collaborators, the convinced adherents of a Darlan or a Laval, comprise less than 10 per cent of the population of unoccupied France.

He has had conversations in various larger cities, in Marseille, Toulouse, Lyon, Limoges, Nice, Cannes, Nimes, Avignon, Orange, Valence, Roanne, Montaubon, and in Vichy itself with instructors, college professors, lawyers, tax officials, officers, soldiers, sailors, retail merchants, warehouse owners, factory workers, hotel men and waiters.

In all of this multitude of people he did not find a single one who did not desire with his whole heart to see Germany defeated, not one who saw anything in the Germans but the foe and oppressor of his native land.

On the other hand, he did meet a great number of persons who, for opportunist reasons or otherwise, had "rallied" to the "Legion des Anciens Combattants" (Petain's Restored Veterans' Legion), or in some other way had shown their adherence to the Vichy regime. But only rarely did anyone indicate a totalitarian preference. The majority of Frenchmen have remained, as ever, individualistic, democratic and tolerant.

SENTIMENT toward Marshal Petain is divided. Most of the population still nourishes a deep-seated esteem for him. The supporters of Petain are convinced that the Marshal has entered into negotiation with the enemy only for the sake of the two principal concerns of the average Frenchman: first, reconstruction, and secondly, bringing home the prisoners of war. They explain all of his concessions to the Germans in terms of these negotiations.

The hatred of the French bourgeoisie, peasantry and workers is greater toward the Darlan group than toward the Germans themselves.—Winnipeg Free Press.

• Each Hour Vital In Burma

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 24 (AP)—The wet monsoon is drawing inexorably close in Burma, heartening United Nations forces defending the road to Mandalay against desperate Japanese efforts to break through before the rains come.

Every hour gained by British or Chinese troops, now apparently holding much of a 150-mile front from the Irrawaddy to the Salween, is of vital consequence. Within three weeks or less, the monsoon change will render Lower Burma, through which Japanese supply lines run, a sea of mud.

That it will wash out the force of the attack is inevitable, even though the rains in the fighting zones fall less torrentially than in the lower valleys of the Irrawaddy and Sittang. For it is up those valleys from Rangoon that all roads to Mandalay run.

ENCOURAGING REPORT

Japan has staked much on breaking through to Mandalay, or at least to the upper oil fields of the Irrawaddy southwest of Mandalay, before the rains. Once the weather breaks, the air odds against the defenders will cease to be a controlling factor. And without that advantage Japanese chances of mopping up before adequate reinforcements can be mustered will be slight.

Chungking's report that the Chinese troops not only have cleared Yenangyaung of the foe but driven him back some miles down the Irrawaddy is highly encouraging. That Japanese flanking attack up the Irrawaddy which forced the British forces to destroy the oil fields of which Yenangyaung is the centre appears the most dangerous.

The British forces have fallen back behind the Pinchaung river just north of Yenangyaung to organize a new defense front. They also have withdrawn from Taungdwingyi, but guard the Bay of Bengal flank from any Japanese sea-borne thrust to turn the Burma front from the west.

There is increasing evidence that British and possibly American air and naval power is being mustered in India and the Indian Ocean to balk either that or Japanese attempts at direct invasion of mainland India.

BALK FOE IN CENTRE

It is upon the Chinese troops that the fate of the road to Mandalay rests. They appear to be holding the crucial sectors of the southern front from the Irrawaddy to the Salween.

Rangoon-Mandalay railroad runs up the Sittang. The Chinese have put up a step-by-step resistance there that so far has balked the foe in the centre and forced him to attempt extended flanking operations both eastward along the Salween and westward up the Irrawaddy.

Chinese forces on the Salween at Loikaw are said by Chungking to have fallen back because of a turning movement north of them. That is the least dangerous of the five Japanese attacks, however. North of Loikaw lie some of the most rugged mountains of Burma. They offer many successive defense positions to Chinese troops well adapted to that type of fighting. They also minimize the Japanese advantage in air power and mechanized equipment.

The east flank also offers the greatest communication and supply difficulties to the foe. It will be first to feel the effects of the rains when they come, and unquestionably the strategy of the Chinese and their allies and advisers is to fall back as necessary on the Salween, while greater efforts are concentrated on holding the Sittang front and bolstering the hard-pressed British front on the Irrawaddy.

• Essential Quinine

THE Countess of Chinchon, wife of Don Luis Geronimo Fernandez de Cabrera Bobadilla y Mendoza, Viceroy of Peru, was seized by an intermittent fever in the year 1638. Her physician treated her with medicine made from the bark of a tree that bore pinkish flowers, grew on the Andean slopes and was known among Indians and Jesuits for curative properties. The countess recovered and thereafter always had on hand a supply of the healing bark. She brought some to Spain in 1640; through her the world is said to have learned about it. A century later Linnaeus, with a bit of misspelling, gave the name Cinchona to the bark and the tree from which quinine, the specific for malaria, is derived.

After 1820, when French chemists first isolated the bitter white crystalline drug from the bark, the Andean slopes were stripped of Cinchona, the price of quinine soared to $20 an ounce. In the Eighteen Fifties the shrewd merchants of Holland went after the lucrative trade. They shipped Cinchona seedlings to Java, where the altitude, temperature, heavy rains and volcanic soil were similar to those of Peru's highlands The tree flourished in its new home until it inhabited 70,000 acres of plantations and supplied 90 per cent of the 36,000,000 ounces of quinine that the world consumed each year.

The Japanese conquest of Java has cut the Allied nations from their tremendously important sources of quinine. Without the drug, or an effective replacement, it would be hazardous to send troops into jungles or tropic lowlands not only of the Orient but of American and African equatorial zones. Last week, among many other problems, Washington gave thought ot the United States supply of quinine. It was disclosed that 500,000 ounces of quinine, part of a 2,000,000-ounce order placed by the WPB, had been lost at sea in the Pacific war. Although stocks at hand were held to be sufficient for two years (the nation uses 3,500,000 ounces of quinine annually), moves were under way to assure adequate reserves.

For one thing, the need to conserve the drug for the armed forces will probably lead to curtailment of its use in civilian hair tonics and cold remedies. The cultivation of higher-yielding Cinchona trees in Latin America is being pressed. Perhaps most promising is expansion of production of synthetic quinine. — New York Times.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY

AT a time when the birthrate—so at least we are often told—is kept down by economic pressure, there is encouragement in one example that has just reached me of the effect of the application of income tax to wage earners. One of the more highly-paid workers in a large factory, with a family of six or seven children, inquired searchingly of the cashier how the various exemptions would affect him, and, on the strength of information regarding allowances for children, went straight home and, according to his own account, "said to the wife, 'Look here, we've got to have two more kids.'"—London Spectator.

The time is coming when we shall not live out of tin cans. In fact, an exchange predicts, there may come a day when a bride who can cook will be forced to admit it

TOBACCO'S MASTERPIECE.

The cigar is Tobacco's masterpiece. Cigarettes are playthings. Pipes are honest yeomen. But the cigar has nobility. It adds a look of opulence to a Birkenhead, of confidence to a Churchill, of independence to Uncle Sam. It appeals to all these senses—its shape to the eyes; its flavor to the taste; its aroma to the smell; its crackle to the ear; its smoothness to the touch. Peace to its unknown inventor.—Manchester Guardian.

My Turn Next

Two cyclists pulled up for the night at a hotel.

"Well, I think," said the host, "that you'll have a comfortable night. It's a feather bed."

At two o'clock in the morning one of the cyclists roused his companion.

"Change places with me, Dick," he groaned; "it's my turn to lie on the feather."

NAME FOR NEW SUBURB

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The designation "Burnham's Point," by which the new suburb on the shore of Little Lake is commonly known, makes for convenience, when our citizens wish to speak of that locality. The name "Eastgate" was I believe given to the suburb commonly known as "Downer's Corners," but the old name still survives.

Now we have a new suburb on the northwest limit, and it is important that this also should have a distinguishing name. I would suggest "Parkside," "Parkview," or "Kingsway"; the latter as a compliment to our premier, under whose aegis it has been built. Others may have suggestions to make; but the important thing is that it should have a name.

LAKEFIELD

Sedan Scorched; C.W.L. Returns All '41 Officers

LAKEFIELD, April 24.—(ENS).—Fire starting apparently from an unnoticed cigaret butt partly destroyed the front seat and interior of a light sedan owned by George Pearson Thursday evening.

Firemen using chemical extinguishers quickly doused the blade. The machine was parked in a lot just off Queen street.

Annual C.W.L. Session.

The Catholic Women's League of Lakefield re-elected their slate of officers at the annual meeting in the Parish Hall Wednesday night as follows: President, Miss Emma Kennedy; past president, Mrs G. Charton; vice-pres., Mrs. J. Hayes; recording secretary, Mrs. P. White; treasurer, Mrs. J. Sabatino; counsellors, Mrs M. Allin, Miss L. Garvey and Mrs. J. Delladone.

The annual report and treasurer's report showed a very successful year. National obligations had all been met, as well as the diocesan tax.

The national project of the year was aid to merchant marine, and a well filled ditty bag was sent to Montreal Sailors' Club and was given to a sailor from Liverpool named William Towers.

Reports on Study Club by Mrs. Charlton and magazine by Miss M. Fortier showed that this particular work was not neglected. In the work of religion days of prayer with attendance at mass, a donation to the burning of the sanctuary lamp, Christmas and Easter offerings and flowers for the altar were some of the help given.

Deny Hun Crews Now In Toulon

VICHY, April 24—(AP). — The naval government issued a denial to-day of reports attributed to the Moscow radio that German sailors are arriving at the French Mediterranean naval base of Toulon and that French naval units are being turned over to Germany.

"The most formal denial is given to this news which, like so many other reports, falls in the realm of pure imagination and which would merit no comment if they had not received a complacent echo on other foreign radios."

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, April 25

While there may be much high pressure and energy expended in the direction of major objectives and cherished ambitions on this day yet it may be well to be armed with resolution, perseverance, decisive action and plans in order to cope with obstacles, delays and determined opposition, from elders, strangers, females and possibly from the public or other organized group or corporate body. Tact, compromise and diplomacy may win out again stubborn, malicious antagonisms.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves unusually active and energetic in the attainment of important objectives or much desired ambitions, during the year, but they should be fortified by resolution, perseverance and practical and constructive programs and methods in order to overcome determined opposition and delays and obstacles, coming from old persons or institutions, from strange sources or from feminine antagonism. Tre public, or other groups, may withhold co-operation, but there should be influential friends ready to assist.

A child born on this day should be energetic, ambitions, constructive, bold and determined, which it may need to overcome obstacles.

Blaze Damages Hotel Rooms At Northbrook

TWEED, April 24—(ENS).—Fire threatened to destroy the hotel at Northbrook, and had it not been for the help of willing neighbours, it would have burned to the ground. Starting from unknown origin in the bed rooms, the flamees gutted the bed rooms, the flames gutted building.

The volunteer brigade quickly cut holes in the roof and with fire extinguishers they were successful in bringing it under control. There was a strong wind blowing at the time and had it gained headway, the fire would have threatened adjacent buildings as well.

The loss was mostly confined to the contents of two upstairs rooms. Mr. and Mrs. George McNeil are the proprietors of the establishment.

Daniel Kellar of the township of Elzevir, residing near Actinolite was taken into custody by Chief J. C. It was feared thtat if not locked up, he would take the lives of his family. He appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in court on Thursday afternoon and was remanded in the county goal at Belleville pending an investigation.

Allied Raiders Shoot Up Japs At Rabaul

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS, Australia, April 24.—(CP)—Allied planes continued their almost daily attacks on Rabaul, New Britain, by blasting shipping, barracks and warehouses at that Japanese base again yesterday, United Nations Headquarters announced today.

The raiders swooped low to machine-gun Japanese forces on the ground, a communique said.

The bulletin said the Japanese made three bombing attacks yesterday on Port Moresby, New Guinea. Damage was negligible.

Eight bombers, escorted by fighters, participated in the first raid on Port Moresby about 10 a.m., the communique said. The second attack, an hour and one-half later, was carried out by three fighters and the third, in mid-afternoon, by two fighters.

Four Japanese Zero fighters attempted to intercept the Allied raiders which attacked Rabaul, but failed to divert them from the target, the bulletin added.

Reporting on the situation in the Philippines, headquarters announced that Japanese infantry, reinforced by artillery and tanks, had effected new landings at Iloilo, Capiz and Antique in the Visayan group.

"Our forces are still engaged in delaying action," the communique said.

Fort Still Under Fire.

Corregidor fortress was reported under intermittent fire from Japanese batteries, to which it was replying with its big guns. Sporadic patrol action is continuing in Mindanao, headquarters said.

A senior United States air authority, meanwhile, announced that many types of American aircraft now are being employed in Australia. These, he said, include both medium and heavy bombers, fighters, transports and photographic and observation planes, providing the nucleus of a well-balanced striking force.

The ground crew situation was described as satisfactory and it was said great strides had been made in airdrome construction and equipment.

Morale is high, and the men are well trained and "ready to go," the authority said.

WAR WRECKS THEORY THAT WOMEN' SPLACE IS IN HOME.

Doubtless Future Families Will Be Reared in Communal Houses

Whatever else this war does, it is going to change vitally the lives of women. It has made a new Heaven and a new earth for them, and nothing about them will ever be the same again. It has so completely wrecked all of the age old theories about women's sacred sphere, and women's limitations, and women's frailness that it almost seems as if a new species of fauna had been evolved.

Gone forever are the clinging vines and the timid dears who went if you said boo to them, and the helpless girl babies who never had strength enough to stand alone. In their place we have feminine dare devils who fly the oceans solo; sturdy debutanees who drive trucks and ambulances through blackouts; skilled women machinists and munition makers. Nobody now talks about women's place being in the home. It is being in the factory, and on the farm, and running the canteen ,and ministering to the wounded in hospitls, and wherever else she is needed in the defence of her country.

The war, God grant, will one day be over, and what this new world that we have bought at such a price of blood and tears and agony will be, we cannot even faintly imagine. But it is folly to think that women who had been living a life of thrilling adventure and doing their part in big enterprises will be content to spend their days in little cottages or flats and take up their knitting where their laid it down. The woman who has made precision tools will find it piddling work to measure out the ingredients of a cupcake. The woman who has handled hundreds of thousands of dollars of relief funds, without misplacing a penny, isn't going to be interested in running a ten-dollar-a-week budget.

In a way this happens with nearly every woman who has been a wage-earner before her marriage. Rarely is one ever contented with domesticity. She misses the pleasure of dolling herself up in the morning and going downtown to her job. She pines for the excitement of working in a group, with its gossip, its coming and going of new faces, hearing new things, having different things happening all the time. Above all, she misses her pay envelope and having money of her own that she can spend without giving an account of it to her husband.

Women's Ability Recognized

And this discontent with home life will be intensified a hundredfold in the women who have been through the war, for the war has made them realize for the first time their ability to do work that they have always thought was the exclusive prerogative of men. No longer are they doomed to the kitchen and the sewing room. No longer do they have to join the overcrowded ranks of the salesgirls and stenographers. Every door of opportunity has been opened to them, and they can walk through it to the high-priced jobs.

So just as the old ditty asked: "How Are You Going to Keep the Boys on the Farm When They Have Been to Gay Paree" that we sang after the other war, after this war the question will be: How are you going to keep wives in the kitchen slaving over cook stoves and wash tubs when they can get union hours and the wages of welders? And nobody has ever found out a way to do either one.

Of course, the fundamental passion of every women's heart is for love and marriage. Nothing is ever going to change that. But the old domestic picture of the husband bringing home the bacon and the wife frying it will have to be altered when a girl will no more think of giving up her job when she marries than a man does.

Family Life In The Picture

The vine-wreathed cottage will have to go into the discard when women find out that they cannot be efficient business women and crackerjack cooks at the same time, so doubtless the family of the future will live in family hotels or communal boarding houses where they will be much better fed and taken care of than they would be in a private home in which an overworked woman warmed up something out of a paper bag and a can and called it dinner. Also, there will be creches in which babies can be parked while Mama is negotiating loans at a bank, or helping to design an airplane. And there will be child-specialists to bring up little Johnny and Susie in they way they should go.

Of course, you may say that this altered plan of domestic life would never work, but a lot of us said the same thing about apartment houses when the first commenced building them, and now we live in them and like them. And it will be the same way with the new woman we will have with us after the war.

Arthur Hays Sulzaberger, president and publisher of the New York Times, was elected second vice-president, becoming the first New York City published to serve as an officer or director of the Associated Press since the death of Adolph S. The directors re-elected Kent Cooper, Associated Press general manager, secretary; Lloyd Stratton, assistant general manager, assistant secretary; L. F. Curtis, treasurer, and Alan J. Gould, executive assistant, as assistant treasurer.

Failing to get the necessary four-fifth of the votes cast, a proposed amendment to the by-law was defeated which would have permitted members to publish the news report outside their defined hours of publication. The vote was 519 for, 254 against.

The proposed amendment also would have given afternoon member newspapers which now have no Sunday membership the opportunity to publish a Sunday edition carrying the Associated Press report.

Scates and Major L. I. Johnston and Lieut. W. A. Bowerman of the Military Training Centre.

Other guests included members of the city council and the Kinsmen. It was a representative gathering in honor of a championship squad that had won general admiration for their fine playing and sportsmanlike conduct during the past season.

Enjoyable Entertainment

Entertainment was provided by Charles Colville who led in community singing and provided accordion accompaniment and afterward contributed some entertaining sleight of hand tricks and a clever bit of ventriloquism. Arthur Heal and Murray Burnett were heard in solo numbers that were appreciated.

After the toast to the King had been honored Chairman Adam Sands welcomed the O.H.A. representatives and the members of the hockey team and introduced the guests at the head table. Lionel Conacher, he said, was one of the notables who had been invited but he had been unable to come.

Speaking for the Kinsmen Howard Shimer thanked the players and officers of the hockey club for their co-operation in making the Milk for Britain benefit game with the Marlboro juniors a success. "The players not only willingly played but they relinquished their usual passes and bought tickets for their friends," said Mr. Shimer. "The rink was given to us practically for nothing. It was a great piece of co-operation. A thousand thanks from the Kinsmen."

Certificates Presented

In presenting war savings certificates from the city council Mayor James Hamilton referred to the presence of the O.H.A. dignitaries and paid a tribute to the work they had done for hockey.

"We are glad to come here tonight," said Mayor Hamilton, "to pay tribute to the members of the hockey team whose sportsmanship we have admired all winter. We thank them for the entertainment they have provided and feel that they were a real acquisition."

His Worship then presented war savings certificates to Coach Jim Ellis, Players Ray Harding, Johnny Johnston, Johnny Godfrey, Les Burton, Don Crowe, Frank Jopling, Harry 'Bun' Kingdon, Bob 'Honey' Tompkins, Art Heal, Perce Nichols, Dinny Reilly, Joe Blewett, Bruce Bennett, Eddie Starr, Bob Parnall, Doug Mortimer and Joe Rochetta and Trainers Keith Mein and Phil Campanaro. Ray Harding, who is on holidays, was the only absentee.

The Championship Trophy

President Ross Clemens, Hamilton, presented the Ontario Hockey Association trophy, emblematic of the senior B championship to the club, Major L. I. Johnston receiving the trophy in behalf of Lieut.-Col. Keeler, who was unavoidably absent.

Commenting on the presence of two Peterborough past presidents of the Ontario body Mr. Clemens said that Messrs. Glover and Bond stood ace high with the O.H.A. He congratulatd the city council upon the presentation of war saving certificates. "It is a very fine gesture," he said, "and the first time I have heard of that form of presentation.

President Clemens, commenting on the success of the Milk for Britain benefit game held here said that the $593 raised at that game had put Peterborough at the top of the list for war work donations from hockey teams.

"What about the future of hockey?" asked the speaker. "It is a big question mark. Registrations with the Canadian Hockey Association two years ago numbered 25,000. This year they were 13,000. That means that 48 per cent of our former players are in the armed forces, in the air, on the sea and in the army. We take off our hats to them."

"Winning a championship," President Clemens said to the Peterborough players means that you were tops in your division, and means that you have to be good."

In acknowledging the presentation Major Johnston expressed Col. Keeler's regret that he could not be present and thanked the O.H.A. officials for their presence. He congratulated the players upon the fine hockey they had played and the courage they had shown during the season. "They took what was handed out and went out after goals," was the speaker's tribute.

Secretary Hewitt Introduced

Frank Buckland, former Peterborough coach, introduced Secretary W. A. Hewitt, who presented the O.H.A. medals to the players of the championship team. In his introduction Mr. Buckland paid an eloquent tribute to the long years of service Secretary Hewitt had given to the cause of hockey, declaring that more than any other man in Ontario the O.H.A. secretary has made a notable contribution to the

Some light on the hockey outlook for next season was given by Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O.H.A. at the banquet in honor of the Peterborough team, O.H.A. senior B champions here last night. The veteran official said every effort would be made to keep the game going next winter but he intimated that it was not expected that many civilian players who were militarily fit would be found playing hockey when the next season comes around. The teams were to be cut to ten men a side, reducing the number of subs to four and that would help many centres to ice teams. Secretary Hewitt pointed out that there would be many players available who would be unable to pass the medical tests for active service and others engaged in key war work. In addition of course there will be many more military teams than was the case during the past winter and by cutting down playoffs and shortening schedules the Ontario Hockey Association hopes to carry on. Incidentally President R. M. Glover of the Peterborough Hockey Club intimated that so far as this city is concerned every effort will be made to keep hockey alive next winter.

Last night's banquet, a very enjoyable affair, was a fitting windup to a most successful season. The presence of such outstanding hockey dignitaries as President Ross Clemens of Hamilton, Secretary W. A. Hewitt, that fine old sportsman P. J. Mulqueen, life member of the Ontario Hockey Association, that other perennial hockey leader Past President Jim Sutherland of Kingston, and the always popular Dick Butler of Lindsay, also a past president was a fine recognition from the hockey powers-that-be of the achievement of the Petes in winning the senior B championship. That the local team is deserving of such a tribute no one will deny. They played fast, clever and pleasing hockey all winter, had a wonderful record as a road team and were a fine advertisement for their home city not only because of their splendid work on the ice but by their behavior elsewhere. They earned all the nice things that were said of them last night.

* * * * * *

A pleasing feature was the presentation of a club bag by the players to the popular coach of the team, Jim Ellis. A former Peterborough player the pilot of the Petes has done a great job this winter. He used the material he had to the best advantage, had the team working as a unit, with oodles of team spirit and fight, and in the smooth cohesion of their playing the Petes had the edge on every team they encountered all season. The presentation last night undoubtedly pleased the young pilot of the 1941-42 senior B champions. But we have an idea that what pleased him even more was the tribute voiced by Captain Johnny Godfrey when he said "There wasn't a man on the team who wouldn't play his heart out for Jim Ellis." That is the kind of recognition that makes sport worth while and it can be seen the spirit that carried the Petes through to an Ontario title.

Not Doing So Well

Boston Red Sox pitchers who started out in championship style are not doing so well on their second time out, Newsome being the only Sox twirler so far to come through with two wins. Joe Dobson blew his second start the other day when he was batted out of the box by Washington and yesterday the Senators were equally tough on Yank Terry. The former San Diego right-hander stopped the Yanks with three hits in his opening game but yesterday he failed to go the route. Boston were beaten 10 to 5 but the trouble was not all in the pitching for the Croninites had no fewer than six misplays. As a result of that defeat and the Yanks' 6 to 4 win over the A's, the New York club is back at the top of the heap and the American League standing looks more natural. The Yanks used Borowy and Liddell in taking the measure of the Athletics. Knott pitched for the losers and held the McCarthy clan to eight hits but the Philadelphia defence was on par with that of Boston, the A's kicking in with six boots.

* * * * * *

Feature pitching performance of yesterday was contributed by Hal White, former Buffalo Bison. Twirling for Detroit Tigers against Chicago and pitted against the White Sox Sunday pitcher Ted Lyons, White scored his second successive shutout and has yet to be scored on. The ex-Bison held Pale Hose to five scattered hits. In the other American League game Cleveland Indians, with Jim Bagby grabbing off his second win had an easy time beating St. Louis 9 to 2. Auker was the losing pitcher. Meanwhile in the National loop Brooklyn keeps on rolling. The Daffyness Boys again triumphed over Boston Braves 9 to 5 with Kimball getting credit for the win, although he had to be helped out by Larry French and Casey. Pete Reiser came through with a homer to help the Bums on their way. Brooklyn are out in front and showing every indication that they intend to stay there.

Church League Organized

Softball activity is beginning to show. The other day President Scates of the Peterborough Softball League announced that there would be a meeting of his organization on Monday night to talk over plans for the season and get organized. Now Reg Kingdon of the Church League comes up with the notice that his organization will also meet Mnoday night at 7 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. and that all clubs interested are asked to send delegates. The Church loop has provided an opportunity for younger players to learn and play softball bridging the gap between the school age group and the senior loop. While some of the divisions did not fill very well last season, the league had a fairly good year and it is hoped that the entries for the coming campaign will be better than a year ago. Much of course will depend upon the success of Monday's meeting.

Secretary Bill Hewitt of the O.H.A. and the C.A.H.A. referring here last evening to tomorrow night's Allan Cup final between Port Arthur Bearcats and Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers, predicted there would be a sellout for the battle. The veteran secretary was inclined to believe that the Flyers would take it all in the final tussle, declaring that he thought they had too much power for the boys from the lakehead. In Wednesday's game he said the Flyers roared in repeatedly and the Bearcats were hard pressed to keep them from sewing up the game in the final stages. Both clubs, according to Toronto stories, are confident of victory. As for the bull ring it has installed the Flyers as 17 to 10 favorites. That does not necessarily mean anything for the boys in the ring have often been wrong. They were Wednesday night and may get taken for another ride tomorrow.

The defense seems to need jerking up....James T. Somebody Slipped

DES MOINES, Ia., April 24—(AP)—This may be the prelude to a future story about an absent-minded professor who paid his income tax to the dog catcher and hung a dog license around the tax collector's neck. The Iowa income tax division reported it received a money order from a taxpayer who sent along an affidavit showing he paid his dog license fee instead of a filled-out income tax blank.

Dominoes Oust Andies By 46-36

WINNIPEG, April 24—(CP).—The 1942 Victoria Dominoes, rated a greater quintet than their clubs that won the Dominion basketball championship in 1933, '36 and '39, leave here today for Montreal and a best-of-five national final series against Montreal Oilers.

Manager Dave Nicol and his players expressed confidence they would return with the "Sportsman's Cup."

Dominoes advanced to the final by trimming Winnipeg St. Andrews 46-34 here last night to take the best-of-three western series 2-1.

Art and Chuck Chapman, both members of the pervious Dominion championship teams, Norm Baker, former Washington State University star, Jack Mottishaw and Dave Nicol displayed canny shooting accuracy and passing to take the opener 43-39.

After dropping the second game by the same score Art Chapman piled up what is believed to be a Canadian playoff individual scoring record last night, getting 26 of his team's points.

List Peterboro In Zone 13 Of Proposed Plan

THAMESVILLE, Ont., April 24—(CP).—The Ontario Baseball Association's request for an affiliation with the Western Counties Baseball Association this season was rejected temporarily at the W.C.B.A.'s annual meeting here last night.

President Jim Millman of Chatham, Ont., said wartime transportation difficulties made affiliation with the O.B.A. impossible. The W.C.B.A., however, received and tabled a six-year baseball expansion plan suggested by O.B.A. president W. G. Ward of Niagara Falls, Ont., in which Mr Ward asked that the two organizations "forget past differences." Mr. Ward added he was holding open an executive seat on the O.B.A. for a W.C.B.A. nominee, providing the W.C.B.A. agreed to affiliate.

The suggested expansion plan to embrace every section of the province is practically the same as the zoning system which was suggested at the O.B.A. 1941 Spring meeting and rejected. The plan calls for 14 zones as follows: 1, Essex, Kent, Lambton; 2, Huron, Perth; 3, Bruce, Grey; 4, Simcoe, Muskoka, Haliburton, Parry Saund; 5, Elgin, Middlesex; 6, Oxford, Brantford; 7, Wellington, Waterloo; 8, Norfolk, Haldimand; 9, Wentworth, Hamiton; 10, Halton, Peel, Dufferin; 11, Lincoln, Welland; 12, York, Toronto; 13, Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Northumberland, Peterborough; 14, Hastings, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac.

New Frick Ruling Not Popular With Umpires

NEW YORK, April 23—(AP).—Ford Frick's ruling that National League managers must refrain from telling the plate umpire that he couldn't tell a ball from a strike if one of them came wrapped in red ribbon may be tougher on the umpires than it is on the managers.

The fuming pilots quickly found a way to exercise their right of free speech without breaking any Frick-made laws, and the method is one calculated to make their natural enemies, the umpires, paw the air in futile rage.

Here's How It Works

The system is simple. It works something like this:

Say Leo Durocher, as is his wont, is accurately calling balls and strikes from his vantage point in the dugout. He's at right angles to the place, but that's no drawback. A good bench umpire looks in curves, anyway, so his eyes are always in the ball's line of flight. Sort of a visual ventriloquist.

If Hugh Casey is pitching, and Leo's wandering eyesight tells him the umpire is calling them by the wrong names, Leo bounces out of the dugout and strides toward the plate. He makes a pert right face just when it seems he is about to stumble over the man in blue, and addresses Casey in a well-modulated voice that can only be heard in the centre-field bleachers. His comment would run something like this.:

"Tough luck, Hugh, that we had to draw a peanut-brained, dough-eared fugitive from a night court to call 'em today. It wouldn't have been so bad if he'd brought his seeing-eye dog along. I know that last pitch cut the plate, but what can you expect from a guy who's so blind he eats the hole and throws away the doughnut? Get in there and do the best you can, even if the fog-bound so-and-so thinks it's against the law to call strikes."

So saying, Leo struts back to the bench, leaving the umpire sputtering but helpless, as Leo said nothing whatever to him, and if the umpire by chance has an idea that he was the subject of Leo's remarks—well, he just shouldn't jump at conclusions, for, of course, Leo wasn't talking about him at all, and where-ever would he get such an idea?

It's More Painful

This indirect approach is more painful to an umpire than a direct verbal blast aimed right through the iron wicket as nothing is more disconcerting than to overhear conversation which you know is about you, but which you can do nothing about.

In addition to getting in telling words—and how he tells 'em—the manager doesn't have to worry about losing decisions, as he invariably did when he used the direct approach. We're still waiting for a player or manager to win a verbal tift with an umpire. The pilots are a thick-skulled lot, who enter baseball and leave it still laboring under the impression thtat they can make an umpire change a verdict, despite the fact history shows an umpire wouldn't change a dollar in an automat if he were starving to death. Right or wrong, they're always right.

We do think Frick's edict is a step in the right direction, as it speeds up the game and eliminates unprofitable arguments. If the fans want to listen to arguments they can go to a debating society. A pilot who leaps from the dugout at every pitch might be called scrappy, but we've got another name for him.

Anyway, the next step is to eliminate the subtle approach. When that's done the managers will be about as anonymous as the No. 6 man in an eight-oar crew. Like Joe McCarthy, for instance, who rates as a pretty fair manager, although the fans don't see him twice a year.

Suggest Cheers For Krauts

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 24—(CP).—Just a timely hint to the 14,000 fans who are expected to sit in at the close of the hockey season here tomorrow night. How about giving the Krauts a few cheers and not so many jeers.

This game between the Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers and Port Arthur Bearcats for possession of the Allan Cup may just possibly be the last time the famed Kitchener trio of Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Porky Dumart will be seen in action together.

Which means it is also a good time to make up in part for the hostile treatment accorded the Krauts by the fans since they began playing amateur hockey with the Flyers after leaving Boston Bruins.

The treatment, in the words of Coach Bill Touhey, has been "vicious" at times. He even suggests the hostility has spread to the officials with the result the players in question have been getting a lot of "cheap" penalties.

Touhey said he thought there there might have been a change when his team played in Toronto Wednesday night and lost a 4-3 decision to the Bearcats.

"But the Krauts were abused as viciously as in other places we appeared," he added.

"Showing Up the Pros"

When the Krauts first showed here in the Allan Cup playdowns against the Hamilton Majors the heavy booing at that time was attributed to the Hamilton supporters. But no such reason could be advanced for the game against Port Arthur.

However, most of the animosity seems to stem from the fact the Krauts were professionals.

"Come on, show the pros up," was the comment of more than one rabid rooter here Wednesday.

None of the three Kitchener players has at any time ever indicated he was playing on his reputation. In fact they've been playing harder—and at longer stretches—than they ever did with the Bruins.

Schmidt, particularly, has been a workhorse in his games with the Flyers, playing both on the forward line and on the defence. Bauer, despite the fact he nursed an injured shoulder, didn't spare himself against the Bearcats.

Both clubs will be at full strength for the final game. Capt. Pickles MacNicholl of the Flyers and Buddy Poile, Bearcat youngster, are expected to be in the lineup. Both were injured slightly on Wednesday.

Generals Head Home After 2-Day Holiday

WINNIPEG, April 24 — (CP). — Oshawa Generals, Eastern Canada junior hockey champions who lost the national final to Portage La Prairie Terriers, headed toward Toronto today to watch Port Arthur Bearcats and Ottawa Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers decide the senior championship Saturday night.

The Generals left last night following a two-day holiday. The O.H.A. Memorial Cup series ended Tuesday night when Terriers rolled to an 8-2 victory in the fourth game of a best-of-five series. Oshawa won the third 8-4 and the Manitobans the other two, 5-1, 8-7.

Macon Swamps Syracuse Chiefs Giving Montreal Royals 4-0 Win

By The Associated Press

Max Macon who a few years ago was regarded as one of the most promising lefthanders in the St. Louis Cardinal organization and who since has played first base and the outfield for Montreal, came back to familiar ground as he shut out the League-leading Syracuse Chiefs 4-0 in yesterday's International League headliner.

The former Card set the leaders down with four hits while his mates made the most of Ben Wade's wildness to put the game on ice early. In addition to giving a masterful performance, Max himself got two hits.

The defeat dropped the Chiefs into a virtual three-way tie with Jersey City and Baltimore.

Rochester Red Wings continued on their losing ways as Newark Bears pounded out a 6-4 victory. The Redwings used four pitchers in a futile effort to stem the Bears' onslaught, with John Clay, who relieved Ira Hutchinson, charged with the loss. Randall Gumpert, although relieved in the sixth received credit for the triumph.

Buffalo Bisons outslugged Jersey City Giants to win their second game of the season 13-10.

Big Mike Naymick allowed one hit, a home run by Frank Coleman in the fourth inning, as Baltimore Orioles won their fifth straight by swamping Toronto Maple Leafs 9-1.

Ed Robinson and Jack Conway led the 10 hit assault on four Leaf pitchers with a home run and a single apiece. Coleman, who accounted for the lone Toronto hit and run, is a former pitcher who turned to gardening last season.

Leonard Breaks Ankle Crimps Senators

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The first serious casualty of the major league baseball season is Emil (Dutch) Leonard of Washington Senators, whose bad luck seems to be going from bad to worse.

The round-faced righthander stumbled while crossing first base after running out a grounder in the second inning of yesterdy's tussle with Boston Red Sox and after he had been carried off the field his injury was found to be a broken ankle.

This means the big fellow who baffled the American League with his knuckle ball for the last couple of years, winning 18 games in 1941, will be out of action for an indefinite length of time and Washington's hopes of struggling toward the top of the second division probably will be out even longer.

The Senators won yesterday 10-5, but the game itself was not a pleasing spectacle—there were 26 hits evenly divided and Boston made six errors to Washington's two—and the net result was nothing short of tragic for the Senators.

The day proved more cheery for Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians, both of whom were as fearful of their pitching in the south as Washington was hopeful.

Hal White, the rookie righthander Detroit brought up from Buffalo, pitched his second straight shutout 9-0 on five hits against Chicago White Sox. The Tigers tore into old Ted Lyons for 16 hits and had things their own way all afternoon.

Browns Fall 9-2.

For Cleveland Jim Bagby, the lean righthander who ascended somewhat doubtfully to the Indians' No. 1 pitching berth vacated by Bob Feller, acquired his third straight victory 9-2 over St. Louis Browns. Bagby gave nine hits but finished strong with a string of six scoreless innings.

New York Yankees were donated a 6-4 decision by Philadelphia Athletics, who outhit the world champions 9-8, but made six errors. The A's made all their runs in a big fifth-inning barrage that shelled Rookie Hank Borowy off the mound. But they went down scoreless in the second after loading the bases and in the ninth Norman (Red) Branch fanned Pinchhitter Mike Kreevich with the bases again loaded and two out. On the other hand Joe Gordon, who seldom fails in a pinch, came through with a single when the Yanks had the bases loaded in the eighth and knocked in two runs for the margin of victory.

Similarly Brooklyn Dodgers were helped to a 9-5 triumph at Boston by three Braves errors and a lot of lax play that didn't show up in the box score. Each team made 10 hits and seven pitchers saws service in the melee.

Cincinnati Reds staged their biggest rally of the year to score five runs in the seventh inning and beat Pittsburg Pirates 5-3. Johnny Vander Meer pitched five-hit ball but until the Reds went on their spree, starting with a double by Bert Haas, they had been held to one hit in six innings by John Lanning.

Lou Novikoff, the big bust of the Chicago Cubs last year, "busted" a sixth-inning home run to decide a pitching duel between Bill Lee and Max Lanier in favor of the Cubs 2-1 over St. Louis Cardinals. Each team made seven hits.

The New York Giants continued their timely hitting to down the Phils 5-2. They made nine hits, two less than the tailenders, but the Giants wasted only two blows outside of scoring innings and three of their safeties were for extra bases.

Bless Me Fades, Shut Out Wins Rich Blue Grass

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 24 — (AP). — Colonel E. R. Bradley's Bless Me virtually faded out of the Kentucky Derby picture yesterday by losing a 3½-length decision to Mrs. Payne Whitney's Shut Out in the $10,000 added Blue Grass Stakes, featured event at Keeneland's spring meeting finale.

The victory helped salve any disappointment Mrs. Whitney experienced when the No. 1 Derby contender from her Greentree Stable, Devil Diver, had to be scratched from the Blue Grass because of a leg injury he suffered on Wednesday night.

His failure to start left only three horses in the race. Hal Price Headley's Equinox never was a contender, finishing 3½ lengths behind Bless Me. Shut Out's time was 1:52 2-5 on a fast track.

Sterling Young Aboard.

Jockey Sterling Young sent Bless Me to the front and held the lead until the last turn on the back stretch, when Eddie Arcaro, aboard Shut Out, beagn moving up. The pair raced head and head to the home stretch, when the Whitney colt shot out in front and it was all over. As Bless Me faded so did his chances of running in the Derby.

The 83-year-old Bradley, sitting in his automobile at the head of the stretch said before the race that unless his colt gave a good performance he was not likely to go to the post in the Churchill Downs Classic on May 2.

A Bradley - sentimental crowd, estimated at 10,000, made Bless Me the favorite, backing him down to 3-5.

Supporters of Snut Out, a son of the famed Equipoise, were rewarded with $4.80 in the $2 mutuels. There was no place or show betting.

Shut Out's performance probably earned him a starting berth in the Derby, particularly if Devil Diver is unable to start. However, Major Louie A. Beard, manager of Greentree Stable, said that barring an infection, Devil Diver probably would be ready to start in the Derby.

Beard said the colt suffered a ragged cut on his left foreleg in his stall, but showed no lameness in a workout yesterday morning. Another workout is planned for Saturday.

The victory netted Greentree $10,042 and was the first time the stable had won this important pre-Derby trial in the eighteen years it has been run.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer.

UEW YORK, April 24.—(AP).— One result of the gas shortage, according to folks who run sporting camps up north, will be increased popularity of canoe camping trips ....And we'll guarantee that if you paddle a canoe a dozen miles against a head wind, lug it and your camp equipment across a couple of portages and sleep on the ground a few nights, you won't need any obstacle courses to toughen you up ....One suggestion for conserving golf balls is for the U.S.G.A. to eliminate Rule 24, which forbids switching balls on the green. That would let duffers hack at old pellets in the rough, then change to a good one for putting....Now will all you guys who ever heard of Rule 24 raise your hands?....For the first time in years, the special train from New York to the Kentucky Derby won't be run this spring.

Shear Nonsense.

In the interests of more colorful sports writing, we quote: Arthur (Red) Patterson, New York Herald Tribune (on Jim Tobin's slow ball): "Something which looked like a cross between a grapefruit and a bean bag, with perhaps a bit of dead cod thrown in."

Alan Ward, Oakland Tribune (on the knocking out of Ernie Nordham, Kansas City heavyweight): "Kansas City beef, heretofore considered the choicest in the land, has taken a terrific drop."

Lou Nova, who now wants a summer scrap with Bob Pastor as a reward for fighting Lee Savold instead of Abe Simon on the Washington Navy relief card, was knocked flat by a right cross delivered by 300-pound Blimp Williams during a recent training tilt on the coast....Lou was so embarrassed that he addressed the 10-cent patrons in the gym: "To think I fought the greatest in the east and this has to happen to me here."....Derby tip (maybe): Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons recently wired Track Superintendent Tom Young at Churchill Downs: "Expect to see roses on Apache Derby Day."....Maybe Jim was just hinting that horses can blush.
